Stopping the "Fire Wagon."

When the first railroad was laid over the western plains and the cars began running to San Francisco the Indians viewed the locomotive from the hilltops at a distance, not daring to come nearer the "fire wagon." A train of cars was to them "heap wagon, no hoss." An Apache chief gathered a party of warriors in Arizona and went several hundred miles to see the terrible fire wagon that whistled louder than the eagle's scream and poured out dense black smoke. W. M. Thayer says in his "Marvels of the New West" that the redskins grew bolder and once attacked a fire wagon, expecting to capture it. When they failed and many were injured they said, "Fire wagon bad medicine!"

The Indians stretched a lariat across the track, breast high, each end being held by thirty braves.

"When the engineer first saw it he didn't know what on earth was the matter," said the narrator, "but in a minute more he burst out laughing. He caught hold of that throttle, and he opened her out.

"He struck that lariat going about forty miles an hour, and he just piled those braves up everlasting promiscuous."

They're All Good.

Burne-Jones, the famous artist, made many sketches for the children of his friend, J. Comyns Carr. He once laughingly proposed to instruct the eldest boy in the principles of anatomy, and there and then made for him two beautiful drawings representing the anatomy of the good man and the good woman, in both of which the heart, magnificently large, winged and backed by spreading flames, is the central detail.

By special request he made another drawing, illustrating the anatomy of the bad man. On being met with the reproach that the third drawing showed nothing of the details of internal structure he replied:

"There are none. The bad man is quite hollow."

On being challenged to illustrate the anatomy of the bad woman he gravely replied:

"My dear boy, she doesn't exist"

Plymouth Rock.

Plymouth rock has become an object of veneration in the United States because of its interesting historical associations. As is well known, it is the rock or ledge on which the pilgrims are believed to have landed when they first stepped from their boats in the harbor of what is now Plymouth, Mass. In 1775 part of the rock was removed to the vicinity of Pilgrim hall, but was afterward restored to its original site and is now under the stone canopy that surmounts the main rock on Water street. Charles Sumner said, "From the deck of the Mayflower, from the landing at Plymouth rock, to the senate of the United States is a mighty contrast, covering whole spaces of history hardly less than from the wolf that suckled Romulus and Remus to that Roman senate which on curule chairs swayed Italy and the world."

The Hypocrite a Genius.

Really to be a hypocrite must require a horrible strength of character. An ordipary man such as you or I generally fails at last because he has not enough energy to be a man. But the hypocrite must have enough energy to be two men. It is said that a liar should have a good memory. But a hypocrite must have not only a good memory of the past, but a consistent and creative vision of the future; his unreal self must be so far real to him. The perfect hypocrite should be a trinity of artistic talent. He must be a novelist like Dickens to create a false character. He must be an actor like Garrick to act it. And he must be a business man like Carnegie to profit by it. Such a genius would not be easy to find in any country.—G. K. Chesterton.

A Story of Gambetta.

It is told of Gambetta that once, when in the heyday of his power, when he went to some agricultural department to oust a reactionary candidate in favor of one of his friends, he inquired about the agriculturists' wants. "We are sadly in need of rain," came the answer. "I'll see about it when I get to Paris," promised Gambetta. And his listeners believed in his promise. The record runs that the rain came down in torrents a day or two after and that when the reactionary candidate presented himself he was booted at. "Let your party do as much for us as Gambetta, and we'll elect you," they said.

Anatomical Expert.

When a butcher answered the bell of his telephone instrument one day the shrill voice of a little girl greeted his ears. "Hello! Is that Mr. Wilson?"

"Yes," he answered kindly.

"Well, can you tell us where grandpa's liver is? We've got to put a hot flannel on it, and we can't find it!"—London Telegraph.

Her Train.

"I shall miss my train," she said petulantly.

"Oh, no, you won't," the dressmaker assured her. "You will soon get used to these gowns which haven't any."—New York Journal.

His Share.

Councilman—I've come to see if you will subscribe anything to the town cemetery. Old Resident—Good gracious! I've already subscribed three wives.—London Telegraph.

Varied Formula.

"Did he tell the whole truth?"

"Practically. He told the truth with a hole just large enough for him to crawl out of it."—Puck.

CHAPTER III.

ONE evening I returned to the inn to find a big van from Dives, the nearest railway station, drawn up in the courtyard at the foot of the stairs leading to the gallery, and all the people of the inn, from Mme. Brossard (who directed), to Glouglou (who madly attempted the heaviest pieces), busily installing trunks, bags and packing cases in the suit engaged for the "great man of science" on the second floor of the east wing of the building. Neither the great man nor his companion was to be seen, however, both having retired to their rooms immediately upon their arrival, so Amedee informed me.

I made my evening ablutions, removing a Joseph's coat of dust and paint, and came forth from my pavilion, hoping that Professor Keredec and his friend would not mind eating in the same garden with a man in a corduroy jacket and knickerbockers, but the gentlemen continued invisible to the public eye, and mine was the only table set for dinner in the garden. Upstairs the curtains were carefully drawn across all the windows of the east wing, little leaks of orange here and there betraying the lights within.

"It is to be supposed that Professor Keredec and his friend are fatigued with their journey from Paris?" I began a little later.

"Monsieur, they did not seem fatigued," said Amedee.

"But they dine in their own rooms tonight."

"Every night, monsieur. It is the order of Professor Keredec. And with their own valet de chambre to serve them. Eh?" He poured my coffee solemnly. "That is mysterious, to say the least, isn't it?"

"To say the very least," I agreed.

"Monsieur the professor is a man of secrets, it appears," continued Amedee. "When he wrote to Mme. Brossard, engaging his rooms, he instructed her to be careful that none of us should mention even his name, and today when he came he spoke of his anxiety on that point."

"But you did mention it."

"To whom, monsieur?" asked the old fellow bluntly.

"To me."

"But I told him I had not," said Amedee placidly. "It is the same thing."

"I wonder," I began, struck with a sudden thought, "if it will prove quite the same thing in my own case. I suppose you have not mentioned the circumstance of my being here to your friend Jean Ferret of Quesnay?"

He looked at me reproachfully. "Has monsieur been troubled by the people of the chateau? Have they done anything whatever to show that they have heard monsieur is here?"

"No; certainly they haven't." I was obliged to retract at once. "I beg your pardon, Amedee."

"Ah, monsieur!" He made a deprecatory bow, which plunged me still deeper in shame. "All the same," he pursued, "it seems very mysterious—this Keredec affair!"

When a man is leading a very quiet and isolated life it is inconceivable what trifles will occupy and concentrate his attention. Thus, though I treated the "Keredec affair" with a seeming airiness to Amedee, I cunningly drew the faithful rascal out until virtually I was receiving every evening at dinner a detailed report of the day's doings of Professor Keredec and his companion.

The reports were voluminous, the details few. Professor Keredec's voice could often be heard in every part of the inn, at times holding forth with such protracted vehemence that only one explanation would suffice—the learned man was delivering a lecture to his companion.

Amedee brushed away my suggestion that the auditor might be a stenographer to whom the professor was dictating chapters for a new book. The relation between the two men, he contended, was more like that between teacher and pupil. "But a pupil with gray hair," he finished, raising his fat hands to heaven, "for that other monsieur has hair as gray as mine."

"That other monsieur" was further described as a thin man, handsome, but with a "singular air," nor could my colleague more satisfactorily define this air.

I ascertained that, although "that other monsieur" had gray hair, he was by no means a person of great age. Indeed, Glouglou, who had seen him oftener than any other of the staff, maintained that he was quite young. Nevertheless, Amedee remarked, it was certain that Professor Keredec's friend was neither an American nor an Englishman.

"Why is it certain?" I asked.

"Monsieur, he drinks nothing but water, he does not smoke, and Glouglou says he eats his soup silently."

"Glouglou is an authority who resolves the difficulty. That other monsieur is a Frenchman."

"I can find no flaw in the deduction," I said, rising to go to bed. "We must leave it there for tonight."

The next evening Amedee allowed me to perceive that he was concealing something under his arm as he stoked the coffee machine.

"What is that?" I said.

"It is a book."

"But why do you bring it to me?"

"Monsieur," he replied in the tones of an old conspirator, "this afternoon the professor and that other monsieur went, as usual, to walk in the forest. When they returned this book fell from the pocket of that other monsieur's coat as he ascended the stair, and he did not notice."

The book was Wentworth's algebra—elementary principles. Painful recollections of my boyhood and the binomial theorem rose in my mind as I let the leaves turn under my fingers.

His tone became even more confidential. "Part of it, monsieur, is in English. That is plain. I have found an English word in it that I know—the word 'O.' But much of the printing is also in Arabic. Yes, monsieur, look there." He laid a fat forefinger on "$(a+b)^2=a^2+2ab+b^2$." "That is Arabic. Old Gaston has been to Algeria. He looked at the book and told me it was Arabic."

I shed no light upon him. The book had been Greek to me in my tender years. It was a pleasure now to leave a fellow being under the impression that it was Arabic.

But the volume took its little revenge upon me, for it increased my curiosity about Professor Keredec and "that other monsieur." Why were two grown men—one an eminent psychologist and the other a gray haired youth with a singular air—carrying about on their walks a text book for the instruction of boys of thirteen or fourteen?

The next day that curiosity of mine was piqued in earnest. It rained and I did not leave the inn, but sat under the great archway and took notes in color of the shining road and bright drenched fields. My back was toward the courtyard, and about noon I became distracted from my work by a strong self consciousness which came upon me without any visible or audible cause. Obeying an impulse, I swung round on my camp stool and looked up directly at the gallery window of the salon of the "grande suite." A man with a great white beard was standing at the window, half hidden by the curtain, watching me intently. He perceived that I saw him and dropped the curtain immediately.

The spy was Professor Keredec.

The next day I painted in various parts of the forest, studying the early morning along the eastern fringe and moving deeper in as the day advanced.

The path debouched abruptly on the glade and was so narrow that when I leaned back my elbows were in the bushes. I had the ambition to paint a picture here—to do the whole thing in the woods from day to day, instead of taking notes for the studio, but when I rose from my camp stool and stepped back into the path to get more distance for my canvas I saw what a mess I was making of it. At the same time my hand, falling into the capacious pocket of my jacket, encountered a package—my lunch, which I had forgotten to eat. Whereupon, becoming suddenly aware that I was very hungry, I began to eat Amedee's good sandwiches without moving from where I stood.

Absorbed, gazing with abysmal disgust at my canvas, I was eating absentmindedly and with all the restraint and dignity of a Georgia darky attacking a watermelon when a pleasant voice spoke in French from just behind me:

"Pardon, monsieur. Permit me to pass, if you please."

I turned in confusion to behold a dark eyed lady, charmingly dressed in lilac and white, waiting for me to make way so that she could pass.

I have just said that I "turned in confusion." The truth is that I jumped like a kangaroo, but with infinitely less grace. And in my nervous haste to clear the way, meaning only to push the camp stool out of the path with my foot, I put too much valor into the push, and with horror saw the camp stool rise in the air and drop to the ground again nearly a third of the distance across the glade. Upon that

I turned in confusion to behold a dark eyed lady.

I squeezed myself back into the bushes, my ears singing and my cheeks burning.

There are women who will meet or pass a strange man in the woods or fields with as finished an air of being unaware of him (particularly if he be a rather snabby painter no longer young), but this woman was not of that priggish kind. Her straightforward glance recognized my existence as a fellow being, and she further acknowledged it by a faint smile, which was of courtesy only, however, and admitted no reference to the fact that at the first sound of her voice I had leaped into the air, kicked a camp stool twenty feet and now stood blushing, so shamefully stuffed with sandwich that I dared not speak.

"Thank you," she said as she went by and made me a little bow so graceful that it almost consoled me for my capers.

Then, discovering that I still held the horrid remains of a sausage sandwich in my hand, I threw it into the underbrush with unnecessary force and, recovering my camp stool, sat down to work. I did not immediately begin. At thought of the jig I had danced to it my face burned again.

Suddenly a snapping of twigs under foot and a swishing of branches in the thicket warned me of a second intruder forcing a way toward the path through the underbrush, and very briskly, too, judging by the sounds.

He burst out into the glade a few paces from me, a tall man in white flannels, liberally decorated with brambles and clinging shreds of underbrush. The youthful sprightliness of his light figure and the naive activity of his approach gave me a very false like first impression of him.

"Have you seen a lady in a white and lilac dress and with roses in her hat?" he demanded eagerly.

What surprised me was the instantaneous certainty with which I recognized the speaker from Amedee's description.

My sudden gentleman was striking, good looking, his complexion so clear and boyishly healthy that, except for his gray hair, he might have passed for twenty-two or twenty-three, and even as it was I guessed his years short of thirty. But there are plenty of handsome young fellows with prematurely gray hair, and, as Amedee said, though out of the world we were near it. It was the newcomer's "singular air" which established his identity. Amedee's vagueness had irked me, but the thing itself—the "singular air"—was not at all vague. Instantly perceptible, it was an investiture, massed, definite and intangible. My interrogator was "that other monsieur."

"I have seen her only once before."

In response to his question I asked him another:

"Were the roses real or artificial?"

"I don't know," he answered, with what I took to be a whimsical assumption of gravity. "It would not matter, would it? Have you seen her?"

"Isn't your description," I said gravely, thinking to suit my humor to his own, "somewhat too general? A great many white hats trimmed with roses might come for a stroll in these woods."

"I have seen her only once before," he responded promptly, with a seriousness apparently quite genuine. "That was from my window at an inn three days ago. She drove by in an open carriage.

"A little while ago," he went on, "I was up in the branches of a tree over yonder, and I caught a glimpse of a lady in a light dress and a white hat, and I thought it might be the same. She wore a dress like that and a white hat with roses when she drove by the inn. I am very anxious to see him again."

"You seem to be!"

"And haven't you seen her? Hasn't she passed this way?"

"I think that I may have seen her," I began slowly, "but if you do not know her I should not advise"—

I was interrupted by a shout and the sound of a large body plunging in the thicket. Professor Keredec floundered out through the last row of saplings and bushes, his beard embellished with a broken twig, his big face red and perspiring. He was a fine, a mighty man, ponderous of shoulder, monumental of height, stupendous of girth. He seized the young man by the arm.

"Ha, my friend!" he exclaimed in a bass voice of astounding power and depth, "that is one way to study botany—to jump out of the middle of a high tree and to run like a crazy man."

"I saw a lady I wished to follow," the other answered promptly.

"A lady! What lady?"

"The lady who passed the inn three days ago. I spoke of her then, you remember."

"Tonnerre de Dieu!" Keredec slapped his thigh violently. "Have I never told you that to follow strange ladies is one of the things you cannot do?"

"That other monsieur" shook his head. "No; you have never told me that. I do not understand it," he said, adding irrelevantly, "I believe this gentleman knows her. He says he thinks he has seen her."

RARITAN BOWLERS SHOW SENSATIONAL FORM

Pinning of the sensational brand was executed by the Raritan quintet against the Westfield Woodmen in a Fraternal League series on Campbell's alleys in which the Somerset county aggregation made a clean sweep. The performance of the Raritans was equal to any rolling in past years on local alleys. The 900 mark was passed in all three contests, for a total of 2,815 pins, or an average of 938.1 per game.

The bowlers of both teams did their prettiest work in the second game, which Raritan took by a 991 to 959 score. In this contest C. Ortlieb marked up the highest score of the night—241.

W. Schaub made an excellent showing although he was handicapped by a blistered thumb. The scores:

P.H.S. TEAM DEFEATED BY BAYONNE HIGH FIVE

The Plainfield High School basketball five went down to defeat yesterday afternoon in the local gymnasium, when the Bayonne High School team was victors by the score of 34 to 31. The visiting team held the lead all through the game and the Plainfield boys did their best work in the last two minutes of play. Tipschutz played a star game for Bayonne, seconded by Chayss. Lidgate and Morris showed up fine for P. H. S.

Bayonne distinguished itself all through the game by its fine passing and guarding. Near the end of the game, the guarding on both sides became too difficult and many fouls were called. At the end of the first half the score stood 25 to 17 in favor of Bayonne, which shows that P. H. S. did some lively playing in the second half.

Overton put up his usual fine game at guard and Clark made good as forward. The lineup:

Bayonne H. S.—Forwards, Chayse, Katko; centre, Jacks; guards, Maloney, Tipschutz.

P. H. S.—Forwards, Morris, Clark; centre, Lidgate; guards, Overton, Doane and Vail.

The points were made as follows: Chayse, three field and two foul; Jacks 3, Maloney 3, Tipschutz 7, Morris 5, Clark 2, Lidgate 5 field and one foul; Overton two field and one foul; all one foul. Time of halves, twenty minutes; referee, Bostwick; umpire, Smith.

The senior and juniors had a hot basketball game between the halves of the first game, the seniors winning by a score of 26 to 19. Miller, Van Zandt and Thompson distinguished themselves above the rough-house. The lineup:

Seniors—Forwards, Ricketts, Loizeaux; centre, Runyon; guards, Miller and Hamilton.

Juniors — Forwards, Wilson, Thompson and Phillips; centre, Smith; guards, VanZandt, Carr and Harris. Time of halves, ten minutes; referee, Woodhull.

HOPE JUNIORS SCORE VICTORY OVER GRACE P. E.

The Hope juniors defeated the Grace church lost night by a score of 26 to 11. The teams were evenly matched but Hope outplayed their opponents in both passing and shooting. Charlie Martin played good for Grace, while Tom Herron played an excellent game for Hope. The lineup:

Hope: Forwards—Tom Herron, John Heron; centre, G. Leighs; guards, W. Brown, C. Nicholson.

Grace: Forwards—Charlie Martin, H. Williams; centre, A. Martin; guards, Cottrel, Manley.

Field goals, T. Herron, 6; Leighs, 1; Nicholson, 4; C. Martin, 3; Manley, 1. Foul goals, J. Herron, 1; Leighs, 1; Brown, 1; Nicholson, 1; C. Martin, 1; A. Martin, 2.

Among the recent arrivals at the Carolina Hotel, Pinehurst, N. C., is Stuart H. Patterson, of this city.

Miss Ruth VanVliet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Van Vliet, of Washington avenue, has gone to Washington, D. C., to visit friends.

PHTHISIS SOCIETY MEETS

White Plague Organization Changes Title to Anti-Tuberculosis League.

FIFTEEN TRUSTEES CHOSEN.

First Year's Receipts $4,387.72—To File Articles of Incorporation—Reports Presented.

Articles of incorporation and a new constitution and bylaws were approved, trustees were chosen and a new name was adopted by the Plainfield Society for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, held in Grace church parish house, last night. There were about fifty members of the society present. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, president, was in the chair.

The new name adopted is "Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield," and the articles of incorporation and constitution were drafted to conform to the State laws. As soon as the articles of incorporation are filed, officers will be elected and committees appointed.

The fifteen trustees chosen last night are Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Dr. William H. Murray, William S. Tyler, Leighton Calkins, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Dr. Frederick Hughes, Miss Georgianna Smith, Miss Mabelle C. Phillips, Dr. F. E. DeBuois, William Dutche, E. C. Pearson, Edward P. Feickert, Hugh F. Fox, James P. Murray and George M. Holstein.

The report of the treasurer showed the receipts for the past year to be $4,387.72 and the disbursements, $4,014.07, which, of course, included the building the sanitorium. With what has been promised and is considered good, there will be a balance of about $650. The running expenses of the society, including the sanitorium, averages $300 a month. It is necessary to employ two nurses, a cook and an orderly at the sanitorium. While the hospital has general supervision of the tuberculosis work at the sanitorium, the society stands the expense.

The treasurer's report was read by Mr. Feickert, who also presented a statement for the finance committee, of which he is the chairman. The statement practically covered the same points as the treasurer's report.

It was reported that there are seven patients at the sanitorium, all improving. The average gain per patient to date is seven pounds, or an aggregate of about forty-nine pounds. It was also stated that the present membership of the society is 480 and there is an urgent need of additional members to help carry on this work. Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Murray are at the head of the membership committee, and they reported twenty new members last night.

Miss Mabelle C. Phillips reported for the publicity committee in which she thanked the local newspapers for their hearty co-operation during the past year in advancing the interests of the society and its work.

"BOB" ROGERS' PITCHING ARM STRONG AS EVER

Ball players of a dozen years ago remember "Bob" Rogers as the crack twirler of the Berkeley Heights ball team. Well, Bob, like the mountains, is growing older every day, but a report from Washington Valley way, indicates that his cunning arm is just as cunning and as strong as ever.

"Bob," according to his brother, "Dick," who used to be the receiving end of the Roger Bros. battery, in those days, will don the spangles again next season.

"He has passed the forty year mark and is the pop of five children, some of whom play ball too, but he is as spry as ever," declared Bob to a Daily Press reporter yesterday.

This dope appears to be correct as on last Labor Day "Bob" did the iron man stunt by pitching the Berkeley Heights team to victory in two contests.

CENTRAL LODGE, A.O.U.W. TWENTY YEARS OLD

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., observed its twentieth anniversary, last night, having as its guests a large representation from Columbia Lodge, No. 58, of this city, and Bayonne Lodge, No. 9. In a historical address given by Judge William Newcorn evidence was presented that the lodge is in a flourishing condition.

Instituted on December 26, 1889, with 48 charter members, the enrollment has reached the 163 mark and one application for membership was voted on favorably last night. During its existence the lodge has lost thirty-two members by death and has paid $52,000 in benefits, which is almost as much as paid in the beneficiary fund, which was $61,133.99. Judge Newcorn's address was highly interesting, as well as a second speech during the celebration when he presented to Andrew J. Stiglitz, the retiring Master Workman, an emblematic jewel of the order. The gift was made by the lodge in appreciation of Mr. Stiglitz's conscientious labors during his term of office.

Past Grand Master Workman Julius H. Wolff and staff, of Newark, were present, and they installed the following officers in an efficient manner: Past Master Workman, A. J. Stiglitz; master workman, Fred Bock; foreman, Louis Alpaugh; overseed, Isaac E. Houston; guide, Henry C. Vogel; recorder, Harvey R. Thorn; financier, Judge William Newcorn; receiver, Charles H. Randolph; inside watchman, Walter Bradford; outside watchman, Edward M. Mosher; trustee, Walter Bradford; representatives to grand lodge, A. J. Stiglitz, William Newcorn; alternates, Walter Bradford, Theodore J. Mason; organist, Theodore J. Mason.

Interesting addresses were given by local and visiting brethren after which a collation was served under the supervision of the entertainment committee, which consists of Lorenzo J. Spicer, Harvey R. Thorn and Theodore J. Mason.

CONSENT OF TOWNSHIP

Borough Given Permission to Locate Sewage Plant at Greenbrook.

OBSTACLES ARE NOW REMOVED.

Petitions for Special Election Now Being Prepared—Mayor N. B. Smalley Is Elated.

Another step was taken toward the consummation of the plans of the Borough Council to build a sewerage system yesterday afternoon, when the North Plainfield Township Committee and Board of Health, at a meeting at Watchung voted unanimously to give permission to establish a disposal plant on the Zvolnack farm, which is situated in the western end of the township, adjoining Bridgewater Township.

Minor changes in the wording of the resolution of the township lengthened the session to nearly four hours. No opposition developed and every incident of the proceedings indicated that the township and borough authorities are united in the belief that a sewerage system is essential to both municipalities.

The resolution of the township giving the required permission to the borough stipulates, however, that the borough shall give the township first preference over other municipalities on the matter of surplus in capacity. This indicates that the township may in the future decide to connect with the system.

Mayor N. B. Smalley, who was present, assured the committeemen that the township would receive first call and be treated fairly in the matter. William J. Buttfield, chairman of the sewer commission, also declared that the township would be looked after.

Judge W. R. Codington, counsel for the township, and Mayor William A. Sanford, of Dunellen, were also in attendance.

After the meeting Mayor Smalley was highly elated over the progress made. Petitions are being prepared for circulation among property owners which will be ready to distribute for signatures in a week. Soon as signers representing fifty per cent. of the assessed valuation of property in the borough is secured, the necessary steps will be taken for holding a special election.

CONSIDERING LOCATION FOR CHURCH EDIFICE

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church held its monthly meeting last night at the home of Robert Clark, Jr., on Jackson avenue. There was an informal discussion of a proposed site for a new church, but it was decided not to make public the exact location of the tract being considered.

Rev. John Y. Broek, the pastor, who presided at the meeting, appointed a committee comprising Robert Clark, Jr., M. F. Gano, Haroce J. Martin, Sr., Charles M. Dolliver and John Y. Broek as a committee to investigate the proposition and report at he next meeting of the Consistory in February.

The site in view is not included among those proposed at a previous meeting called for the purpose of considering the project, but in the opinion of those present last night is well worth looking into, although no definite plans for building a new edifice have been decided upon. The other business of the evening was of a routine nature.

After the meeting Mrs. Clark served the Consistory with a fine lunch, which was thoroughly enjoyed and appreciatel. Mrs. Clark received the hearty thanks of the guests for her courtesy and hospitality.

NARROW ESCAPE OF SIX MOUNTAIN COASTERS

Five boys had a narrow escape from instant death last night while coasting down Smalley's hill at about 9 o'clock, and it was only a providential act that saved the coasters. William Townley is the lad credited with having been the means, and although nursing a bruised limb he is none the worse for the experience this morning.

The boys were coasting on a bob sled and when going at a high rate of speed, "Hub' Reynolds, the steersman, lost control of the steering sled. They were headed for a thirty-foot drop into the brook or into the side of the iron bridge, when Reynolds lost control. Just at the instant that the boys were about to be plunged into the icy water or against the sides of the bridge Townley fell off and the rear end of the bob passed over his leg upsetting all five.

To Townley's fall is due the safety of the bunch. As he fell the overturning upset the bob and all fell off into the snow. Those in the mishap besides Townley and Reynolds were Charles Wendell, Clifford Coles, Frank Hart and Clarence Smalley.

CARELESS HOUSEHOLDERS CAUSE FLOOD AT FARM

The daily increase of about 500,000 gallons of water at the city sewage farm led Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett to make an investigation yesterday. Ordinarily the beds take care of about 1,600,000 gallons of liquid every day and the extra amount, while it has not caused any trouble, taxes the system to almost the limit.

Mr. Gavett at first thought that there might be a leak in the system somewhere, but when he sought information at the office of the local water company he learned that the increase was due to householders permitting their taps to run during the cold weather. William J. Whelan, who is in charge of the water company's affairs here, told Mr. Gavett that the company is now pumping more water than ever, while a great amount goes to waste in the manner stated. If the practice is continued it might lead to troublesome consequences at the sewage farm.

Ice Cutters Hurt.

Two ice cutters working on the Watchung pond yesterday afternoon were injured. Frank Moore had a foot badly crushed between two huge cakes of ice, weighing three hundred pounds each; George Burnett fell, striking his hand on the blade of an ice saw, inflicting a deep gash. William Warrick, the head waiter at the Iroquois, has taken his usual pilgrimage to Palm Beach, Fla. He left on the 7:30 train this morning.

Tinners' Union Banquet.

A MINIATURE BLIZZARD

If Four Weeks of Sleighing are Not Enough, There are Promises of More.

TRAFFIC CONDITIONS FAIR.

Some Trolley Lines Are Running Near the Schedule.—No Indications of Let Up.

Hats off to King Snow, he is again in our midst, and he is undisputed monarch of the situation. The merry jingle of sleigh bells have penetrated the air for four weeks, and the indications are that their joyous sounds will continue for an additional four weeks.

The storm made its advent last night about 10 o'clock, with a powdery mist and the snow flakes are still falling, and up to time of going to press, there are no signs of cessation. The busines section of town was deserted during the morning hours, and it is evident that nobody is venturing out of doors, unless it is absolutely necessary.

Commuters encountered the customary obstacles, but on the whole the conditions are 1,000 per cent. better than those that followed in the aftermath of the Chrismas Day storm. The trolley car system had its troubles until about 9 o'clock. At 10 o'clock the main line cars, and the cars on the local branches were operating at intervals. Of course, there was a little delay at times, but everybody expeced that.

Cars failed to run on the Somerset and Fourth street lines on schedule time until noon. The snow ploughs of the company were at work all night and during the early hours of the morning, and it is due to their activity that citizens are getting some service. The main line cars are only five minutes behind time, and unless blizzardic conditions ensue no great amount of trouble in traveling is anticipated.

The storm failed to feaze the Jersey Central and all of the eastgoing and westward bound trains are on time. In some instances trains from the west are a few minutes late, but on the whole, the conditions are considered fair.

Part of the delay on the main line of the trolley system was due to a broken wire at Westfield. This occurred at 3 o'clock this morning and was discovered an hour later by the "trouble hunter." Of course those pedestrians who sought the cleared trolley tracks were not at all annoyed when they were ordered off by the motormen, who were trying to get their cars through.

CITY GIRLS DEFEAT BOROUGH GIRLS FIVE

The Plainfield High School girls' basketball team defeated the N. P. H. S. girls' five in Debele Hall, yesterday afternoon, by the score of 14 to 13. In the first half the score stood 6 to 4 in favor of Plainfield. In the second half the borough team led up to the last three minutes with a score of 13 to 10. Then Miss Stuart got busy and made a pretty field goal and Miss Merrill followed with two foul goals, winning the game.

Miss George put up the best game for N. P. H. S., seconded by Miss Conroy. Miss Jessie Stuart and Miss Dorothy Merrill distinguished themselves for the city team. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Jessie Stuart, Katherine Sminck; centre, Dorothy Merrill; guards, Ruth Wean, Helen Woolley.

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, Bessie Conroy, Helen Hummel; centre, Marjorie Hart; guards, Clara Smith, Helen George and Henrietta Winn.

Goals—Miss Merrill, one field and four foul; Miss Stuart, two field and two foul; Miss Sminck, one field; Miss Conroy, one field and one foul; Miss Hummel, one foul; Helen George, three field and three foul. Time of halves, fifteen minutes; umpire, Miss Day.

Miss Isabel Arnold, of the Seminary, delivered an interesting address on books before about twenty-five members of the Young Women's Christian Association in the association auditorium last night. The speech was received with profound attention and Miss Arnold was heartily applauded at its conclusion.

The annual meeting of the association will take place next Monday night. James R. Joy will make an address as will also Mrs. Stephen Baker, a member of the National Board. Reports from the various committees will be read and exhibits of the industrial work of the association will be given. These exhibits include dressmaking, millinery, embroidery and stencilling. The meeting will be open to all women and will be presided over by Mrs. Frederick G. Mead.

SONG RECITAL GIVEN BY MEN'S CLUB FINE

The recital given at the First Presbyterian church, last night, under the auspices of the Men's Club, was an enjoyable affair, although the patronage was not as large as expected. It was arranged by Clifford A. Braider, organist of the church, and the program was an excellent one. The artists were Miss Edith Cecelia Rubel, violinist; Miss Jessamine Burd, contralto; Miss Leah A. Coleman, dramatic reader, with Miss Jessie Utter at the piano.

The selections and the work of Miss Rubel showed conclusively that she has exceptional talent and she was given a cordial reception, being obliged to respond to encores. Her first number was "Fluer de Lis," by Venth, and she gave a popular number for an encore. Later she played "Gypsy Airs," by Sarasate, a descriptive piece, depicting the wandering life of a Gypsy violinist separated from his comrades, his longing for home and friends and finally his meeting his companions and the Gypsy dance. This was an especially noteworthy rendition.

Miss Rubel's concluding numbers were a, "Abend-lied," Schumann; b, "The Swan," Saint-Saens, and c, "2d Mazourka," Wieniawski, and in all three she displayed her ability. She has a grace of manner and method distinctly her own, which captivates her hearers.

Miss Burd was down for two numbers, "Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix," from "Samson et Delila," and "Lungi dal caro bene," Secchi, and she gave a popular number as an encore to her second number. Her singing was greatly enjoyed.

Miss Lean A. Coleman, dramatic reader, appeared here for the first time, and she made a favorable impression. Her first selection was "Haga," Anon, which she gave in costume, and her second selection was James Whitcomb Riley's story, "Dot leedle boy of mine," to which she gave an encore, reciting a humorous selection. The work of Miss Utter as accompanist was faultless and added to the enjoyment of the recital.

JR. O. U. A. M. COUNCILS HOLD EUCHRE PARTY.

During the meeting of Franklin Council, two propositions were reecived and acted upon favorably.

Next Thursday night the council will initiate five candidates, and the work will be done by the initiatory team in its handsome new robes which arrived a few days ago. The good and welfare committee will provide entertainment afterwards.

CAMP BAGLEY'S DINNER

Spanish-War Veterans Have a Merry Time at Hotel Iroquois.

ITS FIRST ANNUAL AFFAIR.

Commander William R. Townsend Acts As Toastmaster—The Menu Was Exceptionally Good.

Camp Bagley, No. 21, Spanish-American War Veterans, held its first banquet at the Iroquois Hotel last night and the indications are that it will not be the last. Guests from the Civil War organization, the G. A. R., and members of it entertained the younger veterans with reminiscences of the days when the country was in peril. The banquet provided by Ten. Overbaugh was everything that could be desired and in fact was a splendid spread.

William R. Townsend was toastmaster and put the subjects to the speakers in such a happy vein that everyone was in the finest of humor when the first speaker was introduced. Captains William Hand and William Smith, Chief T. O. Doane, Henry Drake, Captain S. E. Peck and Doctor H. D. Corbusier were among the speakers and delighted the men and their guests with their series of experiences in different parts of the world.

Camp Bagley has started off with a vim which means a splendid organization and the members are looking forward with pleasurable anticipation to the future.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the banquet was composed of William R. Townsend, Daniel J. Shea, D. Dugan, Fred J. Frey and M. D. O'Keeffe. The entertainment committee was D. J. Shea, Dennis Dugan and Fred J. Frey; reception committee, D. Dugan, M. D. O'Keeffe, F. J. Frey and E. J. Richards.

The officers of the camp are: William R. Townsend, commander; Dr. H. D. Corbusier, senior vice commander; M. D. O'Keeffe, junior vice commander; D. J. Shea, adjutant; J. D. McNab, quartermaster; Fred J. Frey, officer of the day; G. R. Laird, officer of the guard. The following are the trustees: Irving Weaver, E. J. Richards and Dennis Dugan.

Absolutely nothing was left undone by Mr. Leary and Chef Overbaugh which would in any way conduce to the comfort of the diners and many words of approval were heard before the speaking was concluded, and the service of practical waiters was enjoyed.

After the feast a flash-light photograph was taken of the gathering and after the smoke had dissipated (which, by the way, was the only dissipation noticed) all hands enjoyed to the utmost the remarkable stories of the men who have had the experiences of actual warfare.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Mayor Sanford represented the borough in an able manner at the North Plainfield Township Committee and Board of Health yesterday at Watchung, when those bodies voted unanimously to give North Plainfied borough the necessary permits to establish sewerage disposal beds on the Zvoulock farm, located in the extreme westerly end of the township. Mr. Sanford was "on the job" during the lengthy session and returned home satisfied that the Council would take up the matter when all the legal requirements are completed.

Friendship Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., installed the following officers: Councilor, Joel D. DeGroff; vice councilor, James E. Pine; conductor, Russell Garretson; warden, Herbert Dunham; inside sentinel, William H. Medick; outside sentinel, Ziba Osmun; chaplain, David Ward; treasurer, William Coriell; representative to Funeral Benefit Association, Charles Clark.

Mayor Sanford entertains the opinion that the borough fire department should be equipped with a chemical apparatus, which would cost about $1,500. Considerable money could be saved which is now expended for the maintenance of hydrants. Statistics show, according to the Mayor, that chemical apparatuses are able to cope with 80 per cent. of the fires.

Edward Herlich, one of the borough's popular young men, is receiving congratulations on his approaching marriage to Miss Grace E. Predmore, of New York. The ceremony will be solemnized in the latter city on February 2. Miss Predmore, in her frequent visits to the borough, has also made a large circle of friends.

Trenton, Jan. 14.—Three $100 bills were sent through the mail Wednesday afternoon to Rev. Charles H. Elder, pastor of Trinity M. E. church, by an anonymous donor, who stipulated that the money should be devoted to foreign missions. Mr. Elder stated Wednesday night that he had not the least idea who the generous giver is. The letter enclosing the money came in the late afternoon mail. The envelope was post-marked Trenton, and the writing seemed to be in a feminine hand.

DR. HENRY VAN DYKE RECEIVES AN HONOR

Princeton, Jan. 14.—Dr. Henry van Dyke, professor of English literature in Princeton University, has been notified by the Royal Society of Literature of the United Kingdom of his election unanimously as an honorary fellow of the society. The only other American at present an honorary fellow in the society is former Ambassador Joseph Choate.

The foreign fellows elected last year were Anatole France; Bjornson, the Norwegian novelist; Nansen, the Danish explorer; Harnack, the theologian, and Paul Heyse. Dr. van Dyke returned to Princeton last fall after a year's absence on leave, during which time he delivered a series of lectures at the Sorbonne, Paris, on "The Spirit of America." These lectures have now been translated into French and are being used as textbooks in schools in France. Dr. vanDyke has been requested to write the Phi Beta Kappa poem for the Harvard commencement this June.

ONE DOLLAR WORTH FORTY-FOUR CENTS

That the purchasing power of the dollar of today, compared with the dollar of ten years ago, is but forty-four cents, was the startling statement made by Miss Jane B. Richards, of Washington, D. C., in her talk on current topics before the Tuesday Club in the lecture room of the Church of the Redeemer in Paterson. Miss Richards is well known here, where she is delivering a similar series of talks.

The lecturer stated that, by actual statistics, the dollar had decreased in value for purchasing necessities fifty-six per cent. in the past decade, so that what could have been purchased ten years ago for forty-four cents cost a dollar today. Miss Richards further predicted a continued rise in the cost of living, which, she said, will lead to a great uprising of the poorer classes unless a remedy be found. Wages, she stated, have not gone up in proportion.

In her lecture, Miss Richards touched upon two topics of vital interest to the reading public. These were the fight in England over the tax budget of Lloyd George and the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy over the conservation of National resources in the United States. The speaker stopped first to outline the movements toward constitutional government in Turkey, Persia and China, and then sketched the naval program of Germany, which, she said, has caused all the trouble in England, since an increase of taxation is necessary there to increase the British navy that the Kaiser's navy may not exceed it in size. According to the lecturer, the English are having even greater trouble than is the United States with vested interests in the form of landholding noblemen and large brewers using their influence to avoid high tax on their product. The nobility, it was said, owns one-fifth of all the land in Great Britain and holds this practically free from taxation.

In touching upon the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, Miss Richards seemed to favor the deposed Chief Forester, believing that the Cunningham claims were mere land-grabbing schemes. She intimated that Mr. Pinchot would have some startling disclosures to make, now that he is released from office.

Before closing her talk, Miss Richards defined the difference between suffragists and suffragettes, stating that the latter are the militant body fighting openly for the same ends as the suffragists, who are more quiet in their methods. The lecturer stated that the suffragette movement is an outgrowth of the outrageous conditions now prevailing in England, where women can get, for the same work, but one-third of the wages paid a man.

RECEIVED SCALP WOUND BY FALL ON ICY SIDEWALK

Mrs. A. Francisco, of 135 West Second street, fell on the icy sidewalk in front of 315 East Front street Wednesday evening and received a serious scalp wound. She was attended by Dr. Gerwein and afterwards taken home.

There are several places along East Front street where the ice has not been cleared from the walks. It is dangerous to pedestrians and should be cleared. Police Chief Kiely has notified the residents along that thoroughfare to have the ice removed from the walks and note that someone has been hurt perhaps the order will be noticed.

Special Services at First M. E.

Special services will be held at the First M. E. church, Sunday night, the topic being in harmony with the general forward Laymen's Missionary Movement. Meetings are now being held in New York city and tomorrow night there is to be a banquet at the Hotel Astor, when it is expected there will be 2,000 guests.

Mrs. W. G. Shotwell, of West End avenue, has been entertaining her sister from New York.

GOLF.

Westchester County golfers have organized the Lawrence Park Country Club and have secured a fine old stone building, surrounded by open porches and terraces and with about one hundred feet frontage on Sunny Brook road for a clubhouse. Organization was effected at a meeting held recently at the home of Arthur Lawrence in Lawrence Park, Bronxville, when the following board of governors, to serve for the first year, was elected:

William Lloyd Litchel, Larkin G. Mead, Dudley B. Lawrence, Pressley B. Bisland, Henry R. Burt, Stanley Ward, Charles L. Marvin, Warren J. Hoysradt, Arthur W. Lawrence, Ellis W. Gladwin, John A. Fry and Leonard Kebler. The officers' elected were: President, William Lloyd Kitchel; vice-president, Harry E. Burt, and secretary and treasurer, Warren J. Hoysradt.

The new club has leased for a term of three years the nine-hole links situated in Lawrence Park West. The course is about 3,000 yards long and extends over rolling country. Lawn tennis courts will also be constructed near the clubhouse in the spring.

CONVICTS GIVEN A CHANCE AT EDUCATION.

Trenton, Jan. 14.—Principal Keeper George Osborne, of the New Jersey State Prison, is meeting with much success with the night school and the cell-study course for the convicts of the institution. When the school was opened on January 4, last year, 229 men of the 1,400 population enrolled. Of these, 122 (some native born, others foreigners) were totally illiterate and 107 were foreigners, who, though not illiterate, were yet ignorant of the English language. Including those in the cell-study course, there were 353 convicts under the direction of the School Board.

Owing to the very large number of men of inferior educational acquirements and the impossibility of gathering all together to teach them, a system of teaching by correspondence within the walls was established during the summer and is called the cell-study course. It consists briefly in this:

Any prisoner who is anxious to broaden his education within the limits of an ordinary grammar school course, say through the usual seventh grade, is at liberty to enter himself in a grade corresponding to his previous educational proficiency. Textbooks are furnished to him and week by week lessons or tasks assigned him and answers to test questions and problems demanded of him. Difficulties that present themselves to him are elucidated by the head teacher, if necessary, through a call on the part of the latter at the prisoner's cell.

The utility and advisability of this course is amply demonstrated by the fact that 278 inmates entered themselves between June 1 and November 1 in the various grades of the cell-study course.

NEW WATER COMPANY IN SOMERSET COUNTY.

Whitehouse, Jan. 14.—The Somerset Water Company of Peapack has been incorporated with a capital stock of $100,000 for the purpose of supplying water to the citizens of Peapack, Gladstone, Far Hills and Bedminister. The company owns ten acres near Chester and will locate its reservoir there. Shares in the company are being offered to the public, and everybody is to be given a chance to become an investor.

The incorporators are Grant B. Schley, Jr., Theodore S. Hill, William Horton, Nichols T. Ballentine, Rev. J. M. Harper, George H. Logan, D. A. Hulick, John W. Tuttle, S. C. Bloodgood, George R. Layton, Van Doren Layton and John McLaughlin. The company has been organized with officers as follows: President, Theodore S. Hill; vice-president, S. C. Bloodgood; secretary, D. B. Melick; treasurer, George R. Layton.

Publishes Numbers of Stolen Checks.

Newton, Jan. 14.—In an effort to prevent other persons from becoming victims of fraud, Arthur M. Valz, an Andover contractor, and former employer of Harry Sherman, who is accused of stealing blank checks from the former's book, filling out five and passing them on Andover merchants last Friday, caused the numbers to be published Wednesday in several papers. The checks were on the Sussex National Bank and run serially from 496 to and including 506. There is also one numbered 535. Mr. Valz states that there are possibly some not numbered in the back of the book missing.

The officers-elect of Old Glory Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, will be installed Saturday night, when the council will celebrate its fourteenth anniversary. Several State officers are expected to be present.

Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of Central avenue, who has been visiting relatives at Chattanooga, Tenn., for the past ten days, is expected home this week.

HERE AND THERE.

Is this a nature fake? It is for the readers of The Daily Press to pass judgment.

Councilman J. J. Stahl, Charles Stahl and Albert Friese took a trip to Stephen Beeching's farm yesterday to secure a quantity of sawdust in which to pack the crop of ice harvested on Debele's pond.

When Beeching's farm was reached, acording to the words of every member of the trio, a pond of hot and cold water was discovered, one half of which was covered with a sound coating of ice.

Al Friese, one of the members of the party, was the author of the surprise of the trip when he started to test the thickness of the ice. As he made a few movements he disturbed about three score lizards, or "wiggiers" as they are known by local disciples of Isaac Walton, and a huge snapping turtle made their appearance in the water.

"This is a sure sign of spring," quoth Councilman Stahl. "I'm mighty glad that all the ice is cut." (The borough councilman made no additional comments after he had awakened this morning and beheld the snowstorm.)

While scores of local sports would not care to risk a dime on the discovery, here is another freak of nature which can be rated as "One best bet" of the day.

Up in Washington Valley, at Wilson's stone quarry, to be explicit, there is a huge icicle on exhibition, which residents of Watchung claim is the biggest they ever saw. Its approximate measurement is ninety feet in length, according to the observations of Mayor Smalley and a Daily Press scribe.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

In the first act of "King Casey," the musical hodge podge being used this season as the starring vehicle of the Rays, Johnny and Emma, Dan Casey, the plodding old fire-builder of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, enters one of the parlors with a scuttle of coal and arm full of kindling wood bent upon building a fire in the grate. "King Casey" will be seen at the Plainfield theatre January 20, and Johnny Ray will appear in the role of Casey the fireman, who in the second act becomes Casey the king. Mrs. Ray will be seen as Goldie Mine, and both will be supported by a company of fifty carefully chosen principals and chorus people.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Diamond Hill, on the second mountain, is proving to be a popular coasting place. Every afternoon a number go over and enjoy the sport. The hill is over a mile long and not as dangerous as Spencer's Hill.

The Peoples' Ice Company expect to finish filling their ice houses this week. Two houses are being filled with the finest quality of ice thirteen to fourteen inches thick.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, of Westfield avenue, have returned from Newark, where they were called by the death of Mr. Hull's father.

George A. Clark, who has been ill for several weeks, has returned to his position with the P. R. R. Co. in New York.

George Keuhn, who was injured while coasting on Spencer's Hill several days ago, is able to be around again.

Principal S. Dana Townsend, of the public school, visited the Westfield schools yesterday.

The Town Committee meets in the Township rooms tonight at 8 o'clock.

Monkeyshines at Proctor's.

Did you ever see a monkey ride a bicycle? At Proctor's theatre this week a monkey with Williams' animal circus, rides the smallest bicycle in the world. One of them is shaved, walks the tight rope, and they do all but talk. The educated pony makes a hit with his superior knowledge. Batchin Brothers in the make-up of a Chinaman and a tramp do a laughable acrobatic turn; Ted and Kate Gibson in their skit of stage life are a scream, Miss Gibson's impersonation of a saleswoman is the limit of fun. Millard Watson as a character impersonator, is a chaser of the blues. The pictures still continue to be a big attraction.

Broke Arm and Thumb.

Mrs. William Friese, of Whitewood avenue, fell on an icy sidewalk on Fairview avenue yesterday, breaking a right arm and thumb. She was attended by Dr. D. C. Adams.

Saturday Night Club.

Cards and dancing will be the features of the weekly meeting of the Saturday Night Club at the Fanwood fire house on Saturday night.

The Ladies' Guild of the Netherwood Reformed church will hold a social at the church on Thursday night, February 3, and another social will be held at the church on February 22.

Mrs. J. F. Grandin and her daughters, the Misses Sara Todd and Elizabeth Grandin, have closed their country place, "Grandinmere," near Hamden, Hunterdon county, and will spend the winter in this city. They are making a brief visit at present with Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Cutter, of Sandford avenue.

you were as crazy over BATES-STREET Shirts as we were, but that's where we fell. We expected the number of Shirts we placed on sale would last at least a week but Tuesday night we had twenty-six shirts left. We got busy Wednesday. We put it up to the Bates-Street Shirt Co., told them if they had something good that they wanted to unload at a price this was their chance. They came to handsomely. Sent us a lot of new, snappy shirts, a mixture of course, but not one worth less than two dollrrs. Some white plaits included. Of course we get in right, but so do you at

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A water famine threatening the Burlington Postoffice building was relieved when plumbers found five dead fish wedged in a pipe.

The Cumberland County Medical Society at Bridgeton heard papers read by Dr. Bland, of Philadelphia, and Dr. E. M. Halsey, of Williamstown.

While skating on Oakford Lake at New Egypt yesterday Elmer Bussom fell and sustained a fracture of the skull. He was taken to his home unconscious, but may recover.

Breaking through the ice while skating on Union Lake, Millville, Raymond Clark narrowly escaped drowning. He was pulled out by William Hankins with the aid of a boat hook.

Another batch of licenses were granted by the Camden Excise Board, after a conference behind closed doors at the city hall. Several saloon-keepers were warned against alleged violations of the law.

Oscar Young, hoseman in the Atlantic City Fire Department, slipped as he was answering an alarm of fire and the wheel of the engine ran over his foot and crushed it, necessitating the amutation of the toes.

When a hatchet slipped from his hand while he was chopping wood at his home at Merchantville, William H. Williams, thirty-four years old, badly cut his foot and was taken to Cooper Hospital, Camden.

Property owners in Atlantic City lost less than $50,000 through fires during the past year, according to reports of the fire department, which will be tabulated in a few days. The greatest loss was $15,000 from the fire which gutted the Bingham Hotel.

The Camden County Board of Freeholders yesterday fixed annual appropriations to the aggregate of $357,753.14, an increase of $30,807.43 over the budget of last year. It was stated that the increase is due to a deficiency of last year, and an increase in expenses for the operation of the courts.

Articles of incorporation were filed at the Camden county clerk's office by the Stone Harbor Yacht Club. The incorporators are Lewis A. Starr, of Woodbury; John G. Horner, Mt. Holly; Emmett M. Ross and William J. Jackson, Philadelphia, and W. S. Casselman Jr., of Camden.

Attempting to board a heavily loaded wagon, Adam Olt, thirty-four years old, of Marlton, slipped under the wheels and sustained a fracture of both legs. He was also injured internally and was reported in a serious condition at Cooper Hospital, Camden, but the doctors have hope for recovery.

The West Jersey Funeral Directors' Association, in Camden, elected these officers: President, Jacob E. Mathis, of Blackwood; vice-president, Ira V. Sharp, of Vineland; secretary, H. C. Bullock, of Millville, and treasurer, W. P. Buck, of Williamstown. The next annual meeting will be held at Cape May.

Trenton and New York capitalists are interested in a syndicate which has purchased the Sylvan Lake tract, on the southern border of Burlington, to erect a big summer hotel and health resort. Deeds of the sale were filed in the county clerk's office yesterday by Seigmund Zeisler, of Trenton. The purchase price is given as $27,500.

There is no doubt that the Law and Order Society's representatives, who have been conducting investigations in Mt. Holly for a few weeks, have created a stir among the liquor interests, as John Forbes, a Walter street saloon-keeper, yesterday withdrew his application for a renewal of his license, against which a remonstrance had been filed.

William J. Freas, former freeholder, who audited the accounts of the surrogate's and sheriff's offices of Salem county, presented his report at the meeting of the board. In the surrogate's office the receipts were $3,570.66, with expenses of $3,484.74, showing a net gain to the county of $85.92. In the sheriff's office the expenses were $3,240.90 and the receipts $2,167.46, a net loss of $1,073.44.

Mayor Stoy, of Atlantic City, will head the delegation of yachtsmen and business and hotel men who will appear before the Federal Board of Engineers at the Seaside House in the effort to impress the officials with the necessity of deepening the Inlet entrance channels. In a statement issued a week ago the Board of Engineers declared their belief that the work would be too expensive for the amount of commerce.

Proprietors of seventeen saloons and one wholesale dealer whose applications for licenses were granted by the Burlington Board of Excise Commissioners were warned that only the strictest obedience to the laws would prevent the revocation of their licenses. The warning was sounded in a brief speech by State Senator G. W. Lewis, president of the board, who declared any infraction of the "bishop's law" would put the license of the offender in jeopardy.

Thieves who backed up a wagon to the home of Councilman Mason, of Ventnor, and loaded up a stove which had been left on the back porch, were getting away with their plunder when discovered by the owner. Mason boarded a trolley car, which was speeded up until the team was overtaken; he leaped on and held the horse until the men were arrested. Before being taken to jail the thieves were compelled to drive back to the Mason home and replace the stove.

Following complaint to Prosecutor Scovel, in Camden from Mrs. A. Christman, that her husband had lost about $55 at cards in the saloon of Jesse S. Hunsberger, 201 Stevens street, County Detectives Smith and Cherry, and several constables visited the saloon with a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Garrison, charging the proprietor with keeping a disorderly house. Hunsberger happened to be away, but six customers were held in their own recognizance to appear at court.

KNOX HAT COMPANY TO MOVE FROM BOONTON.

Boonton, Jan. 14.—The Knox Hat Manufacturing Company of this place intend moving four of their departments back to Brooklyn in the near future, and it is feared here that it will not be a very long time before they may move their entire plant.

This fact becoming known here, a call of the citizens of the town has been sent out for a meeting to be held Friday night to talk matters over. It is proposed to form a stock company, composed of citizens, to engage in the manufacture of hats. The meeting will be held Friday evening in Hopkins' hall.

One hundred men, employed in the making department of the Knox company's factory, refused to accept a cut in their wages Wednesday and walked out of the shop. It was reported that they were to receive a cut of about two cents a hat, which, to most if not all of the men, means a reduction of nearly $5 a week in their wages. The men declared that they would not agree to any such terms, so left their jobs. The other departments, which employ as many more men, are not affected and kept on working Wednesday, while the making department was idle. Former Superintendent John W. Osmun, who has managed the company's affairs here for a number of years, resigned his position a few days ago.

Harden-Morris Marriage Kept Secret.

Newton, Jan. 14.—Miss Margaretta Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Morris, of Fredon, and a graduate of the Newton High School of the class of 1909, and William Harden, son of former Freeholder Philip R. Harden, of Fredon, were married last Saturday, according to the admission of Mrs. Harden's mother Wednesday. Further details of the ceremony were withheld. It is thought that the ceremony was performed in Newark while the bride and groom were absent on a visit, from which they have not returned.

Passaic Popular Suicide Centre.

Passaic, Jan. 14.—According to the report, Dr. Robert R. Armstrong of this city, is preparing, as county physician, thirty-seven persons in Passaic committed suicide last year, twenty of them males. Three men, whose ages were seventy-four, eighty-four and eighty-six, committed suicide by gas and hanging. Self-destruction with the aid of carbolic acid was the favorite method, twelve using this course; ten used gas, ten pistols, one strychnine and one jumped from a bridge into the river

Gives $10,000 to Push Prohibition.

Bordentown, Jan. 14.—Harman Yerkes, of this city, has given $5,000 to the Prohibition Trust Fund of New York to be used in carrying on the work of the National Prohibition party. He has also given $5,000 to the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association for carrying on the work in colleges. Mr. Yerkes is a stanch supporter of the Prohibition party, and has voted its ticket ever since its organization forty years ago.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

May 4, 1871.

We hear the name of George Nicholl, Esq., of Scotch Plains, mentioned in connection with the appointment of County Collector. No better or more efficient man could be appointed.

A change of S. S. Vermeule's advertisement came to late for this issue. Mr. V. has a splendid assortment of Spring and Summer styles of goods on hand, which he proposes to make into fashionable garments for customers at low rates. A call at his establishment and an examination of his goods will convince all of the superior quality and workmanship of the same.

We are pleased to learn that Miss Annie M. Parker, late of our Public School, has received an appointment in the celebrated Packer Institute of Brooklyn, New York, at a salary of nine hundred dollars.

Mr. Geo. Miller, the enterprising landlord of the City Hotel, has recently made praiseworthy improvements in the interior of his establishment, by adding thereto a large and commodious dining room, fitted up with all the modern improvements for the accommodation of his guests. We venture to say the dining room of the City Hotel cannot be surpassed by any Hotel in the State.

The new residence now being erected for Jacob Thorn, Esq., in North Plainfield, will be one of the finest and most substantial buildings in that section when completed.

The residence of Randolph Dunham, on Second street, is undergoing a decided transmogrification, a handsome French roof now adorning it and the general construction of the building changed. Mr. D. is still selling fashionable clothing at his stand on Front street at extremely low rates. Call in and see him.

The Chimney Rock Grove, situated back of Bound Brook, is now open to the public. Mr. John A. Cooper, the proprietor, announces that no pains has been spared to make the grove an attractive resort for pleasure seekers the coming season. An excellent dancing floor has been constructed, and the hotel accommodations are of the best. This grove is beautifully situated, and no doubt will be liberally patronized.

Where! Oh! where, and the echo answers where is the long wished for Town Clock.

THE IDEAL EDUCATION.

Discussing, in Harper's Bazar, "Educational Ideals for the Pupil," President Mary E. Woolley, of Mount Holyoke College, says:

"The English language is a marvelous instrument of expression, but we fall far short of its possibilities, in the choice of words, intent and variety of vocabulary, in simplicity and beauty of arrangement, even in pronounciation and inflection. The school has a difficult problem, for, in many instances, the pupils come from homes where the spoken language is a foreign tongue; in many more it is crude and illiterate; and even when it does not belong in either one of these categories there is littel attention given to the manner of speaking.

"The ideal education includes in the appreciation of beauty the beautiful in conduct. American education at heart has a regard for conduct of the highest type, but in its emphasis upon what it considers the essentials, truth, honor, integrity, purity, it is sometimes disposed to ignore what it would call convention.

"The 'deft in fine perceptions,' that is the secret of much in our American life which jars upon our finer natures. The home must bear the heavier responsibility, for it is only by early and constant training that the perceptions will be quick and keen; to avoid loud talking and laughing and conspicuous behavior, and to realize that deference toward those whose age and position demand it, consideration toward all, and the little courtesies, are a part of culture. A touch of courtliness and courtesy, graciousness and grace, in the midts of the hury and bustle of our modern life, is ittoo much to ask?"

Revival of Seed Pearls.

Time was when seed pearls were used on half the gowns. They have returned to favor. They are now used on tulle and mixed in with colored embroidery in a charming way. They are put on the bodice of evening gowns and are used for dainty floral patterns on the edge of tunics and sleeves. They are worked on white velvet for sumptuous evening gowns and are used for the crowns of hats.

By the way, the beaded tulle sleeves are among the novelties of the moment. Seed pearls are freely mixed with gold and amethyst and coral beads on white foundation, and the sleeve is either a scarf drapery or a shirred cap.

THE BEST HORSES ARE OWNED BY FARMERS

Trenton, Jan. 14.—"The farmer of New Jersey who attempts to raise horses, exercises good judgment when he selects one type possessed of utility and does not meddle indiscriminately in his breeding operations by mating or mixing individuals representative of half a dozen types or breeds," comments the New Jersey Live Stock Commission in its first annual report, which has just been received by Governor Fort. It is the opinion of the commission that the best type of horses for the Jersey farmers to breed are those for draft and express uses. It is pointed out that these types mature more quickly than fancy stock and can be disposed of in any market of the State at the age of three years, when they are capable of a full day's work. On the other hand, the commission points out that the farmer who raises fancy stock finds himself confronted with the absolute impossibility of producing a single animal with the qualities of all types, and adds that the farmer who attempts to produce a general purpose or dual purpose animal is generally doomed to fail. It is also shown that the draft horse does not have to be educated providing he possesses weight and quality, while the fancy horse must be educated and cannot be placed in the market until five or six years old.

Discussing the work of the commission for the first year of its existence, the report says farmers have been generally benefited by instructions they have received in matters relating to the breeding of live stock, particularly horses. In the preliminary investigations of the commission it was found that many sires were found to have been cross-bred or grade animals, in many cases unsound and otherwise undesirable for breeding purposes. It is urged that the farmer who intends to breed horses see that his sires are of pure breeding, and that they do not depend upon stallions alone for perpetuation of desirable qualities.

The report says the commission worked along three general lines: first, toward purchasing and distributing pure bred and registered draft sires through breeders' associations in sections where there was a scarcity of useful sires; second, toward encouraging and directing the efforts of farmers in using only pure bred sires of useful types that would result in the production of a more useful as well as a more marketable type of horses, and third, toward eliminating the grade and mongrel sires by means of enforcing the stallion law, directing rigid selection of brood mares and discouraging cross breeding or mating of individuals of vastly different types.

An interesting feature of the report is that the commissioners declare that they found they were able to purchase standard stock abroad at an average of about $500 less an animal than they can be bought for in this country. Ten stallions were imported from Europe, their cost averaging $950 each. In this country, purchased from importers or Western breeders, this same stock would have cost anywhere from $1,500 to $2,500. The stallions bought abroad were seven Percherons, one English hackney and three Clydesdales. They were shipped and received in excellent condition, and afterward distributed in various counties of the State under the provisions of the law creating the commission. The cost of maintenance of these stallions per year, this expense being born by breeders' associations using them, is from $200 to $365.

Statistics of the report show that of 287 stallions examined during the year, 125 were found to be of pure breeding and registered, while 153 were grades. Certificates were issued to 247 stallions that passed the examination, while forty were found to be unsound and were therefore rejected.

TONG FEUD INVADES JERSEY.

Long Branch, Jan. 14.—The tong feud that has disturbed New York's Chinatown has spread to this place. It was learned Wednesday that the shooting of Charley Wing Tuesday morning by Chong Sam, a laundryman, was in pursuance of instructions from New York. Chong, who has a store in Broadway, near Pearl street, this city, was taken before City Recorder Van Doren Wednesday. The prisoner was confronted by his victim and friends of Wing from New York, and demanded that they be searched as he feared assassination.

Chong is apparently indifferent as to how long he may be imprisoned, as he is certain his life will be taken by Wing's friends whenever he is freed. With Wing in court were several members of the On Leong Tong from New York, but the comrades of Chong in the Four Brothers Society failed to appear. The county prosecutor has letters indicating that Chong was ordered to shoot Wing and Tong brethren in Manhattan. He pretended to be Wing's friend, but only to get an opportunity of carrying out his instructions. He fired five shots, of which three hit Wing's arms and one lodged near the victim's stomach. Wing recovered sufficiently to appear against Chong, and asked that the case be put over until he became stronger.

The Hudson Touring Car

... Triangle on the Radiator

This price includes three oil lamps, two gas lamps, generator, horn, tire repair outfit, tools and jack

Strength—Beauty—Room—Refinement

Think what this car is—110-inch wheelbase; 4-cylinder motor; 32-inch wheels; 3½-inch tires all around; five-passenger capacity—and the price, $1150.

Never before has there been offered such a car at such a price. This is not just a hasty statement of our own. Can you think, yourself, of any other four-cylinder 110-inch wheel base, five-passenger car at $1150 or less.

You will find these features in other cars, but those cars sell for at least $100 to $200 more. You will find still other cars selling for less than $1150, but they do not have our high-grade features. The Hudson Touring Car is the best value, the best buy yet offered by any automobile manufacturer. By this, we mean you get relatively more for your money than in any other car.

There are certain proved features of motor car construction which any car must have before it can be considered an up-to-date, high-grade car.

The Hudson has those features. To those makers who show you the same features, we point to our price; it is lower than their's. To those who offer cars below $1150, we point to our high-grade features; they do not have them.

From one class we are set off by our price; from another by our quality.

The Hudson is strong, because the careful plans of a great engineer have been expressed by the best material that money can buy.

It has plenty of room—many cars are big and heavy without being roomy. The Hudson is big and roomy without being too heavy.

The Hudson has beauty—not merely the beauty of paint—but the beauty of balance, of perfect proportion. Many touring cars look "bunched." In the Hudson over-all length, hood, body, wheels, harmonize to make a whole effect that pleases the eye.

No other touring car at or near the price has so many features and refinements in common with the most expensive cars.

High Grade Hudson Features

Its motor is the Renault Type, patterned after the famous Renault motors of France. It is the same type of motor as used in the Hudson Roadster; four cylinders "en bloc;" vertical, water cooled, long stroke, 20 to 25 H. P. Due to its long stroke this motor pulls quietly and evenly at low engine speeds.

Transmission is selective, sliding gear; three speeds forward and one reverse—the same transmission as found on the highest priced cars.

The spring suspension is the same as used on cars costing up to $6000. Semi-elliptic front and ¾ elliptic rear, unusually long, mounted with heavy, strong fittings. Clutch is leather faced cone type; rear axle semi-floating, shaft driven. Front axle "I" beam section, drop forged, of carefully selected, high grade steel.

Hudson Refinements

When we say the Hudson has refinement, we mean that many little things, of small importance, one by one, but meaning in their total, comfort and satisfaction to the owner, have been put into this car.

See how the rear fenders are inset against the body; how the fenders throughout are absolutely mud-proof. Inset fenders are a feature of very high-priced cars.

The unusual leg room and big 18 inch steering wheel mean comfort. No standard touring car at any price provides as much leg room as the Hudson.

Doors are big, hung on heavy curved hinges, allowing maximum entrance and exit space.

The Toe boards, spring steps and running boards are beautiful aluminum castings. No bolts show through the foot board, nothing to catch a dress or coat or look unsightly. The floor board is covered with pyramided white rubber of best quality, except where driver's heels rest and this part is reinforced by an aluminum plate.

The foot accelerator is something entirely new in design and does not tire the foot.

The body is built with wheel-housing, that is, the body curves out over the rear wheels, allowing a big, comfortable, roomy tonneau. Car is finished and upholstered like the best.

Why you get more value in a Hudson

We have been asked how we can give so much for the money and our answer is: Because we know how. Two engineers could undertake each to build a railroad from New York to Chicago—roads to be of equal length; one man would build a better road for the same money than the other, or the same road for less money than the other. It is so in the automobile business; one set of men will build a better car at less money than another. It is simply a question of ability.

See this car—ride in it—compare it with other cars and you will say that no matter just how we do it, the fact remains that we do give the most at the price.

This also holds true of special equipment. Think of a Bosch Magneto, Special Brookfield Top, and Trunk Rack, all fitted on the car for $125 Extra.

Hudson Motor Car Company, Detroit, Mich.

January 1st, the price of the Hudson Roadster was increased to $1000. This includes 32x3½ tires front and rear; three oil lamps; two gas lamps; generator; tire repair kit; tools and jack.

The Hudson Roadster is America's biggest, best looking and best built low-priced car. Several thousand of them are in the hands of owners and giving complete satisfaction.

The Hudson won a 24-hour race in Seattle in September, defeating many high-priced cars. This was its first race.

Mr. E. H. Nelson, a prominent business man of Detroit, drove his Hudson car from Detroit to New Haven, Conn., at an expense of less than one cent per mile for oil and gasoline and without making a repair.

Mr. Geo. D. Smith drove a Hudson Roadster from Long Island, N. Y., to Pleasant City, Fla., without touching a bolt, nut, spark plug or making a mechanical adjustment.

Remember the Hudson Roadster is not an imitation of a big car—it is a big car. It is big in design, in material, in general all-around value. Look at our price on extra equipment. Bosch magneto, Arden top, Prestolite tank and rumble seat for $150 extra.

BE SURE TO SEE THIS CAR AT THE GARDEN SHOW THIS WEEK.

By Booth Tarkington.

"If you please, we must not trouble this gentleman about it," said the professor hastily.

"But I wish to ask him her name," urged the other.

"No, no!" Keredec took him by the arm. "We must go!"

"But why?" persisted the young man.

"Not now!" The professor removed his broad felt hat and hurriedly wiped his vast and steaming brow. "It is better if we do not discuss it now."

"But I might not meet him again."

"I do not know the lady," I said, with some sharpness. "I have never seen her until this afternoon."

Upon this "that other monsieur" astonished me in good earnest. Searching my eyes eagerly with his clear, inquisitive gaze, he took a step toward me and said:

"You are sure you are telling the truth?"

The professor uttered an exclamation of horror, sprang forward and clutched his friend's arm again. "Malheureux!" he cried, and then to me: "Sir, you will give him pardon if you can. He has no meaning to be rude."

"Rude!" The young man's voice showed both astonishment and pain. "Was that rude? I didn't know. I didn't mean to be rude, God knows! Ah," he said sadly, "I do nothing but make mistakes. I hope you will forgive me."

"Ha, that is better!" shouted the great man. "We shall go home now and eat a good dinner. But first"—his silver rimmed spectacles twinkled upon me, and he bent his Brobdingnagian back in a bow which, against my will, reminded me of the courtesies performed by Orloff's dancing bears—"first let me speak some word for myself. My dear sir"—he addressed himself to me with grave formality—"do not suppose I have no realization that other excuses should be made to you. Believe me, they shall be. It is now that I see it is fortunate for us that you are our fellow inusman at Les Trois Pigeons."

CHAPTER IV.

NO doubt the most absurd thing I could have done after the departure of Professor Keredec and his singular friend would have been to settle myself before my canvas again with the intention of painting, and that is what I did. At least, I resumed my camp stool and went through some of the motions habitually connected with the act of painting.

In fine, I sat there brush paddling my failure like an automaton and saying over and over aloud: "What is wrong with him? What is wrong with him?"

I came out of my varicolored study with a start, caused by the discovery that I had absentmindedly squeezed upon my palette the entire contents of an expensive tube of covalt violet.

The turpentine rag at least proved effective. I scoured away the last tokens of my failure with it, wishing that life were like the canvas and that men had knowledge of the right celestial turpentine. After that I cleaned my brushes, packed and shouldered my kit and, with a final imprecation upon all sausage sandwiches, took up my way once more to Les Trois Pigeons.

Striding along at a good gait and chanting sonorously, "On Linden when the sun was low," I left the rougher boscages of the forest behind me and emerged just at sunset upon an orderly fringe of woodland where the ground was neat and unincumbered and the trimmed trees stood at polite distances, bowing slightly to one another with small, well bred rustlings.

I stood upon Quesnay ground.

Before me stretched a short, broad avenue of turf, leading to the chateau gates. A slope was terraced with strips of flower gardens and intervals of sward, and against the green of a rising lawn I marked the figure of a woman pausing to bend over some flowering bush. The lady upon the slope was Mme. d'Armand, the inspiration of Amedee's "Monsier has much to live for."

Once more this day I indorsed that worthy man's opinion, for, though I was too far distant to see clearly, I knew that roses trimmed Mme. d'Armand's white hat and that she had passed me no long time since in the forest.

I had come far out of my way, so I retraced my steps to the intersection of the paths and thence made for the inn by my accustomed route. Not far along the road from where I came into it stood an old, brown, deep thatched cottage, a branch of brushwood over the door prettily beckoning travelers to the knowledge that cider was here for the thirsty, and as I drew near I perceived that one availed himself of the invitation. A group stood about the open door, the lamplight from within disclosing the head of the house filling a cup for the wayfarer.

The latter was a most mundane and elaborate wayfarer indeed—a small young man very lightly made, like a jockey and point device in khaki, puttees, pongee yap, white and green stock, a knapsack on his back and a bamboo stick under his arm. He spoke, though with a detestable accent, in a rough and ready, picked up dialect of Parisian slang, while Pere Baudry contributed his share of the conversation in a slow patois. As both men spoke at the same time and neither understood two consecutive words the other said, it struck me that the dialogue might prove unproductive of any highly important results this side of Michaelmas. Therefore, discovering that the very pedestrian gentleman was making some sort of inquiry concerning Les Trois Pigeons, I came to a halt and proffered aid.

"Are you looking for Mme. Brossard's?" I asked in English.

The traveler uttered an exclamation and faced about with a jump, birdlike for quickness.

"Say," he responded in a voice of unpleasant nasality, finally deciding upon speech, "you're 'Nummeric's, ain't you?"

"Yes," I returned. "I thought I heard you inquiring for"—

"Well, m' friend, you can sting me," he interrupted, with condescending jocularity. "My style French does fr and his voice showed that he was greatly disquieted. "What is he like?"

"As well as I can tell you, he's like an odd but very engaging boy, with something pathetic about him, quite splendidly handsome"—

"Oh, he had good looks to spare when I first knew him," George said bitterly.

"No. When he came here he did not know of her existence except in the vaguest way. But, to go back to that, I'd better tell you first that the woman we saw with him one day on the boulevard and who was in the accident with him"—

"La Mursiana, the dancer; I know."

"She had got him to go through a marriage with her."

"What?" Ward's eyes flashed as he shouted the word.

"It seems inexplicable; but, as I understand it, he was never quite sober at that time. He had begun to use drugs and was often in a half stupefied condition. As a matter of fact, the woman did what she pleased with him. There's no doubt about the validity of the marriage."

George asked suddenly, "Did this marriage take place in France?"

"Yes; you'd better hear me through," I remonstrated. "When he was taken from the hospital he was placed in charge of a Professor Keredec, a madman of whom you've probably heard."

"Madman? Why, no; he's a member of the institute, a psychologist or metaphysician, isn't he? At any rate, of considerable celebrity."

"Nevertheless," I insisted grimly, "as misty a vaporer as I ever saw; a poetic, self contradicting and inconsistent orator. Harman's aunt put him in Keredec's charge, and he was taken up into the Tyrol and virtually hidden for two years, the idea being literally to give him something like an education. Keredec's phrase is, 'restore mind to his soul!'—It was as vital to get him out of his horrible wife's clutches. But she picked up that rat in the garden out yonder—he'd been some sort of stable manager for Harman once—and set him on the track."

"She wants money, of course."

"Yes; more money. A fair allowance has always been sent to her. Keredec has interviewed her notary, and she wants a settlement, naming a sum actually larger than the whole estate amounts to. She refuses to budge until this impossible settlement is made. In the meantime Keredec's ward is in so dreadful a state of horror and grief I am afraid it is possible that his mind may really give way."

"When was it that Louise saw him?"

"Ah, that," I said, "is where Keredec has been a poet and a dreamer indeed. It was his plan that they should meet."

"You mean he brought this wreck of Harman, these husks and shreds of a man, down here for Louise to see?" Ward cried incredulously. "Oh, monstrous!"

"There is something behind all this that you don't know," he said slowly. "When did Keredec make you his confidant?"

"Last night. Most of what I learned was as much a revelation to his victim as it was to me. Harman did not know till then that the lady he had been meeting has been his wife or that he had ever seen her before he came here. He had mistaken her name, and she did not enlighten him."

"Meeting?" said Ward harshly.

"They have been meeting every day, George."

"I won't believe it."

"It's true. He spoke to her in the woods one day; I was there and saw it. I know now that she knew him at once, and she ran away, but not in anger. They've been together every day since then, and I'm afraid—miserably afraid, Ward—that her old feeling for him has been revived."

I have heard Ward use an oath only two or three times in my life, and this was one of them.

"Oh, by ——!" he cried, starting to his feet. "I should like to meet Professor Keredec."

"I am at your service, my dear sir," said a deep voice from the veranda. And, opening the door, the professor walked into the room.

TO BE CONTINUED.

He Had a Reason.

"Why do you want to be a first-nighter at the theatre?"

"Oh, I like to go."

"Got any good reason for going on first nights?"

"Yes, I have, if you insist on it. I thus escape the talative man who has seen the show."—Louisville-Courier-Journal.

Mostly Expense.

"That is a fat, prosperous-looking envelope. Does our salesman send in a big bunch of orders?"

"Not exactly. That envelope contains a receipt for his last check, his expense account for this week, a request for a salary raise and a requisition for some more expense account blanks."

Why Don't You Economize on Coal?

The hungry furnace and the coal man are a hard combination to beat, but the is the friend of the man who takes care of the fire. The square fire-pot prevents the clogging of clinkers around the sides of the fire. That means all fire—more heat per unit of space. The square pot gives a greater surface for combustion and heat radiation and actually takes less coal for a good fire. And then there's the Boynton special flue for carrying away the dust. You don't sift ashes all over the house when you shake down the BOYNTON.

THE BOUDOIR OF A FAT WOMAN

What do we see? Terrifically long and austere looking corsets; tiny (as possible) shoes, uppers bulging over the vamps; various restrainers, retainers detainers (names unknown); perspiration disinfectants; blackhead eradicators; pimple specifics; blood medicine. Strewed around a few candy boxes; maybe an exerciser on the wall. These "properties" signify that at various times this pleasant room is the scene of fashionable tortures, of heart-burnings, of fallings from grace. Here the poor lady gasps into her retainers, her harness. Here she hides her fat-caused pimples, perspiration, blackheads; here, when her spirit is weak, she forsakes the exerciser for the deadly candy box. What a life—what a four-flush!

Avoidable? A Marmola Prescription Tablet, taken after each meal and at bedtime, will reduce that fat (a pound a day) down to the firm flesh beneath; banish the fat-caused blemishes; give a license to eat all the candy, etc., craved, and sleep as long as one desires. Investigate; tender seventy-five cents to your druggist for a large case, or write the Marmola Co., 988 Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich. Do not be timid—Marmola Tablets are safe—being made strictly in accordance with the famous, fashionable formula: ½ oz. Marmola, ½ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water; consequently, go ahead—without fear. A month will emancipate you.

THE MIGHTY HERRING

Played a Star Role in the History of Some Nations.

COST ONE KING HIS LIFE.

The Herring Fisheries Proved an Important Factor in the Overthrow and Ultimate Execution by the Headsman of Charles I. of England.

A tale as stirring as any fiction could be based on the part played by the sea herring in the history of some of the principal countries, writes Hugh M. Smith in the National Geographic Magazine. Its spawning and feeding grounds have determined the location of cities, and in several instances the actual destiny of nations and the fate of monarchs appear to have been involved in the herring fishery. Even today the herring is a factor in empire.

Countries in which the quest of the herring is an important industry are the United States, the Canadian provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec and British Columbia, Newfoundland, England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, Norway, Sweden and Denmark, Russia, Germany, Holland, Belgium, France, Japan and Siberia.

The prosecution of the herring fishery and trade has been considered not beneath the dignity of nobility and royalty. Fitz-Greene Halleck tells us that—

Lord Stafford mines for coal and salt,
The Duke of Norfolk deals in malt,
The Douglas in red herrings.

In 1677 the Duke of York and other personages of rank formed a corporation called "the Company of the Royal Fishery of England" for the purpose of carrying on the herring fishery in the North sea. They built a fleet of Dutch "busses" and manned them with Dutch fishermen and then were bankrupted by the capture of their vessels during a war with France. In 1720 some 2,000 of "the principal gentlemen of Scotland" formed a company for herring fishing, but were quickly disrupted, leaving a mournful lot of stockholders.

In 1750 the Prince of Wales became president, or governor, of a herring fishery, with a capital of $2,500,000, whose members "were among the first men in the kingdom," one of the promoters being General James Oglethorpe, founder of the state of Georgia. Stock was taken with eagerness, vessels were built quickly, and efforts were made to learn the secrets of the Dutch methods of curing herring, but the company soon suspended, and its failure cast on the English herring fishery an odium that continued for a long time.

It is a matter of great historical interest that the herring fisheries should have been a prime and perhaps the most important factor in the overthrow of Charles I., whose attitude toward the development of home and colonial fisheries was most unreasonable and unfortunate. At a time when the Dutch herring fishery had attained such magnitude and importance that it was regarded as the "right arm of Holland" and when the sturdy Dutch fishermen were pursuing their lucrative calling under the encouragement of their government the English people were chafing under the grievous restrictions imposed by royal approval on all who desired to engage in fishing anywhere off the American coast between the fortieth and forty-eighth degrees of north latitude.

This effort on the part of the crown to interfere with the cherished privilege of "free fishing" had begun under James and was bequeathed to Charles and was perhaps the first in the series of farreaching differences that sprung up relative to the prerogative of the crown as against the rights of the subject.

At the same time there was another restriction placed on the fishermen at home. When James ascended the throne of England his navy consisted of but thirteen vessels, and Charles succeeded to a war fleet but little stronger and utterly inadequate to cope with the navy of the Dutch or French.

After Charles had been successfully opposed by the commons in his plan to have no fishing conducted on the American shores except by permission of the company of "noblemen, knights and gentlemen" known as the council of Plymouth he levied "ship money" on the fishing and mercantile vessels at home in order to build up his navy, with the distinct object of breaking up the Dutch herring fishery on the shores of England and driving the Dutch from "the four narrow seas" over which England claimed jurisdiction.

At the expense of the fisheries and navigation Charles finally fitted out the largest war fleet England had ever had and succeeded in his purpose, so far as the Dutch were concerned, but the levying of "ship money" stirred up civil war at home, and Charles paid the extreme penalty.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 16, 1910.

Topic.—Candles under bushels.—Matt. v. 13-16. Comment by Rev. Sherman M. Doyle, D. D.

The topical inference is a paragraph from the Sermon on the Mount. In the preceding part of this sermon Christ has in what are commonly called "the beatitudes" described the characteristics of those who are members of the kingdom of heaven, here meaning His spiritual kindom upon earth. In the paragraph before us He briefly, but most comprehensively, describes the relation of the members of His kingdom to the outside world under the two figures of salt and light. The figure of salt illustrates that His kingdom is to purify and preserve the world. But if the salt loses its savor it is good for nothing and is cast out and trodden under foot of men. In the east salt does lose its saltiness by exposure and by adulteration by mixing with other foreign substances and is then worse than worthless. So the church without the qualification described in the beatitudes can accomplish nothing so far as purifying and preserving the world are concerned. If it be Christless it will drive the world from Christ rather than to Him.

The second figure, that of light, is more pertinent to the subject suggested. The spiritual kingdom, or, rather its members, are "the light of the world. * * * Men do not light a candle [lamp] and put it under a bushel [an eastern measure holding about a peck], but on the stand [lamp stand], and it giveth light to all that are in the house. Therefore let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father, which is in heaven."

Candles or lamps under bushels! What supreme folly! Why light a lamp to put it under a bushel? The bushel would but hide its light and therefore waste the oil that was being burned. Why should the disciples of Christ, therefore, try to hide the light of their godly lives and good works? Who thus would be led to God? No one, for light to lead, must be seen. A covered lighthouse in time of storm would save no shipwrecked vessel. Nor do men act so foolishly in earthly matters. Lighthouse keepers see that their lights are shining their best in the midst of a storm. They desire above all things to turn approaching vessels from the rocks and shoals and direct them to a safe harbor. Yet many Christians put their candles under bushels. Some do so because of a false modesty. They may well keep the light from shining upon them, but never fear to let it shine to the glory of God. Others may have some doubts and are afraid to speak out and act out for God. Others still have a misunderstanding of Christ's words, "Let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth." In this instance Christ was warning them against the selfish display of the Pharisees, but to ascribe our good works to God's grace and to let them shine for Him is a duty and not a deception. Let your light shine to the glory of God.

A Road Out of Ruts.

One good way to get out of ruts in Christian Endeavor meetings is to break away from the regular topic once in awhile and introduce some other subject which may be treated by one or by several Endeavorers, by the pastor or by a stranger, according to circumstances. There are interesting themes by the score. Try a discussion or even a description of the institutional church and its work. Get some one from the Y. M. C. A. to tell about the work and plans of that institution. Make a special meeting to discuss some part of Sheldon's "In His Steps." Try also national evenings, if you will, in socials. Thus you may have a Scottish night, with a social run along the lines of a Scottish soirée, the particulars of which any Scotchman will be happy to give. An English night may be tried, with English refreshments; so also a German night, a Dutch night, a French night, and so on. If socials be impracticable, then have a Scottish night with Scotch subjects. Take, for example, "Christ's Scottish ambassadors, Knox, Livingstone, Drummond." Luther's life will fit into the German night and give ample opportunity for stereopticon views. Plan new things. Keep your eyes open for ideas. They are floating in the air all around you. Look for them.—Rev. R. P. Anderson in Christian Endeavor World.

Secretary Shaw's Surprise.

A pleasant surprise was given to General Secretary Shaw by the Endeavorers and friends of his home town, Ballardvale, Mass., just before his departure for India and around the world. Not only the young people and the juniors, but the Sunday school as well, gathered at a reception in his honor, and a beautiful jeweled Christian Endeavor pin, together with a sum of money, was presented to him as a token of the esteem and affection in which he is held by his friends and neighbors.

Hymn For a C. E. Consecration Service.

"MY VOW IN PRAYER."

Blessed Master, I have promised,
Hear my solemn vow:
Take this pledge of mine and seal it
Here and now.
Strength of mine is only weakness,
Thine is strength indeed.
Strengthen me in fullest measure
As I need.
Let no worldly cares nor pleasures
Call my heart away.
Save me, Lord, and keep me faithful
Day by day.

LOCAL LAYMEN MOVEMENT

Inspiration is Taken from the Big Gathering in New York City.

PLAINFIELDERS WERE THERE.

"Evangelize the World In This Generation" Is the Slogan Cry of the Business Men.

General Secretary Herbert E. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A., is planning to hold a men's union service in this city on Tuesday night, January 25, when several prominent speakers will address the gathering. The meeting will be in the interest of the General Forward Laymen's Missionary Movement, which was held in New York city this week, and some of those who spoke at the meetings will be heard here. The place for holding the meeting will be announced later.

About 1,800 men sat down last night at the dinner given to the Greater New York convention of the laymen's missionary movement in the new ballroom at the Hotel Astor, New York, and fully 500 more found seats in the balconies in time to listen to the speakers who told what the business men of the country are doing and can do to bring about the object of the movement to "evangelize the world in this generation."

The gathering would have been regarded as remarkable on a fair weather evening and the significance of this was pointed out by Alfred E. Marling, the real estate dealer, who presided, when he said that he had no letters of regret and no telegrams were read. At the end of the dinner the laymen stood up and sang "Stand Up for Jesus." The convention members can sing and led by the large pipe organ of the ballroom they gave the hymn with zest. There were several fine addresses after the dinner.

The Plainfielders present were Charles W. McCutchen, Samuel Bingaman, Alexander Gilbert, E. L. Bonny, J. Herbert Case, John G. MacLaughlin, H. W. Herrman, J. Henry Crane, Harry Gee, Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, George M. Rittenhouse, Rev. John Y. Brock, Alexander Grosset, James W. DeGraff, F. A. Martin, William D. Murray, Dr. F. W. French, James R. Joy, Nelson A. Miller, Walter M. McGee, Herbert E. Parker, F. R. Stevens, George R. Cornwell and William R. Codington.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER PLAYS THE HERO PART

John Finnegan, a former resident of West Fourth street, but who for the past eight years has been living at Kearney, is a candidate for a Carnegie medal for conspicuous bravery displayed recently while attending to his duties as a policeman in that town.

On Wednesday, January 5, he rescued two small childen from being run over by a trolley car. The little ones had slipped on the snow in their hurry to cross the street ahead of an approaching trolley car. Finnegan, however, was "Johnny on the spot." He leaped in front of the trolley and snatched the little girls off the track just in the nick of time.

On Wednesday of this week, Finnegan was once more a hero, when he rescued a boy from drowning in the Passaic river. The latter was skating and broke through the ice. Finnegan heard the youngster's cries, hurried to the scene, laid down on the ice, and pulled the lad out with the aid of his "billy."

Kearney town council is going to reward him in a suitable manner at its next meeting. Kearney became famous all over the country last summer by furnishing "Dots" Miller to the baseball world; now Finnegan has contributed his share toward booming the town.

SAY THEY'RE STARLINGS

Fire Headquarters Visitors at Last Identified — Are Becoming Tame.

FIREMEN CARING FOR THEM.

Said to Be Imitative, Learning to Whistle and Talk—Are Quite at Home Now.

The story appearing in Monday's issue of The Daily Press announcing the arrival at fire headquarters of a flock of birds, whose specie was new in this vicinity, has excited curosity and interest in local ornithological circles.

Fire Chief Doane, who called the attention of a Daily Press reporter to the birds, as a result of the story, yesterday received numerous suggestions by telephone, mail and in person, as to the corect name of the flock.

The consensus of opinion among the experts is that the birds are English or German starlings. Several persons who visited the fire house and saw the birds classified them as English starlings.

From the description of the birds in the story the Rev. E. R. Nickerson, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, who has made a lifelong study of birds, their lives and habits, etc., and who is considered an authority on the subject, is inclined to believe that they are of the Canadian Jay tribe. Mr. Nickerson, however, expects to visit headquarters and see for himself and after doing so he will probably be able to identify the species, which will settle all arguments on the subject.

Dr. J. Hervey Buchanon believes the birds are of the starling class, and similar to a flock of about twenty which recently appeared at Muhlenberg Hospital.

According to a local authority the English starling were brought to this country a few years ago the birds being distributed in Central Park, New York and on Long Island. He entertains the opinion that the flock is a branch of the original family.

The starling, he said, is abundant in most parts of Great Britain and Europe, frequently visiting Africa in its migration. They subsist chiefly on snails, worms, insects and berries and generally make their homes in hollows of old trees or in the lofts of barns or empty buildings. They can be readily distinguished from all other birds, he said, by their whirling method of flight. They become exceedingly familiar in confinement and display great imitative powers, learning to whistle tunes and to articulate words and phrases with great distinctness.

The firemen are taking a big interest in the matter. They have fallen in love with the birds and their spare moments are being utilized in constructing a wooden house for their comfort. When completed it will be raised to the top of a pole in the yard in the rear of headquarters.

HAND AND VAN FLEET ESCAPE WITH A FINE

The case of Thomas Hand and Herbert VanFleet, who were charged with cruelty to animals by the special agent of the Humane Society was decided this morning by City Judge William N. Runyon. Hand and VanFleet were exonerated from the charge of cruelty, but were each fined $2.50 for shooting firearms within the city limits.

Mrs. Van Hoesen was disappointed in the decision of the court as she had hoped for conviction in the matter. She rode from Fanwood this morning on the back of a horse so as to see the case through to a finish. The evidence in the case, as tried before Judge Runyon last week showed that Hand and VanFleet shot two dogs, the property of James Kiely, of South avenue. One of the dogs was not killed outright and after recovering from the shock of the first shot in the throat managed to crawl away to a barn belonging to Robert Guttridge at 1237 South avenue and remained there for three days.

The dog finally crawled home again and was found by Mr. Kiely's daughter, who tried to nurse it back to health, but the wound in the animal's throat was too severe to permit of recovery. A. F. Carpenter, a vetinary surgeon accompanied by Detective Sergeant Flynn, were called to examine the dog which was finally destroyed when Dr. Carpenter decided that the animal was beyond help.

TEA FOR BRIDE-ELECT A CHARMING AFFAIR

Mrs. Edward H. Hobbie and her sister, Miss Mary Barlow, of Prospect place, gave a delightful tea yesterday afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Hobbie, 1216 Putnam avenue, for Miss Ethel Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., whose marriage to William Barlow, Jr., will take place on Thursday night, January 20.

The decorations were green and white, the arrangement in the parlors and dining room being particularly effective. Mrs. George L. Babcock and Mrs. Lewis A. Williams poured tea in the dining room, assisted by the following:

Miss Isabel Scott, Miss Christine Scott, Miss May Faber, Miss Louise Saunders, Miss May Murray, Mrs. H. P. Henriques, Mrs. Charles D. Stillman, Mrs. Charles Barlow and Miss Kate Barlow, of this city, and Miss Katherine Hartshorne, of Freehold.

After the tea a number remained for dinner and in the evening the young people enpoyed a dance.

MAYOR FISK'S CABINET HOLDS A CONFERENCE

Mayor Charles J. Fisk held the first of a series of cabinet meetings in his office, yesterday afternoon, when he called all of the heads of the city departments together for a conference. Those present were Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, Tax Collector William R. Townsend, Chief of Police Patrick S. Kiely; Chief of Fire Department T. O. Doane, City Treasurer William F. Arnold, City Clerk James T. MacMurray, Overseer-of-the-Poor Alexander D. Ayers and Acting Health Officer John O'Brien.

It is the intention of Mr. Fisk to hold these cabinet meetings at his office every Friday afternoon for the purpose of discussing matters pertaining to each department. Little was accomplished yesterday, it being the first conference, but there is every indication that much good will result. It is Mr. Fisk's purpose to have all the departments work in harmony and not independently, as has been the custom in the past.

Yesterday's conference was devoted to an informal discussion of affairs pertaining to the different departments, and by the time the next meeting is held it will be possible to offer numerous suggestions for improvements which will be taken up with the Councilmanic committees. In this way the city officials hope to bring about a more thorough understanding concerning municipal affairs.

Wedding After Easter.

Announcement is made in Southern papers of the engagement of Miss Mary Mauldin Chambliss, of Brownsville, Tenn., to Gifford Webster Cooley, of the borough. The wedding, it is understood, will take place soon after Easter. Miss Chambliss is a daughter of Robert McHardy Chambliss, a well known banker of West Tennesee, and a granddaughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Chambliss, of this city.

Women's Relief Corps Social.

The Women's Relief Corps held a successful dime social in the rooms at Reform Hall, last night. There was an informal program of instrumental and vocal music and recitations by the members and refreshments were served. There was a good attendance and a considerable sum was realized. Mrs. Henry Frazee was chairman of the committee in charge.

Mr. Hettrick's Denial.

Fred Hettrick, of Scotch Plains, denies that he sold liquor under priced, when his place was refused a license or that there was any "jamboree" incidental to the closing up of his place. According to Mr. Hettrick there was no brawl nor any other trouble, and says he still has the stock which was on hand when the place closed up.

F. H. Smith Is Re-elected.

County Registrar Frank H. Smith was re-elected a director of the Rahway National Bank at the annual meeting of the stockholders this week, and in the organization was chosen vice-president. Mr. Smith is also a director of The Plainfield Trust Company, having been re-elected at the annual meeting of the stockholders this week.

Will Hold Euchre and Dance.

The Four Leaf Clover Club will hold its annual euchre and dance in Debele's Hall, Tuesday evening, February 1. The committee in charge comprises the following: President, Miss Kathryn Conshap; vice-president, Miss Nellie Percelle; secretary, Miss Mamie Carney; treasurer, Miss Frieda Keiser.

STORM IS ABOUT OVER

All Travellers Through the "Beautiful" Have Hard Time Getting Home.

A WARM WAVE IS EXPECTED.

Traffic Conditions Much Improved, But It Is Hard Pulling for Horses—Trolleys Have Little Trouble.

Contrary to the predictions of the weather sharps "Old Sol" stuck his benevolent face through the clouds this morning shortly after 9 o'clock today smiling beamingly down on the snow bound residents who were trying hard to push their way through some drifts which looked mountain high. With the opening of the clouds there came also the drip, drip of melting icicles and many a man anathmatized the cold sprinkles down the back of his neck.

The trolley service was a great deal better than after the Christmas day storm and only nominal delays occurred at hills. George Luhr, the efficient "man on the job," did Herculean work in clearing the tracks with the ploughs and sweepers, and directing the handling of the heavy traffic.

On Watchung avenue snow shovellers with their trucks were busy early this morning removing the accumulations of the night, and obstructed the headway of the cars. However, the system improved as the morning wore on and those poor fellows who had to climb over the snow drifts are still talking of the famous hill climbing contests they used to indulge in when they were young.

One wagon, coal laden, got stuck in a drift near the corner of Richmond and Third streets and it took some digging to ease up the drag on the horses. But they finally accomplished the removal of the wagon and the steaming horses. Traffic in the streets was impeded by the additional fall of last night, but the wagons were making a better job of it than in the last storm. Expressmen were especially careful of their horses and although their deliveries were somewhat retarded they managed to get to their destinations.

Wilson Frederick, the United States Express agent, stated this morning that, notwithstanding the heavy snowfall, the wagons of the company will complete their routes today and if they are not cleared up and all deliveries made extra wagons will be hired to complete the job by tonight. The heavy fall of snow added to that which was already on the ground makes it extremely hard for the horses, and extra care is being taken to prevent suffering to the animals.

All local trolley lines were kept open, thanks to Mr. Luhr.

Fourteen and six tenths inches of snow fell during the thirty-five hours of the storm's duration. This quantity added to that which was already on the ground makes thirty inches for the two storms. During the blizzard of 1888 20.9 inches fell. Clearing and warmer weather is confidently expected by those who are not expert on the weathr and it is not unlikely that freshets will occur.

ENDED HIS OWN LIFE AT HIS HOME TODAY

Santiago Porcella, Sr., aged 55 years, a wealthy New York importer and commission merchant, committed suicide at his home, 203 Holly street, Cranford, this morning, by shooting himself in the head before a mirror. Worriment over the recent action of the Government in the Sugar Trust cases is said to have caused the man to take his life. He was a widower and leaves three children.

Porcella, who is an Italian, had his offices at 92 Wall street, New York city, and had resided in Cranford several years. Immediately after leaving his bed this morning he walked to the bureau in his room, picked up a revolver and shot himself in the head. The report of the revolver aroused members of the household who, upon rushing to Mr. Porcella's room, found him lying on the floor dead.

Lecture on Astronomy.

The Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church instead of giving a banquet on Lincoln's Birthday this year, as usual, has arranged for an illustrated lecture by Professor Mitchell, of Columbia University, on "Astronomy," on Friday evening, February 11. Prof. Mitchell gave a similar lecture at the church last year and was heard by a large and appreciative audience.

Memorial services for the Rev. Dr. William Rogers Richards will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tomorrow night. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, the pastor, will preside, and there will be brief addresses by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church; Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church; Rev. F. D. Tilden, pastor of Bethel chapel; Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, formerly of Hope chapel, but now of West Orange; Leander N. Lovell, who will speak for the Session and George A. Strong, who will speak for the congregation. Revs. Goodrich, Newell, Herring and Tilden were all associated with Rev. Dr. Richards in the religious field here. Dr. Zelie will make brief introduction remarks.

Dr. Richards was pastor of the Crescent Avenue church for eighteen years and during his stay here endeared himself to the hearts of many Plainfielders. It was the earnest hope of many of his parishioners here that he would not accept the call to the Brick church, New York, and there was deep regret over his departure. The remarks of the speakers tomorrow night will concern the life and character of Dr. Richards. The congregations of the First Presbyterian, Hope and Warren chapel will unite in the memorial service.

Appropriate music will be a feature of the service to which all congregations are invited. Owing to previous arrangements, unfortunately several congregations will be unable to be represented.

PLAINFIELD DENTISTS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING.

The monthly meeting and banquet of the Plainfield Dental Society was held Thursday afternoon and evening, and was of unusual interest. In the afternoon there was a clinic at the office of Dr. Frank T. Clawson, on Park avenue, where Dr. William Capon, of Philadelphia, a specialist, gave a practical demonstration of porcelain inlay.

This was followed in the evening by a dinner at "The Homestead," when Dr. Capon presented an interesting paper on the subject of "Porcelain Inlay," which was informally discussed afterward.

Those present were Drs. F. W. French, Charles L. Moore, Charles G. Davis, O. B. Whitford, Clive W. Montfort, Frank T. Clawson, George T. Moore, B. F. Leonard, Charles R. Thiers, Ray Stevens, Frank S. Wells, of this city; Dr. Hogan, of Dunellen; Dr. C. M. F. Egel, of Westfield, and Dr. Voorhees, of Somerville.

CONSIDERING A SITE NOW FOR PROPOSED ARMORY.

At the request of Gen. Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, who is chairman of the committee from the Board of Freeholders in charge of the work of selecting a site for a new armory at Elizabeth, called a meeting of the committee yesterday afternoon. The military committee met with the freeholders and informally discussed the question of a site.

Several have been propsed and it is the opinion that it will not be a difficult matter to secure a suitable place to erect the armory.

Visited His Grandfather.

Isador De Castro, a grandson of Bennett Brittin, of West Front street, who is a lieutenant of police in the city of Havana, Cuba, has returned to the tropical island after a brief visit with his relatives. Lieutenant De Castro was in New York in connection with the bringing of a prisoner extradited from the island republic and took the opportunity of seeing his folks at the West End. Mr. Brittin is reported as being seriously ill at his home, 1220 West Front street.

F. W. Gray Will Probated.

The will of the late Frederick W. Gray, who died on January 1 as the result of injuries received by a fall, was offered for probate in the office of Surrogate George T. Parrot, Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon. Theodore Gray, a son, of West Front street, and Alfred W. Gray, a grandson, who is a minor, were named as executors. The value of the estate is not given.

HURLED TO DEATH BY FLYER

Martin Brennan Killed by B. & O. Train at Dunellen While Lighting Lamps.

WAS AN OLD RAILROAD MAN.

Storm Prevented Engineer From Seeing Man at Work Between the Tracks.

Martin Brennan, of Dunellen, was struck and instantly killed by an eastbound P. and R. express, at 5:30 o'clock last night, at the Greenbrook tanks. When Brennan was struck he was finishing his day's work of lighting the lamps situated between the tracks at that point.

Brennan's body was hurled a distance of forty feet. The accident was directly the result of the snowstorm and darkness which made it impossible for the engineer of the express to see Brennan at work between the tracks. The express stopped and carried the body of the dead man to Dunellen.

A pathetic feature of the tragedy was the notification of Mrs. Brennan, the wife of the dead man, of her husband's untimely death. This sad duty was performed by Engineer William Connolly, of Dunellen, an intimate friend of Brennan. He went to the house about two hours after the accident, or just about the time Brennan was due home. Mrs. Brennan, when she received the news, had supper all prepared for her husband. She was completely prostrated by the news.

Mr. Brennan was a native of Ireland and had been a resident of Dunellen for about thirty years. He was sixty-four years of age and had always been a "railroader" since taking up his residence at that place. For years he was employed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company. At the time of the wreck on that road, at West Dunellen, nine years ago, in which several lives were lost, he was flagman at the disaster point. Soon after that accident he secured a position with the Jersey Central.

Surviving him are a wife, one daughter, and a son, Thomas Brennan. The funeral services will be held Monday morning at St. John's R. C. church at 9 o'clock. A service will also be held at the dead man's home at 8:30 o'clock.

CAPT. "BILL" TOWNLEY RESCUES POOR KITTY

The sounds of a wailing cat disturbed the residents of South avenue on Wednesday and the pitiful meouw of the frightened feline continued night and day until yesterday afternoon, when a gallant rescue was made by Captain William Townley, of Company No. 4, of the east end.

The special officer of the S. P. C. A., who lives at Fanwood, was notified by telephone of the cat's plight and took immediate steps to help pussy. Chief T. O. Doane was called upon to allow the firemen of Captain Townley's command to attempt a rescue. The Chief was willing and issued the necessary orders. It was not long before Captain Townley and Fireman Dunn were on the job with the longest ladder on the truck.

But the ladder was about five feet short of the airy perch of the pet animal, which, by the way, belongs to Mrs. Walter H. Freeman, and was up a tree on her grounds, so Captain Bill had to shin up the rest of the way and rescue the handsome Maltese. The poor little animal was nearly starved and more than half grozen.

Spending Money at Home.

A. E. Force, of A. E. Force & Co., is the author of an interesting article reproduced from "Playthings," a New York trade paper, that will be found on page six. It is entitled "Home Dollars Should Be Spent in Home Towns," and is well worth reading. Mr. Force is president of the Plainfield Merchants' Association.

Emery Signs a Contract.

Jimmie Emery, who played third base for the Plainfield Baseball club last season, has appended his signature to a contract with the Reading Tri-State League club, and will be given a try-out in the spring. He will have two or three other players to compete against for the honors, but his friends believe he will make good.

Will Render Special Music.

The choir of Grace M. E. church will render special music at the service tomorow night, and the pastor, Rev. Ora J. Shoop, will preach on the theme, "The Significant Word 'If.'"

A meeting was held Thursday evening at the office of H. C. McVoy, in North avnue, by the committee of the Master Builders' Association which has in charge the revision of the constitution and by-laws of the association. The association looks forward to great activity in the building line the coming year and wants the laws of the association up-to-date to meet conditions that may arise. The association has in its membership practically all those interested in the building trades in the towns of Cranford, Westfield, Roselle, Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

At the next meeting of the Board of Education, to be held next week, the budget for the coming year will be made up. It will cost about $60,000, including the money received from the State, to run the schools for the year. At the annual school meeting to be held in March the board will ask the voters for an appropriation to build a new high school. The amount wil probably be $80,000, as the people do not take kindly to spending a larger amount at this time.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Dunellen and New Market are again at the mercy of a miniature blizzard. The present storm appears to be more severe than the Christmas snowfall. From unofficial sources it is said that the fall amounts to eleven inches. At New Market and in the Piscataway district the conditions are worse than in the borough. Traveling between the village and borough is made difficult owing to the sidewalks and roads being almost impassable with snow. Trains on the Lehigh Valley railroad yesterday were half to one hour late from New York while the western expresses were several hours late. Trains coming from New York on the Jersey Central were running fairly well, being only about fifteen minutes behind the regular schedule.

Charles Thornton, who took an ocean voyage for his health, sailed from Liverpool on his return trip on Tuesday.

William Dealaman has returned from Baltimore, where he has been visiting friends for a fortnight.

Lester Kratsell is out again after an attack of illness resulting from an abscess.

William Kennedy has taken a position at the Plainfield freight house.

Dan Moody has taken a position in a Plainfield barbershop.

S. B. Merrill is visiting relatives in Philadelphia.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Johnny and Emma Ray, supported by a company full fifty strong, will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre January 20 in a new edition of their greatest musical comedy success, "King Casey." There is not another offering on the road of quite the same calibre as this one. The piece is in two acts—the first laid in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York city, and the second act on the island of Lala Pa Zaza, somewhere in the South Sea. Mr. Ray will be seen in the old familiar role of Casey—the same Casey that has been fireman, janitor and king—and, as usual, forms the pivotal point around which the fun revolves.

Elsie Janis, youngest and most radiant of American stars, seems to be better fitted as Cynthia Bright in "The Fair Co-Ed" than any other musical comedy vehicle in which she has appeared since she abandoned the vaudeville stage for Mr. Charles Dillingham's careful management. George Ade is the author of "The Fair Co-Ed," which, as the title indicates, has its scene at a "fresh water college," which is trying the experiment of co-education of sexes. New York and Chicago have both found much to admire in Miss Janis and in the new college musical play to which Gustav Luders has written some very catchy arias. Miss Janis with one of Mr. Dillingham's exquisite productions and a carefully selected supporting company is to be seen at the Plainfield theatre January 24.

C. H. K. HALSEY HEAD OF ELIZABETH TRADE BOARD.

Charles H. K. Halsey was elected president of the Elizabeth Board of Trade Thursday night for the fifth time. James C. Connolly was re-elected vice president; E. S. Hersh, second vice president; Samuel R. Ogden, treasurer, and William F. Groves, secretary. The executive committee elected includes Warren R. Dix, George R. Falker, P. B. Bassett, Joseph Filbacher and E. W. Phares.

The board will ask the City Council to provide a tuberculosis pavilion in connection with the General Hospital and will seek to get the United States Government to dredge the Elizabeth River. Plans for advertising the city through metropolitan and State papers were discussed.

A report was submitted showing that the Standard Oil Company has made improvements at its Linden plant calculated to do away with the offensive odor which has annoyed Elizabeth citizens for the last two years. The changes made by the Standard Oil Company, according to the report, have cost $50,000.

DEAD GUNNER HAD LIVE'MAN'S LICENSE.

Camden, Jan. 15.—His gunning license having been found on the body of Dr. Lewis H. Krautter, of Philadelphia, who was frozen to death near Wildwood in the blizzard on Christmas Day, Julius Uber, of 1250 Kaighn avenue, Camden, was Thursday arraigned before Justice of the Peace Schmitz on a charge of having loaned the license, complaint having been made by Game Warden Folker.

Insisting as he has from the outset, that he lost the license on the third day of the gunning season, while hunting near Wildwood, Uber pleaded not guilty to the charge. In the absence of other witnesses Justice Schmitz postponed the case until he could secure the presence of Dr. Krautter's relatives, who have stated that the license was borrowed from Uber.

A Gas Heater Promotes Comfort

During the night when the fire in the furnace goes down the temperature in the house goes down with it. And it generally takes an hour or so in the morning to get the rooms properly warmed again.

A Gas Heater could be made to fill this gap at a slight cost and with good results.

If your bedroom is too cool when you arise or your bathroom lacks heat, temporarily, a Gas Heater would supply the required warmth in a few minutes.

Or you might want more heat, on occasions, in the sewing room or the library or den. A Gas Heater can be used wherever there is a gas jet.

Gas Heaters cost only $1.35 and upwards. They give big service for little money.

Hallet & Davis Player-Piano

The Hallet & Davis Piano

The discerning player-piano purchaser demands not only a piano of unquestioned superior tone quality, but of strong and durable construction, to withstand the greater use accorded a player-piano than an instrument without the player mechanism. The Hallet & Davis piano is constructed to meet the most severe requirements. The crown of the sounding board is supported by fifteen ribs, while the usual number is only eleven. The metal plate is square and very heavy, securing great rigidity. The piano action and hammers are designed for hard service, making an ideal instrument for the introduction of automatic player mechanism.

The Player Action

The salient features of the player action in the Hallet & Davis player-piano are:

A button softening the treble and another softening the bass.

A lever softening the whole piano and one operating the sustaining pedal of the piano.

The usual tempo and re-roll levers.

But most important of all, an automatic tracking device which is absolutely essential with the new standard 88-note music roll, as the holes are smaller and nearer together than on the old 65-note roll.

(The least swelling or shrinking of the paper causes the holes in the paper to be out of line with the holes in the tracker board, resulting in a discord unless equipped with a tracking device.)

Plays any standard 88-note music roll.

Daily demonstrations at our warerooms.

YALE CORPORATION ANNOUNCES GIFTS

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 15.—A special meeting of the Yale corporation was held here yesterday. At the close of the meeting the following official announcement was made: The Yale corporation has elected George Parmly Day treasurer of the university in place of Lee McClung, who resigned two months ago to become treasurer of the United States. Mr. Day is the senior member of the firm of Day, Adams & Co., bankers and brokers, 45 Wall street, New York. He is a son of Clarence S. Day, of New York city, and a grandson of Benjamin F. Day, who in 1833 founded the New York Sun. A great grandfather, Benjamin Day, graduated from Yale in 1765.

Mr. Day will not assume the duties of his new position until May 1. An offer from J. Pierpont Morgan to present $100,000 to the university for the establishment of the William M. Laffan professorship of Assyriology and Babylonian literature was accepted. This endowment is particularly appreciated, as, although Yale has been strong in Semitic lines, there has never been any provision for instruction in the field covered by the new professorship. The fund, being invested in securities which yield 7 per cent., the donor has suggested that the surplus, after paying the professor in charge, shall be used for the purchase of archeological and other illustrative material.

An additional gift of $5,500 from Andrew Carnegie for the completion of the Carnegie swimming pool was reported.

Announcement was made that a legacy of $50,000 from the estate of Jane A. Townsend for the establishment of a professorship of American history in the university has been received.

A special vote was passed thanking Mrs. Russell Sage for her gift of $650,000 to the university for the purchase of the Hillhouse property. Her generous offer was accepted.

In view of the appointment of Director Graves, of the Yale Forest School as United States forester, he was voted a leave of absence for one year from February 1 and Professor Toumey was appointed acting director of the school for the year.

SUES FOR $10,000; GETS $18.

Blum Fails to Prove Damages in Contract Case.

Jacob Blum, a coal merchant of Elizabeth, who brought suit before Judge B. A. Vail against the Parson Manufacturing Company for breach of contract, claiming the sum of $10,000 damages, was awarded $18 by a jury Thursday after deliberating about ten minutes.

The suit involved the sale of Blum's coalyard in Broadway, Elizabeth. The defendant company promised to allow Blum to use a switch in the yard in connection with his new place in Livingston street, but failed to keep its promise, according to Blum's testimony.

FALSE ARREST CLAIM DENIED.

Elizabeth, Jan. 14.—The suit of Elliott Goddard, of this place, against Detective-Sergeants Frederick Kuhn and James J. Quinn, of Newark, was decided late Wednesday afternoon in favor of the defendants. The jury was out about three hours.

Goddard asked $5,000 damages for false arrest in connection with an assault on Reinhold Hecklau. The latter and his wife testified in favor of the plaintiff. The defense was that the two officers, in arresting Goddard for the assault, acted under orders from a superior officer. After the arrest Goddard prove an alibi.

PROFANITY BY WIRELESS.

There are some thirty wireless stations in Montclair, operated by schoolboys and other amateurs, and the operators, on account of recent abuses of the invention, are considering the organization of an association which will have for its object the discouragement of the use of profane and obscene language by wireless "senders."

Urges Clergy to Be Saving.

New Brunswick, Jan. 15.—Rev. Dr. Thomas Reed Bridges, of New York city, formerly of Newark, delivered an address before the student body of the New Brunswick Theological Seminary Wednesday night. His subject was "The Minister and the Business Man." He urged the students to acquire business ability, to be prudent and thrifty and to begin in their young days to save money for old age. He said that no matter how small a pastor's salary might be, he ought to lay away one-fifth of his income. He said ministers should not be rich, but should be independent and free financially. He pointed out that too many of the clergy live by faith in that they thing it unnecessary to save money, and that in some way they shall be looked after. "But God helps them who help themselves," he said.

Old Glory Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, will install its officers-elect tonight on the occasion of the fourteenth anniversary of the council. Several State officers and others are expected to be present.

EXCISE REGULATIONS STRICT IN ELIZABETH

The new Republican Board of Excise in Elizabeth, at its first regular session Thursday night made radical changes in the rules and regulations governing the sale of liquor in Elizabeth which seems sure to put out of business not a few of the 265 saloons and inns in the city.

The Elizabeth Board raised the license fee from $250 to $500 and voted not to grant any new licenses for a year, also to compel the saloons to close at midnight and not to open earlier than 5 o'clock in the morning.

Commissioner Michael Devine introduced a resolution not to grant any new licenses for three years. After a debate the resolution was amended limiting the time to one year. Resolutions were also adopted to the effect that the Board insist upon a rigid enforcement of the law against Sunday selling, the screen law ordinance, against selling to intoxicated persons and selling to minors.

Commissioner Kling stated that the police would assist the Board in seeing that the law was enforced and he called upon the citizens to assist the Board by reporting all violations.

There was never a meeting in the Council Chamber of City Hall at which there were so many in attendance. The meeting was considered the most important held by the Municipal Board in the city in the last decade. It had been looked forward to for months by citizens.

Jacob Hagin was elected License Inspector for one year at a salary of $1,200. He was chosen on the twenty-first ballot. There were twenty aspirants for the place and half that number received votes. The Board decided that hereafter no license will be renewed until a thorough investigation of the character of the applicant is made. There were present at the meeting Commissioners Henry Fromm, Peter J. Kling, Thomas Y. Bye and Michael P. Devine.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Otis Skinner's character portrayal of Lafayette Towers in "Your Humble Servant" has been compared to a wonderful portrait set in an artistic frame.

Miss Billie Burke has begun rehearsals for her appearance at the Lyceum Theatre in New York in W. Somerset Maugham's newest comedy success, "Mrs. Dot."

William Collier who is playing this week in Philadelphia in "A Lucky Star" will shortly come to New York with his new laughter making success, though the date and the playhouse have not yet been announced.

Miss Ethel Barrymore will begin her New York season in A. W. Pinero's newest play, "Mid-Channel," at The Empire Theatre on Monday, January 24.

The one best show in all New York is "Old Dutch," which is drawing capacity houses at Lew Fields' Herald Square theatre. In it as in everything else he has appeared in Lew Fields is simply "immense," no other word describes it. The press and the public stamp it as the one best hit of the season on Broadway. It is typically Fieldsish throughout and that is telling it all. Order your seats in advance. Evenings at 8:15.

The New Year finds the New York Hippodrome spectacles and circus in the mid season of their great success. Holiday crowds and especially the visitors for mout of town regard a visit to New York's largest playhouse as part of the festivities attendant upon holiday time, and particularly so, inasmuch as the Hippodrome show appeals to both the little folks and grown ups. Seventeen splendid scenes follow each other in scintillant succession, from the first part of the performance when the great ocean liner moves out from the dack in truly wonderful fashion to the shining cave of gems wherein takes place the gorgeous "Ballet of Jewels" and on to the iridescent palace in the centre of the earth, which marks the finale of the show and introduces the disappearing diving army.

OLDEST ODD FELLOW 91.

John Martin to Celebrate Event in State Home.

John Martin, of Trenton, will celebrate his ninety-first birthday Monday at the Odd Fellows' Home in that city, and as he is the "boss" of the home, there will be some doings there on that day. Martin has been an Odd Fellow for seventy years, probably longer than any other man in New Jersey. He was born in New York in 1819, the son of a bookmaker, following his father's trade. He worked for some of the big publishing houses in this country. In 1896 he became paralyzed and sought the rest and comfort of the home in Trenton. His long stay there has won for him the place of "boss," and every newcomer is forced to recognize his claim to rule.

In addition to having been an Odd Fellow for seventy years, Mr. Martin has been a Mason for forty-eight years.

DOLLIVER OPTIMISTIC IN ADDRESS AT SUMMIT.

Summit, Jan. 15.—At the Athenaeum meeting Thursday night, the speaker of the evening, Hon. Jonathan P. Dolliver, United States Senator from Iowa, was introduced by Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York Evening Post.

The subject of Senator Dolliver's address was, "The New Moral Outlook." From Mr. Dolliver's point of view it is most satisfying and encouraging.

Chiefly among his arguments in supporting this attitude were:

"That people regard too often the evil and downward tendencies, forgetting the infinite amount of good which constantly balances and outweighs the wrongs.

"That many assume the earlier days of our government to have been free from graft, bribery and corruption, whereas there are many proofs to the contrary, showing that the very evils which are brought to light and promptly redressed nowadays went in former times unfunished and almost unnoticed."

Especially, too, did he emphasize the assertion that the government is now awake to the enlightened conscience of the people and only too anxious to respond to their demands.

In closing his address the Senator brought out most empratically that the real power of our government is already not political, but moral and spiritual.

WOULD SLAY HOSPITAL STAFF.

Man Hurt By Train Opposes Physicians and Is Treated In Cell.

Dennis Henry, of Elizabethport, was in a hurry to get home yesterday, and when an express train going forty miles an hour passed the station at Bayonne he tried to jump on it. He was struck by the side of a car and thrown twenty feet. He was taken to a hospital.

Physicians ordered him sent to the accident ward. Henry objected, and when the physicians insisted he threatened to kill the entire staff of nurses and physicians. His actions became so dangerous that the police were summoned and he was taken to Police Headquarters and locked up in a cell. A physician attended him there. He will recover.

DRAGGED BY HORSES AFTER SLEIGH UPSET.

Califon, Jan. 15.—Edward Beavers and Miss Millie Hall, principal of the Farmersville Public School, narrowly escaped serious injuries in a runaway accident at Lower Valley Thursday. Mr. Beavers had a spirited team hitched to a sleigh, and with Miss Hall was sleighing to her home near High Bridge.

At the Alligar farm at Lower Valley the sleigh struck a snow drift, upset and threw the occupants out. The horses took fright and started to run away. Mr. Beavers held fast to the reins and was dragged over the snow drifts and ice fully 200 yards, when he managed to pull the horses back in the road and throw them. Mr. Alligar and Charles Post, who witnessed the accident, ran to his rescue.

The horses became tangled in the harness and were released with difficulty. A singular feature of the accident was that the horses became interchanged. Miss Hall sustained an injured hand and Mr. Beavers escaped with bruises. The harness and sleigh were wrecked and the horses were uninjured.

At the same point a few hours before Andrew W. Naright, of Teetertown, had a spill. He had a team of colts hitched to a sled loaded with pork when the accident occurred. The sled broke and the meat was dumped in the snow. The horses did not get away.

OFFICERS CHOSEN BY MORRIS G. O. P. COMMITTEE.

Morristown, Jan. 15.—Just a few members of the Republican county committee appeared at the annual meeting Thursday to elect officers for the year. There was nothing "cut and dried," it was declared, but there was a lack of enthusiasm in political matters at present. All interest, it was said, was in Trenton. The officers chosen were: Chairman, John H. Capstick, of Montville; vice-chairmain, E. M. Searing, of Dover; State Senator Mills having resigned his position as secretary, J. W. Thompson, of Morris Plains, was elected secretary, and State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees was chosen treasurer.

The meeting was probably the last to be held in the Republican headquarters in the Chronicle building, as the property has been sold to the local lodge of Elks for a home.

NOTED PAINTINGS IN SCHOOL.

Temporary Gallery Chosen for Donations from Mr. W. T. Evans.

Thirty-six paintings by American artists, donated to Montclair, will be placed temporarily in the auditorium of the new Hillside Grammar School in that place. Mr. William T. Evans, the donor, has agreed to this arrangement.

The Municipal Art Commission has received a gift of $50,000 from Mrs. Henry Lang, of this town, for the erection of an art gallery in which the paintings, as well as thirty more to be contributed by Mr. Evans, will be permanently housed. A municipal art association whose object will be the maintenance of the art gallery is now being formed. This association will consist of not less than 500 members, each of whom will pay $10 annual dues.

LOVE LAUGHS ONCE AGAIN.

Love had his laugh yesterday at the locksmiths who would put up the bars at the Narrows to separate two young people of his acquaintance. In the City Hall of New York, with an Ellis Island matron for one witness and for the other the shipping reporter of one of the New York German dailies, Martha Gartner and Heinrich Fritze were safely married.

It began in Vienna, when Heinrich, not yet twenty-one, was musical critic for the "Neue Freie Presse." The young woman, then eighteen, was the daughter of a Viennese jeweller. Heinrich came to America to seek his fortune, and at the end of one year sent for his bride. She was not unwilling, but her father was.

So Martha fled by night, rushed by rail and steamer to Liverpool, and caught the Carmania on the morning of the very day her father reached that city in pursuit. His objections were cabled to the consul here, who protested. The girl was held for a week at Ellis Island, while her lover kept the wires hot with argument. Yesterday came word that the father had relented, and a matron went with the young person to City Hall, saw her safely wed, and then took her back to the Island before she was turned over with bag and baggage to her handsome young husband.

Plainfield in .... The Olden Days.

April 13, 1871.

Rev. K. P. Ketcham has signified his intention to accept the call of the First Presbyterian church, of Plainfield, to become their pastor, and is expected to enter upon his duties the last Sabbath in April. Rev. E. P. Rankin, of Princeton, is expected to supply the pulpit of the above church next Sabbath.

Wm. Beiter, machinist, Somerset street, opposite French's carriage factory, is agent for the Howe Sewing Machine. Persons in need of a good substantial machine will find it to their interest to give him a call.

Jeremiah VanWinkle and Wm. H. Voorhees are prominently talked of among the fire companies for chief engineer. Ex-Chief J. F. G. Frazer has also been talked of, but refuses a nomination. T. O. Doane and Geo. Hines are nominated for the office of first assistant engineer. Things are mixed.

Mrs. G. W. Stanford, Front street, Plainfield, is closing out her whole stock of boots and shoes at bargains unequalled. See advertisement in another column.

Mr. Elston Dunn has been reappointed deputy collector by Mr. C. Bucklew, collector for this district.

Mr. Onderdonk, our city surveyor and civil engineer, is about to leave us for Chicago, where he goes to receive an appointment. Our young friend, D. D. Rogers, is his successor.

Henry Goodwin, the lad who broke into the music store of A. Vanderbeek, Esq., a short time since, was on Friday last, sentenced to the Reform School.

Some fine specimen of paving stone may be seen at the real estate office of B. Mumford, opposite the depot. He proposes the coming season to furnish all in want of paving stone, such an article at low rates and of the best quality.

Quite an improvement has been made on Front street, on the corner of New, by building a neat and substantial fence around the old house on the corner, and setting the same in some feet, thereby widening the street. The fence in front of the premises of James Leonard, Esq., has also been set in.

FEARED CONSUMPTION AND TRIED SUICIDE.

Trenton, Jan. 15.—Fearing that he had tuberculosis and despondent over the recent death of his father, Walter Seaman, twenty-three years old, of 89 Ward avenue, Thursday night drank an ounce of laudanum at his home. The prompt response of a physician and the treatment that followed at a hospital saved the young man's life. Seaman is now a patient at St. Francis' Hospital, where the physicians say that he will recover. He declares he will make another try.

Seaman's father, William Seaman, was employed at watching the asphalt plant near Hill's Grove. While crossing the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks to get to his home on October 23, last year, he was struck by a train and instantly killed.

Three Have Close Call.

Three men who were on a Susquehanna train had a narrow escape from death yesterday at Newton, when a defective rail caused the rear end of the train to jump the tracks and go to the bottom of a thirty foot embankment, near Quarryville, several miles from here. The men were badly cut and bruised from broken glass but fortunately escaped serious injury.

Will Elect Deacons and Elders.

The weekly prayer meeting will be held at the Netherwood Reformed church Friday night, January 21, after which there will be an election of elders and deacons, it being a part of the work of completing the work of the work of completing the organization of the new church.

Goes to South America.

F. B. Newell, of Sherman avenue, the general export agent for a wholesale company, sailed today for Cuba. Mr. Newell will remain in South America until April, establishing agencies and promoting the interests of his concern.

Mr. Randolph's Address.

Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph will deliver an illustrated lecture on "From Jerusalem Through Samaria and Galilee to Damascus and Baal-Bek" at the First Baptist church tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Appointed Revisional Clerk.

J. E. Warner, of Cranford, who has been appointed clerk by Assemblyman Carlton B. Pierce, who is the head of the committee on the revision of laws, enters upon his duties Monday.

White Again Chairman.

The Republican City Committee of Elizabeth last night elected these officers: Chairman, James White; vice chairman, George J. Stewart; secretary, Neil McLeod; treasurer, Nathan R. Leavitt.

WHY FORT IS IN FAVOR OF DISFRANCHISEMENT.

Governor Fort was surprised to learn yesterday that one paragraph in his recent message to the Legislature led some persons to believe that he had overlooked an existing law concerning the penalty for bribery at elections. In the paragraph in question the Governor suggests that disfranchisement be substituted for fine or imprisonment as a penalty for bribery. Chapter 206 of the laws of 1906 provides for a five-year disfranchisement for the first offense, and perpetual disfranchisement, with a fine or five years in prison, or both, for a subsequent offense.

"I am thoroughly familiar with the law of 1906," said the Governor, "and had it in mind in making my recommendation. As I stated, the present criminal laws against bribery at elections are clear and stringent, but they are not enforced.

"The reason is that all the political parties engage in the improper, not to say the illegal, use of money at elections, and grand jurors will not indict. Prison penalties are apparently of no avail to check this class of crime. Disfranchisement alone would appeal to the popular sense as a just form of penalty, and the law would be enforced. That is my reason for suggesting the change."

LOST CONTROL OF SLED AND COASTED INTO TREE.

Chatham, Jan. 15.—A serious coasting accident occurred here at 5 o'clock Thursday evening, as a result of which one of the coasters, John Maloney, is at his home in a serious condition.

The boys were coasting on a heavy bobsled down the hill in Hillside avenue, and a number of trips had been made in safety. Maloney was steering when the accident occurred, and was about half way down the hill when he seemed to lose control of the sled and steered into a large tree by the roadside.

All the occupants of the bob received injuries more or less severe, but Maloney's was the most serious. He was unconscious when picked up, and did not recover for nearly an hour. Dr. B. A. Prager was summoned and brought him around. It was found that he was suffering from a dislocated wrist, several severe scalp wounds and a bruised spine. Although his condition is serious, it is not expected to terminate fatally.

DIVORCE SEASON IN EGYPT.

The departure of the last tourist, in April or early May, marks the beginning of the native social season, writes Harriet Quimby in Leslie's Weekly. During the winter the greater share of the men are too busy attending to the wants of travelers to pay much attention to their families or friends. Dragomans are away from their homes, shopkeepers are wolking overtime, and so, also, are their dozens of extra clerks, and even the children are busy gathering in the piasters which are scattered so lavishly when the tourist season is at its height.

When it is all over, the hustle and bustle give place to a different kind of hustle and bustle. The dragomans generally celebrate a successful season by getting married or divorced, and sometimes both. Divorce in Egypt does not entail the wearisome process or the heartburns that it does in this country. The husband can simply repudiate his wife for no other reason than that he is tired of life with her. In a short time he is at liberty to marry again. There are no distressing court proceeding and airing of family troubles.

Wives are less averse to being divorced than one might suppose. Collusion is by no means an unheard-of thing, and many wives take the initiative toward gaining the desired freedom. But for them it is less easy. Wives must have some definite charge, and simply being tired of a husband will not suffice. Besides weddings, which take place by the score, there are many parties during the summer—bathing parties especially, and feasts.

TRIMMING LINGERIE.

Just as the general lines and style of cut of undergarments vary from season to season, so will the theme in the ornamentation.

Laces of fine mesh have been supplanted by cluny, Irish crochet and square-mesh fillet. The introduction of these coarser laces is the note of this season's lingerie.

Then, too, allover tucking in thin mull is new. Many new models have this substantial quality, and there is a daintiness always present with fine tucks. The introduction of narrow bands of tucking instead of lace insertion gives a relief to those who are tired of open effects.

Solid embroidery is still trailing over yokes and sleeves. It is applied over the tiniest of tucks and is used in small and large flower patterns.

The trimming on this season's lingerie promises more durability and just as much rdecorative beautiy as that of previous years.

Dr. Dager to Speak Here.

Rev. Dr. Forest E. Dager, of Philadelphia, will teach the Sunday school lesson for January 23, in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. Dr. Dager brings out many valuable suggestions and all who are interested are invited to be present.

PASSPORTS.

Method of Applying For Them to the State Department.

Passports are issued to citizens of the United States upon application to the state department in Washington. The application must be accompanied by an affidavit attested by a notary public or other officer empowered to administer oaths stating that the applicant is a citizen and giving the place of birth and age, and it must be accompanied by the certificate of one other citizen to whom he is personally known that the declaration made by the applicant is true.

The application must be accompanied by a description of the person, particularly as to age, height, complexion, forehead, eyes, nose, mouth, chin, hair and face. Blank forms are furnished by the state department on application. The fee for each passport is $1. Citizens traveling abroad may also obtain passports by applying to United States ambassadors and ministers.

Where any person has made a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States and has resided in the United States for three years a passport valid for six months may be issued to him. This passport is not renewable and does not entitle the holder to the protection of this government in the country of which he was originally a citizen.—New York American.

MOUNT ETNA.

It Is Said to Hold All the Climates of the Earth.

Mount Etna has furnished more material for travelers' tales than any other mountain on earth. Astonished Englishmen of a century ago, who fell into the fashionable habit of climbing to its highest peak—and some did so, to the amazement of the Sicilians, even in the dead of winter—have left on record in the exuberant language of their day the emotions that thrilled their soul. "The man who treads Mount Etna," wrote one of these, "is a man above the world. Every river on the island can be traced from its mouth to its source.

"The characters," the same writer continues, "of all the climates of the earth can be detected—the frigid close around one, the temperate with its belt of trees just beneath and the tropical at the base of the mountain, with its vineyards and luxuriant groves. The great ocean around, with the islands of Lipari, Panari, Alicudi, Stromboli and Volcano, with their smoking summits, appear under your feet, and you look down upon the whole of Sicily as upon a map."

In addition to all the climates, Etna is reported to have trees that rival the giants of California, lakes that never thaw, bottomless caverns and salable snow.—Chicago News.

Why We Laugh.

Laughter seems to be a specialized form of either the scream of a startled or injured animal or the cry of triumph common to many beasts of prey. In children the cry of terror and the shout of laughter often shade into each other, and the young child escaping from pursuit will scream with laughter or fear, according to his chances of escape. Some unexpected event that causes slight alarm short of actual terror is the commonest cause of children's laughter, but in adults some sudden event that gives a sensation of triumph over others has much more influence. Really clever jokes seldom cause laughter, and it has been pointed out that a man chasing his hat will produce laughter far more hearty in character than the best efforts of the cleverest wit. The sight of ill fortune in another causes by contrast a feeling of triumph in ourselves. The ticklish parts of the body are for the most part the sites of important blood vessels, and the laughter produced in children by tickling is even more closely allied to the cry of pain.

The Cuckoo.

Where does the cuckoo lay its eggs? What is its staple diet? What course does it take in its autumn migration when it returns to its African haunts? These are questions that await satisfactory answers. Until it was found that the cuckoo laid its egg on the ground and subsequently carried it in its bill to a neighboring nest it was supposed that the bird fed largely on the eggs of smaller birds. This fallacy has been disproved. Probably in the whole range of British birds there is no other that can boast such curious domestic traits as the cuckoo. It makes no nest, does not attend to incubation duties and rears no young and apparently never sees the bird that is hatched from the egg that it surreptitiously places in the nest of some smaller bird. —London Globe.

Served Him Right.

"You're looking very gloomy today, Tomkins. What's the matter?"

"Matter! Do you know Miss Parno, the old maid that lives over the way? Dawkins told me that she was engaged to him, so just for the fun of the thing I went and proposed to her and she accepted me. Now I'm looking for Dawkins!"—London Tit-Bits.

Light.

Father—You seem to look at things in a very different light since your marriage. Newly Married Daughter—Well, so I ought after receiving fourteen lamps and nine candelabra for wedding presents.

It is easier to appear worthy of a position one does not hold than of the office one fills.—La Rochefoucauld.

Home Dollars Should Be Spent in Home Towns.

(By A. E. Force)

Many merchants who carry on business in suburban towns, or even cities, believe that it is utterly impossible to receive the patronage from their townspeople which is rightfully theirs. With a small railroad fare, a dollar the round trip, for example, and a small space of time separating their business houses from those of the larger cities, they hold to the opinion that the balance of money and time in their favor is not enough to swing local trade to them, in the face of the greater assortments and necessarily lower prices, because of larger buying facilities. In bulk, when the family shopper makes one of her regular buying excursions, these lower prices undoubtedly mean a great deal to the woman who must be careful of her expenditures.

It is indeed a difficult proposition, and one which requires every ounce of gray matter in the merchant's brain to successfully meet. These merchants, then, within a radius of twenty or twenty-five miles of a large city, who have acquired the habit of allowing this home trade to slip by, must face the issue frankly.

If the man of the family were the buyer, the suburban merchant would have an easier proposition ahead of him; for, with all due respect to the buyers of the other sex, they have not made good as broad-minded patrons of home trade. But if the merchant once win the confidence of the women purchasers of his town, if he can place the sentiment of the issue strongly enough before them, these natural advocates will fairly startle the merchant of the smaller cities with their loyal response.

Suburban Merchants, With City Support, Could Do City Merchandising.

Men know, and women should be told, that if the dollars which they now carry to outside cities were left in the home city or town, the local merchants would be able to offer merchandise at the "big city" prices and also display a much larger assortment of all lines in the store, issues which now take trade from the home town. Local merchants, if they will only realize their power, have certain great advantages over the managers of stores in the larger cities with whom they compete. They know, or should know, each customer personally; they know what street she lives on, without careful questioning; they can call patrons by name and touch pleasantly on local issues and legitimate town personals; they can promise immediate deliveries, with quicker "changes" or "refunds," should purchases prove unsatisfactory. But, most of all, they can give an individual and a closer attention than is possible for the sales people in the large city stores to offer. As the students in private schools receive personal attention, so can the patrons of suburban stores receive store service suited to their respective needs and wants; if a certain brand is desired, it can and should be procured for them, an action which invariably creates a feeling of good will for the personal interest displayed.

Think These Things Over.

Every dollar spent in an outside town means two dollars taken from the home town, for each dollar spent outside builds up the rival store at the expense of the local one. When the money is earned in the home town it should, for all logical reasons, be put in circulation there if it is a possible thing. A family that owns real estate, makes its home or operates any sort of a business in a town, is naturally directly interested in its growth and well being; and loyal home patronage of business houses will have an almost immediate and favorable reaction upon local conditions and home values. If a man is a landlord for a merchant every dollar spent in the home town hastens the day when the lease can be renewed at a higher figure. Think these things over.

To locate the cause of dead mercantile conditions in suburban communities is impossible; part of the fault is the merchant's for not going out after the business that belongs to him, and part of it lies with the families that do not go part way to the home merchants in making an effort to keep the money in the home town.

But as this argument is directed to the merchants, let me deal only with the consideration of this question, asking these dealers to see that their local newspapers do their part, as loyal citizens of the town or city, in working for the best home interests by appealing to the public.

Now, as we are speaking of a most important issue, let us be perfectly candid in the interests of improvement. Perhaps the reader feels the effect of conditions such as these; again, he may not be affected by them. In any event, always being absolutely frank, do you believe that the suburban merchant is doing all in his power to keep local trade at home?

At the risk of giving offence, the writer feels that he must state that almost without exception those suburban stores which have come under his consideration, in wealthy cities, too, are not getting anywhere near the volume of trade they should naturally receive. But no offence should be taken, for the remedy, not necessarily the fault, lies with the merchant, and his only fault is that he does not honestly and conscientiously seek out and apply the remedy.

Do Not Shun the Issue—Meet It.

It is this: Do not shun the issue as a subject too dangerous to even broach, but talk it over whenever possible, whenever a favorable opportunity arises, with the representative people of your town—men and women who come into the store but occasionally, who seem to like the establishment, but whose monthly accounts would not pay for the running of a bird cage, let alone a private house. Do not shun the subject, then. Ask the man to have his wife give the home house a call, to have her at least visit the home store before she goes to the "city," and purchase there if possible.

Tell this man friend that the finer and the more up-to-date the home stores become by loyal patronage the more chance will the town have for a steady, healthy growth. Tell him that the merchant is the one man in town without whose able assistance the community could never realize its fullest success. Tell him that this merchant needs and deserves home support; otherwise the stores in his home town must always be "shops" and not "stores;" that it is impossible to employ capable clerks and to do right by them if local support is not forthcoming.

In general, the husband will understand and appreciate these things more than his wife, who, in most cases, is the family buyer, and, at all events, he is probably better prepared to place the local cause before his better-half than the merchant is, and as a man not so personally interested in the direct case as the merchant, his words should have more effect.

Have Personal Talks With Customers

Still, whenever possible, seize an opportunity to have a sort of "let-us-explain-ourselves, madam" chat with the women themselves. It is good work done directly, and although you are the person most concerned, if handled in the right spirit those talks to the women themselves may bring forth even greater results than friendly chats with the men. If you can reach the strong and true sentiment of the situation, and you honestly offer larger assortments and more favorable prices (not cut prices) in the future, your cause will doubtless find many of the most loyal adherents on earth—women. Tell these women, and they will heartily concur with you, that women who take their trade out of town, when they can just as well patronize local merchants, are doing a real wrong, a wrong to the home town, a wrong to the home merchants and a wrong to themselves and their own best interests.

Do not harm the cause by letting it run away with you, for especially in speaking to a woman customer is there great need for diplomacy. If the subject is attacked, instead of led up to, there is danger of giving offence. Let the appeal be not alone one of home sentiment, but rather let the issue of sentiment be used to afford the home store a chance to make good. Tell them that on and after a certain date the house will be able to show a more complete line than ever before, a general average of favorable prices, a store service, a delivery system and a "money-back" plan which will mean something. Tell these women what you propose doing, and why; ask the courtesy of consideration, and if the merchandise makes good, ask that home patronage be given.

Then, if the support asked for comes in, approach the big city prices if you are operating a low-price store; or if it is a store catering to a clientele better provided with the world's goods, give better store service by employing the higest-grade help obtainable. A general raise in salary throughout the sales force will work wonders and will surprise the merchant by showing him that he has now high-grade salespeople in his store. A few dollars weekly is the main difference between a capable and a mediocre clerk; in other words, if the asked-for support comes from the public, deserve it.

Before anyone gets the idea that the city merchant who draws a large suburban trade is a second cousin to a pirate, one must remember that he has a right to go after outside trade; it shows that he is ambitious and progressive, but if he gets a remarkable share of it in any one town, it shows that the merchants there, or the people there, or both, do not realize the importance of home trade in the upbuilding of the town.

It is a good thing to study the merchandising methods of these big fellows; there is a great deal to be learned from them. A good prizefighter always learns the blow that in the past has defeated him.

United Efforts Necessary for Best Results.

In the building up of home trade, the best work can never be accomplished alone. The concerted efforts of all the progressive merchants in the town must be secured, and to this end a local merchants' association must be established, if it has not already been done. If it has been formed, and is not an active going concern it must be made so.

Some time ago a trade investigator wrote to the secretaries of commercial clubs in twelve different states, with an eye towards obtaining the weaknesses of the various organizations. These were some of the questions propounded:

What is your busiest day?

What is your dullest day?

Are the merchants live advertisers?

Are goods sold close, or on good margins?

Do you give trading stamps?

Is there good feeling or sharp competition among merchants?

Have you ever tried to "boost the town?"

What methods were used?

With what results?

From about five hundred replies there were obtained the following composite answers:

Saturday was the busiest day, with Monday and Friday the dullest. The merchants were not live advertisers. Goods were sold too close. Trading stamps or premiums were not given. Competition was very keen, and only fairly good feeling existed between the various business houses.

Efforts had been put forth to boom the towns, in most cases by subsidies or factory funds, and the general results pronounced failures. The main fault found was that the apparent good feeling between the merchants was merely on the surface.

When they met it was not to boom the local trade generally, but only to see that a competitor did not obtain any advantage. The men were long on promises, but short on action.

Poor Examples of Association Work.

In an Indiana town it was learned that there were three separate organizations—a commercial club, business men's association and a credit exchange. The majority of the business men belonged to all of the associations, and each one was fighting both of the other two, while individually the merchants were digging one another.

Most towns are at least moderately progressive, but before they do any "foreign mission work," let them do all there is to be done in attending to the work of "home missions." This progression in many cases spends money which should go to keep the home trade at home, in going after outside trade, just even as larger city merchants go after theirs. After the home business is well cared for it is time to make definite plans for expansion. There will be more money after the home trade has been kept where it belongs.

One good method is to get every dealer in town interested and enthusiastic upon the subject of a town advertising movement. Call a meeting of the local associations and dredge local issues. Have a good dinner every so often, and have as the guest of honor a successful merchant from out of town, a "big" man. Have him tell you frankly how your town looks from the outsider's standpoint. Wear clothes purchased from home clothiers, sit down to dinner served by a home caterer, smoke home-made cigars, ask questions, exchange views and methods, say some good words about fellow merchants, and then go home and boost! The next morning go down to the store—and boost!

The problem of raising and expending money is one which has given more than one organization trouble, and in many cases this problem is more difficult in the smaller towns. Collections, it seems from investigations, are easier than expenditures, because many of the members are loath to place this issue entirely at the good judgment of a able committee, and, consequently, without a unity of purpose, the best results cannot be obtained. Cut the chronic kicker in these organizations and be wary of the lukewarm member. Have old, but progressive heads for the presidency and the treasurer's berths; but a thoroughly live and rip-roaring "mover" must be placed in the secretary's chair. Have every member on some committee, one on which he is well fitted to serve. This gives him a live personal interest in things and should insure results.

An over-ambitious, or, rather, illogically ambitious, method was proved worthless in the Central West some time back. This was the method: Displays ads. were placed in local papers headed with "Blankville will be 50,000 in 1910." The advertisement went on to say that every citizen should wear a badge bearing that slogan for one month. This was in 1908, and Blankville still has its 12,000 souls, and if you speak of advertising you will get a growl for an answer—for they say that it doesn't pay.

Properly applied, however, association effort will bring forth the best sort of results, but the interest and the work must always be harmonious and mutually helpful.

What Local Advertising Can Do.

Local advertising, as personal advertising in the store, should not fear to face the issue of home trade frankly. It should request and give good reasons as to why the dollars made by citizens of a town, generally in that town, should be spent in that town. As to the regular advertising copy regarding merchandise, let it be good, strong, readable and honest. If the stores cannot each afford to employ a capable advertising man, let two, three, or even six stores joint employ one. This could be easily carried out, say with a dry store merchant, a dry goods and notion man, a furniture dealer, a haberdasher and others whose lines do not come into direct competition.

Working With the Local Editor.

Make the editor and the advertising manager of the local paper members of the merchants' association for their cause is yours, and they are always vitally interested in the growth and betterment of the town. You will find them broad-minded, loyal backers of your cause. They will help materially the running of the association itself, if you seek their advice, as well as its general result getting. Reverse the usual course of making these journalists come to you—go to them and watch what they will do for you.

In leaking of toy departments in large suburban cities, the writer knows personally of several merchants who will not put year-round toy departments in their establishments, contending "The big fellows will sell the toys, anyway; so what's the use?" Of course, the big fellows will sell the toys if we are not progressive enough to present them ourselves, and day after day we are losing money if the powerful spirit of the plaything is not in the store to draw in the dollars.

I have just a notion that the merchant is more at fault, and, on second thought, I will use the word "fault," than the out-of-town spender in this big issue of "home trade." We must go to the public, for we cannot expect them to come more than twenty-five per cent. of the way to us, and if they come that far we get our asked-for opportunity to make good.

The whole case has been laid before you, gentlemen. What are you going to do about it? Moll along in the conventional way?

Gentlemen, I believe you will do differently!

CHAPTER IV.

NO doubt the most absurd thing I could have done after the departure of Professor Keredec and his singular friend would have been to settle myself before my canvas again with the intention of painting, and that is what I did. At least, I resumed my camp stool and went through some of the motions habitually connected with the act of painting.

In fine, I sat there brush paddling my failure like an automaton and saying over and over aloud: "What is wrong with him? What is wrong with him?"

I came out of my varicolored study with a start, caused by the discovery that I had absentmindedly squeezed upon my palette the entire contents of an expensive tube of covalt violet.

The turpentine rag at least proved effective. I scoured away the last tokens of my failure with it, wishing that life were like the canvas and that men had knowledge of the right celestial turpentine. After that I cleaned my brushes, packed and shouldered my kit and, with a final imprecation upon all sausage sandwiches, took up my way once more to Les Trois Pigeons.

Striding along at a good gait and chanting sonorously, "On Linden when the sun was low," I left the rougher boscages of the forest behind me and emerged just at sunset upon an orderly fringe of woodland where the ground was neat and unincumbered and the trimmed trees stood at polite distances, bowing slightly to one another with small, well bred rustlings.

I stood upon Quesnay ground.

Before me stretched a short, broad avenue of turf, leading to the chateau gates. A slope was terraced with strips of flower gardens and intervals of sward, and against the green of a rising lawn I marked the figure of a woman pausing to bend over some flowering bush. The lady upon the slope was Mme. d'Armand, the inspiration of Amedee's "Monsier has much to live for!"

Once more this day I indorsed that worthy man's opinion, for, though I was too far distant to see clearly, I knew that roses trimmed Mme. d'Armand's white hat and that she had passed me no long time since in the forest.

I had come far out of my way, so I retraced my steps to the intersection of the paths and thence made for the inn by my accustomed route. Not far along the road from where I came into it stood an old, brown, deep thatched cottage, a branch of brushwood over the door prettily beckoning travelers to the knowledge that cider was here for the thirsty, and as I drew near I perceived that one availed himself of the invitation. A group stood about the open door, the lamplight from within disclosing the head of the house filling a cup for the wayfarer.

The latter was a most mundane and elaborate wayfarer indeed—a small young man very tightly made, like a jockey and point device in khaki, puttees, pongee cap, white and green stock, a knapsack on his back and a bamboo stick under his arm. He spoke, though with a detestable accent, in a rough and ready, picked up dialect of Parisian slang, while Pere Baudry contributed his share of the conversation in a slow patois. As both men spoke at the same time and neither understood two consecutive words the other said, it struck me that the dialogue might prove unproductive of any highly important results this side of Michaelmas. Therefore, discovering that the very pedestrian gentleman was making some sort of inquiry concerning Les Trois Pigeons, I came to a halt and proffered aid.

"Are you looking for Mme. Brossard's?" I asked in English.

The traveler uttered an exclamation and faced about with a jump, birdlike for quickness.

"Say," he responded in a voice of unpleasant nasality, finally deciding upon speech, "you're 'Nummeric'n, ain't you?"

"Yes," I returned. "I thought I heard you inquiring for"—

"Well, m' friend, you can sting me," he interrupted, with condescending jocularity. "My style French does f'r them camels up in Paris all night. But down here I don't seem to be gud enough f'r these sheep dogs. Anyway, they bark different. I'm lukkin' fer a hotel called Les Trois Pigeons."

I pointed to the lights of the inn flickering across the fields. "Yonder—beyond the second turn of the road."

"Oh, I ain't goin' there t'night! It's too dark t' see anything now," he remarked. "Dives and the choo-choo back t' little ole Trouville f'r mine! I on'y wanted to take a luk at this pigeon house joint."

"Do you mind my inquiring," I said, "what you expected to see at Les Trois Pigeons?"

"Why," he exclaimed as if astonished at the question, "I'm a tourist, makin' a pedestrum trip t' all the reg'ler sights," and, inspired to eloquence, he added as an afterthought, "as it were."

"But if you will pardon me," I said, "where did you get the notion that Les Trois Pigeons is one of the regular sights?"

"Ain't it in all the history books?"

"No; I don't think that it is mentioned in any of the histories or even the guidebooks."

"Look s-here," he said, taking a step nearer me, "in confest, now, on your woid, didn' more'n half them Jeanne d'Arc tamales and William the Conker live at that hotel wunst?"

"No."

"Stung again!" He broke into a sudden loud cackle of laughter. "Why, a feller at Trouville tole me 'at this Pigeon place was all three rings when it come t' history. Yessir!"

I tarried no longer, but, bidding this good youth and the generations of Baudry good night, hastened on to my belated dinner.

"Amedee," I said when my cigar was lighted and the usual hour of consultation had arrived, "isn't that old lock on the chest where Mme. Brossard keeps her silver getting rather rusty?"

"Monsieur, we have no thieves here. We are out of the world."

"Yes, but Trouville is not so far away, and strange people go to Trouville—grand dukes, opera singers, jockeys, gamblers, tourists"—

"Truly," assented Amedee.

"It follows," I continued, "that many strange people may come from Trouville. In their excursions to the surrounding points of interest"—

"Eh, monsieur, but that is true," he interrupted. "There was a strange monsieur from Trouville here this very day."

* * * * * * *

I had sprained my ankle in a poppy field and must spend little less than a week of idleness within the confines of Les Trois Pigeons, and, reclining among cushions in a wicker long chair looking out from my pavilion upon the drowsy garden on a hot noontide, I did not much care.

A heavy step crunched the gravel, and I heard my name pronounced in a deep inquiring rumble, the voice of Professor Keredec, no less. Nor was I greatly surprised, since our meeting in the forest had led me to expect some advances on his part toward friendliness or at least in the direction of a better acquaintance.

"Here I am," I called, "in the pavilion, if you wish to see me."

"Aha, I hear you become an invalid, my dear sir!" With that the professor's great bulk loomed in the doorway against the glare outside. "I have come to condole with you, if you allow it."

"To smoke with me, too, I hope," I said, not a little pleased.

"That I will do," he returned and came in slowly, walking with perceptible lameness. "The sympathy I offer is genuine. It is not only from the heart; it is from the latissimus dorsi," he continued, seating himself. "I have choosed this fine weather for rheumatism of the back."

KILLED LOOKING FOR A JOB.

Trenton, Jan. 15.—The body of the man found along the railroad tracks at Morrisville Thursday morning was identified later in the day as that of William C. Gill, of 625 South Warren street. The identification was made by Gill's wife and her brother.

Gill was formerly a machinist, but had not worked steadily for some time, aside from doing odd jobs and running errands for persons living in South Trenton.

Wednesday he left home with the determination of trying to secure employment at anything that might come his way. He looked around all day, but could find no job. He then started for Morrisville on a freight train, and had decided to go to the West Morrisville yards to see if he could get employment on the railroad when he fell from the train.

SALOON FRACAS ENDS IN A CRACKED SKULL.

Passaic, Jan. 15.—Thomas Carrina, of Oak street, is in a serious condition in the General Hospital with a fracture of the skull, as a result of a blow on the head received in a saloon fracas Thursday.

Locked up in cells at the county jail are Clarence Marshall and Harold Tobias, both of this city, who are held without bail on charges of atrocious assault.

The police had a chase after the prisoners, both of whom ran out of a saloon on lower Main avenue and made an effort to escape, but were cornered and captured by Detective-Sergeants Turner and Crawbuck at the points of revolvers.

The detectives say they were unable to discover any reason for the assault. There were several negroes in the barroom when the incident occurred, but most of them left before the officers arrived. However, it was learned that the blow which caused the fractured skull was inflicted with a pool cue.

AMBOY SCHOONER ON NEW HAMPSHIRE REEF.

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 15.—Beating into port for shelter from a rising northwest snow storm, the three-masted schooner Annie F. Conlin, of Portsmouth, bound from South Amboy, N. J., for Portland, ran on Steelman Rock early yesterday. The vessel lies in a very exposed position and as she is heavily loaded with coal her chances of getting off safely are slim.

The Conlin carried a crew of eight men, under Captain B. M. Moody. She is owned by Freeman R. Garret, of Portsmouth. A tug has gone to the relief of the crew.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., will hold a regular conclave on Monday night.

The Women's Relief Corps was unable to hold its regular meeting last night on account of the severe storm, and it was postponed to a later date.

If you suffer from backache—

From any disease of the kidneys.

Be cured to stay cured.

Doan's Kidney Pills make lasting cures.

Plainfield people testify.

Here's one cast of it:

Mrs. J. Mottley, 546 West Sixth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of kidney trouble three years ago and I have never had a return of it since. I am glad to confirm the public statement I gave in favor of this remedy at that time."

The endorsement to which Mrs. Mottley refers was given on August 26th, 1905, and was substantially as follows: "About two months ago I was seized by a severe backache and dull pains in the top and back part of my head. I could not rest well and had no strength or energy to do my housework. Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at Randolph's drug store, gave me prompt relief and I am convinced that they are a first-class remedy."

STATE OF NEW JERSEY AS A FISHING CENTRE

Atlantic City, Jan. 15.—Massachusetts may be forced to scale the sacred cod fish from its escutcheon and hand it over to New Jersey as the chief centre of the codfish industry according to experts who appeared before the federal board of engineers yesterday to plead for a deeper harbor into the inlet. Declaring that only the danger of crossing the shoals of the bars prevents the use of big fishing steamers.

Heads of the fishing syndicate cupted figures to show first that the fishing industry is dying out on the New Foundland banks and other former harvest grounds of the deep, and that Atlantic City is now the real geographical centre of the big coast fishing business. Claims were made that Atlantic City has the finest shipping facilities on the coast, and that with a safe harbor would become the greatest point of supply for food fish destined to either Philadelphia or New York markets.

Captain A. H. Francis, owner of a fishing fleet, who lost a steamer that tried to cross the bar several weeks ago, declared that over 3,000,000 pounds of fresh cod are shipped from Atlantic City to New York and Philadelphia each winter, and that with deep water for use of steamers the industry would be worth over $1,000,000 a year to the resort. He declared that enough cod could be caught here to supply the market and keep down the price when harbors are frozen up and fishing smacks unable to get out. An inlet yacht captain stated that the pleasure yachting industry alone brings in over $50,000 a season from visitors who take sea trips. The arguments were presented to discredit claims that the commerce on this section of the coast would not warrant expense of deepening the inlet channels.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS COST N. J. $11,569,640.

Trenton, Jan. 15.—The annual report of State Superintendent Charles J. Baxter, submitted to Governor Fort yesterday, shows that during the last school year New Jersey expended $17,227,331 for school purposes. The current expenses for the year were $11,569,640, on the basis of enrollment. This is an average of $27.25 for each pupil and on the basis of average attendance $35.36.

The valuation of all school property is estimated by the State Superintendent at $33,900,466, an increase over the preceding year of $5,318,108. The schools have a seating capacity for 426,719 pupils.

The total number of teachers employed is 10,734, of whom 9,636 are women.

BABE NEARLY FROZEN.

Police Take Charge of Infant of Railroad Victim.

Carrying in her arms an infant girl without shoes or stockings, a young Polish girl alighted from a Central Railroad train at Elizabeth yesterday. The child's mother was killed last Monday at McKeesport, Pa., while crossing the tracks. There are two other children, who are with the father in Pennsylvania.

The baby was being taken to a sister in Perth Amboy. It was nearly frozen. The police interfered and placed the young woman and baby in care of Mrs. Annie McCormack, matron at headquarters. Later they were sent to Perth Amboy.

John C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, continues to improve at Muhlenberg Hospital from the injuries he received in a fall at his home several weeks ago.

Isaac Randolph, of West Front street, father of Councilman Charles C. Randolph, is detained at home with a severe attack of pneumonia. He was taken early in the week.

WORLD'S FAIR IN NEW YORK.

Company Incorporated to Open It in 1913.

Albany, Jan. 15.—Application was made yesterday to Secretary of State Koenig for the incorporation of a company under the name of the New York Permanent Exposition and Ter-Centennial World's Fair Company, comprising prominent New York business men, who propose to hold a world's fair and inaugurate a permanent industrial exposition in New York city in 1913.

The object of this world's fair, as explained by the promoters, is to celebrate the original settlement on Manhattan Island, as well as the purchase by Peter Minuit from the Indians 300 years ago, and which led to the permanent settlement of the island by Dutch colonizers.

KNIGHTS TAKE ODD GAME FROM RED MEN'S FIVE

Knights of Columbus bowlers won two out of three games from the Red Men's quintet in a Fraternal League series on Campbell's alleys last night. After the Knights chalked up victories in the first and second games the Red Men took a big brace, rolled excellent tenpins, and trounced their conquerors in a runaway game by the score of 947 to 792. In this contest Willett and Nash were at their best and posted scores of 218 and 209, which were the highest marks in the series. The scores:

STEALS $2, GETS SEVEN YEARS.

Prison Record of Youth Influences Judge in Passing Sentence.

William Muth, twenty-two years old, of Philadelphia, was sentenced to serve sevens years in the New Jersey State Prison yesterday at Trenton by Judge Gnichtel for a burglary the proceeds of which only netted him $2.

The young man broke into the home of Mrs. Van Cleef, in West Front street, last winter and stole articles on which he realized $2 in a pawnshop.

In passing sentence yesterday Judge Gnichtel said that Muth had spent the larger part of his life in prison and he considered it best that he should remain there, so he inflicted the seven year sentence.

Saves Boy's Life with Hockey Stick.

John Laviski, fifteen years old, with a hockey stick saved the life of Charles Sipp last night at Bloomfield. Sipp was skating on Oakes' Pond, along the Third River, when he broke through the ice. His cries were heard by Laviski, who was on another part of the pond. The lad skated to where Sipp was struggling and extended the end of his hockey stick to him. Sipp seized it and the lad pulled him to safety.

Draft Belleville Annexation Bill.

The legislative committee of the Belleville Annexation Association drafted a bill providing for the annexation of Belleville to Newark. Senator Harry V. Osborne will introduce the bill in the State Legislature.

JERSEY DEFERS ACTION ON INCOME TAX SCHEME

It was stated at the executive office at Trenton today that Governor Fort would not communicate to the Legislature before Monday, January 24, the amendment to the United States Constitution proposed by Congress with reference to the power to levy a tax on incomes. In fact, the Legislature will not receive any further communications from the Governor until week after next, for the reason that Mr. Fort has arranged to leave Trenton for Washington on Monday afternoon to attend the conference of Governors, which will be held at the national capital on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Mr. Fort is compelled to arrive in Washington the day before the conference in order that he may carry out his work as chairman of the committee of arrangements to which he was appointed at the time the first conference of Governors was held under the administration of President Roosevelt. He will be in the State House for a short time Monday morning, but only long enough to look after his mail and he will be unable to receive callers or transact anything but pressing business.

The Governor will return from Washington and resume the reins of State government on Friday of next week. During his absence from the State, President of the Senate Joseph S. Frelinghuysen will be acting Governor.

Damages for Foul Odors.

New Brunswick, Jan. 15.—The jury in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Stanislaus Dregler against the Roessler and Hasslacher Chemical Company of Perth Amboy returned a verdict after an hour's deliberation Thursday afternoon for the plaintiff for $610. The yswed because of objectionable odors from the factory of the defendants, who manufacture chemicals, and there are four other like suits pending. The result of these suits may lead to the company seeking another location for their plant.

Leaps From Hospital Window, Dies.

After apparently recovering from an operation, Sigmund Akerly, fifty-seven years old, leaped from his cot on the second story of the General Hospital at Paterson yesterday afternoon, opened the window and dropped head first to the ground. He was picked up unconscious and died soon afterward. He was taken to the hospital suffering from appendicitis.

Mrs. L. E. Barkalew, of Lincoln place, who fell on the icy sidewalks a few days ago and broke her wrist, is improving slowly.

COLLECTOR'S REPORT OF UNION COUNTY FINANCES

County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt, submitted his annual report to the Board of Freeholders last week and it shows that Union county is financially the finest county in the State. The report shows that the liabilities of the county are $874,000, while the assets in county lands and buildings, etc., are $858,750. There is not a county in the State, he said, that has enough ready assets to offset liabilities. The annual report of the colector shows that the total receipts of the county, for the year just closed, are $2,021,614.81, and the disbursements $1, 597,833.51, leaving a balance of $423,781.30.

Out of the balance the State school tax, which will be due January 20, and amounts to $320,715.27, must be paid. Other accounts to be paid out of the balance are: $1,200 to the National Guard, $22,000 to the hospitals, $8,000 to the Sinking Fund Commissioners, $832.77 to the new courthouse account, and $673.99 to the Sheridan House bond account. These accounts subtracted from the balance, leave $70,359.27. There is due from municipalities for their share in the payment of county road bonds, due October 1, 1909, $51,315.42, which added to the balance of $70,359.57 leaves a balance for the year of $131,674.69, against a balance last year of $103,481.93. The figures show that the county this year saved $18,000 more than the year before.

The liabilities of the county are: County road bonds, $200,000; New Court House accounts, $576,000; Sheridan House bonds, $28,000; and road improvement bonds, $70,000. The assets are: County land and buildings, $802,750, and Sinking Fund Commission, $48,000, out of which the county owes $8,000.

Mr. Leavitt attributes the increase in the county receipts to the increase in the county's business. He said that the change of the county offices from the fee system to the salary basis also makes the receipts much larger. That the new system is a saving to the county he said, is made apparent by the fact that in the court account there is a balance of $5,000, something that has never occurred before, as this account has always been overdrawn. The saving in this account, Mr. Leavitt says, is due undoubtedly to the fact that the Sheriff's office has been on the salary basis.

PLUG FROZEN; HOSE SHORT; SUMMIT HOUSE BURNED.

Summit, Jan. 15.—The home of Robert C. Wilson, in Springfield avenue, was almost totally destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon. It is supposed a defective chimney caused the fire. The first alarm turned in summoned the hook-and-ladder company, but when the members of that company, arrived at the house they found the entire roof ablaze. When a line of hose was connected with a plug nearly opposite the burning house the plug was found to be frozen. A general alarm was turned in, and Union Hose Company and Hose Company No. 2 doubled their hose, but found they did not have sufficient pipe to reach from another hydrant located about a block distant from the frozen plug.

It was necessary to send to the Union Hose Company's headquarters for additional hose. The fire in the meantime gained such headway that the efforts of the firemen counted for little. After several hours' work the fire was extinguished, but the third story of the house and the roof had been destroyed. The interior of the house was ruined by water.

While the firemen were battling with the blaze, Joseph Murray, a member of the Chemical Company, and Arthur White, a member of Union Hose Company, became involved in a fight over possession of the nozzle of a line of hose. Murray struck White in the face. The latter appealed to Policeman Frederick Sigler to arrest Murray. The policeman ordered the men to attend to their duty. The Fire and Police Committee of Common Council, it is said, will make an investigation of the fight between Murray and White.

PASTOR GETS DEATH THREAT.

Letter Demands That Church Members Pass On New Building.

A Black Hand letter threatening him with death unless he conforms to the desires of a minority of the congregation of the Lithuanian Church of St. Peter and St. Paul has been received by the Rev. Bartholomew Zindzius, pastor of the church, in Elizabeth. The letter demands that Father Zindzius permit the appointment of a committee from church members to act on the proposition of building the new $75,000 church.

"If you do not do as we want you, you will die like the priest in Newark did last spring," says the letter. Since the proposition to erect the church came up a small band of men demanded that the building question be placed in the hands of a committee. Such action, Father Zindzius maintains, is not in conformity with the diocesan laws, which stipulate that the question must be settled by the diocesan Bishop, the vicar general, the pastor and two trustees.

MONTCLAIR TO RAISE PAY OF ITS POLICMEN

Montclair is apparently in favor of increasing the efficiency of its police force by making some changes in the system as well as increasing the pay of the men. Councilman Wrench introduced an ordinance which will provide for a night and day force in the department and will fix the salary of the officers until 1914.

Under the provisions of the new ordinance Chief Gallagher would receive $2,100 a year instead of $1,800; a sergeant, $1,400 instead of $1,300; roundsmen, $1,300 instead of $1,100, and the patrolmen a salary as fixed by the State law and adopted by the voters at the election last November.

Under the law a patrolman's salary was $800 when he starts and is increased at the rate of $50 a year until the maximum $1,200 is reached. These figures are not to be reduced nor increased until 1914.

Comparison with the population of Montclair with this city would indicate that with the gradual increase calculated on the basis of figures of the last census, the Plainfield police have a considerably larger population to guard, but receive smaller pay.

WESTFIELD EXCISE FEE TO BE RAISED TO $500

Westfield's excise fee is to be raised again this year if the program of its new Council is carried out. An amendment to the excise ordinance was introduced at an adjourned meeting of the Council, Saturday night, to increase the retail license fee from $350 to $500 a year, and the wholesale license fee from $250 to $350 a year.

If this amendment is finally carried Westfield and Elizabeth will be second to Plainfield in the county for high license fee. The fee in this city is $1,000.

Mayor Fisk, of this city, as president of the State Excise Commission, like most sensible men, says that the solution of the liquor problem can not be found in prohibition. He has so written the Legislature.

SENTENCE TWO POLITICIANS TO LONG PRISON TERMS.

Two politicians were among the offenders sentenced by Judge Blair in the County Court at Jersey City yesterday. John J. Powers, ex-custodian of the City Hall, was committed to the penitentiary for one year for going on a straw bail bond for the appearance of a person arrested for disorderly conduct in the police court, and James F. Connolly, a Democratic worker in the Second Ward of Jersey City, who gave a bail bond in the County Court for two pickpockets, giving property he did not own as surety, was sentenced to State prison for five years.

Connolly's counsel filed notice of appeal and his client was released on $10,000 bail, furnished by his father, Patrick F. Connolly, a wealthy contractor. While the appeal is pending Connolly will be tried for manslaughter. He is accused of having shot and mortally wounded Joseph Marshall during a factional row after a Democratic primary. He was put on trial seven months ago on this indictment but the jury disagreed.

Powers was originally a Democrat, then became a Republican, joined the New Idea faction, and was its leader in the First Ward. He was appointed custodian of the City Hall as a New Idea man, but had a clash with the New Idea leaders and drifted back into the Democratic fold.

DEBATE INAUGURATION DATE.

House Resolution Making It in April Goes Over.

Washington, Jan. 15.—The House devoted the greater part of yesterday to consideration of the Henry resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution providing that the terms of the President, the Vice-President and members of Congress shall begin the fourth Thursday in April, instead of March 4, as at present. The resolution went over without action on a motion to adjourn.

A few minutes after the House met at noon the President's message on conservation was received and read. An omnibus pension bill was passed whereupon consideration was given the Henry resolution.

DEEDS COMMISSIONERS TERMS TO SOON EXPIRE.

Secretary of State Dickinson has prepared a list of the commissioners of deeds for the information of the Legislature, which will be required to hold a joint session for the appointment of as many of these officers as is deemed necessary for each of the counties. The names of the present commissioners of deeds in this city whose terms of office expire May 1, 1910, are as follows: W. C. MacNaughton, First ward; Joseph T. Vail, Second ward; Joseph P. W. Taylor, Third ward; Frederic J. Huff, Harvey R. Linbarger, Fourth ward.

CARS THAT HAVE MADE GOOD

Automobile buyers might be pardoned if they felt a little bit bewildered right now. There are so many new cars being announced and so many radical claims being made for them, that buyers are apt to be a little up in the air.

You can't make a mistake if you buy a car of established reputation. A car that has stamped upon it a big, successful reliable name. A car with a record. A car that the people have bought, in quantities.

You might make a mistake buying some other kind of a car. A new car may be a good car, but no one knows that it is until it has been thoroughly tried out.

You take no risk when you buy a Chalmers-Detroit car. Our cars have made good for years.

In two seasons of Motor contests Chalmers-Detroit stock cars have won 89 firsts, 32 seconds and 21 thirds. "The Motor Age" "Record" gives the Chalmers-Detroits title of the Champion cars of the year.

Orders for more than two-thirds of our entire allotment for 1910 have already been booked. We believe all remaining spring deliveries will be booked at the end of the Garden Show week.

NEWSPAPER BURNED OUT

Westfield Standard Plant Destroyed in Thompson Building. Fire.

LOSS IS TWELVE THOUSAND.

Town Engineer's Maps and Council Meeting Place Gone—Origin of the Blaze a Mystery.

Fire did over $12,000 worth of damage to Assemblyman Lloyd Thompson's building, in which are the municipal offices, and its contents, in Prospect street, Westfield, yesterday.

The flames were discovered by Charles Clark, a Broad street merchant, who was on his way home. Mr. Clark saw flames leaping from the first and second story windows of the building, and ran to the firehouse, where he turned in the alarm.

When the department reached the scene the front of the building was a roaring furnace. The flames broke out under the front stairways and extended to both sides. Chief Decker had his men run three streams into the structure, and the large volume of water quickly had the fire under control, but not until the fire had almost eaten out all of the woodwork upon both floors. Two large safes belonging to the town of Westfield stood in the front of the building, where the floor fortunately held together. The safes escaped damage.

The Thompson building was occupied by the Union County Standard as a newspaper and job printing office. Robert V. Hoffman, formerly of this city, is editor of the paper. The Standard occupied the entire first floor. Assemblyman Thompson, who is also town clerk of Westfield, occupied the greater part of the second floor with his suit of law offices. One other room was occupied by Harold Thompson, his brother, who is Assemblyman Thompson's private secretary. A room in the rear of the building was occupied by Town Engineer Vars.

The building has been leased by the town of Westfield as a town hall, and alteration were being made to the rear to provide police headquarters. The Standard Publishing concern is erecting a building in Elm street, where the concern was to move in the spring to make room for the town offices. Enginger Vars' office suffered mostly from smoke damage to maps and papers. The loss to the town property is estimated at $100.

The Standard Publishing concern's plant was almost totally destroyed. All of the machinery of the office is ruined and the files and records of the concern, not kept in the safe, were burned. The loss to this concern is estimated at $5,000, partially covered by insurance.

The damage to Assemblyman Thompson's building is estimated at $5,000, covered by insurance. Mr. Thompson's law office suffered considerably from smoke and water damage. His office loss will reach $1,000, fully insured. Harold Thompson lost over $500 worth of carpenter tools and several hundred dollars' worth of valuable mahogany furniture, which he had stored in the building.

Assemblyman Thompson was in Washington when the fire took place. Harold Thompson moved his brother's law office to the Pearsall building today. The Standard Publishing Concern has opened an office at 24 Elm street, and will equip a printing plant in the Gale Clubhouse property, which is a part of the site of the concern's new building in Elm street.

The cause of the fire is a mystery.

Yesterday afternoon and evening a reception was held at the home of the young man's parents, when he received a large number of gifts.

ISAAC S. RANDOLPH DEAD

Father of Councilman C. C. Randolph Succumbs to Pneumonia.

AGED SIXTY-THREE YEARS.

Fought at Gettysburg—Member of Eleventh New Jersey Volunteers—Funeral on Wednesday.

Isaac S. Randolph, father of Councilman Charles C. Randolph, died at his home, 1125 West Front street, yesterday afternoon, following a short attack of pneumonia. He was taken ill on Wednesday with a heavy chill and pneumonia developed rapidly. On Friday there was a change for the worse and from that time Mr. Randolph failed very fast.

Mr. Randolph was born at New Brooklyn and with the exception of a couple of years, when he served in the Civil War, has resided in this city. He enlisted in the Eleventh Regiment, N. J. Vols., which was recruited at Trenton, and took part in the battle of Gettysburg, and for a time served in the hospital corps.

One of the proudest achievements of his war service was the fact that he was successful in bringing a comrade home from the battlefield, before he died of a wound which had almost severed his windpipe. He returned to complete his enlistment.

Mr. Randolph was at one time elected a member of the Common Council from the Fourth ward, but at the suggestion of the Mayor, resigned for the purpose of becoming street commissioner. He was only in office but a short time when he retired. During the progress of the laying of the brick pavement, Mr. Randolph was one of the inspectors. He was engaged in the contracting business for many years. He had a large circle of friends and was highly esteemed by everyone. He was a man of great integrity and was admired for many excellent qualities.

Surviving are a wife, two sons, Blanchard E. Randolph and Councilman Charles C. Randolph and one daughter, Mrs. Louis Tallamy. The funeral will be held from the late home Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and Rev. Charles S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, will be in charge. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

JOHN WHITNEY BAKER TO WED TOMORROW

The marriage of John Whitney Baker, son of Mrs. John T. Baker, of this city, and Miss Theodora Faber, will take place tomorrow afternoon at All Souls' church, New York city. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Faber, of Riverside Drive, New York. The groom is well-known here. He is a graduate of Princeton University and has been prominent as a golfer, being a member of the Plainfield Country Club. Rev. Dr. Thomas Slicer, rector of All Souls' church, will perform the ceremony.

The bride, who will wear a costume of white satin with point lace and orange blossoms, will be attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Faber, as maid of honor. The Misses Gertrude Mills, Ruth Miller, Isabel Goodnow, Ethel Hamilton, Helen Van Duzen, Adrienne Fick, of New York, will be bridesmaids.

Howard Peake, of New York, will be the best man and the ushers will be Willard Wadsworth, R. S. Rowland, Howard Beebe, of this city; Herbert Mills, Marshall Mills, William Bours, Lodolph Conklin and Weld Stevens, of New York. After the church ceremony, the bride's parents will give a reception at their home for the couple.

Told of Student Volunteer Movement

James R. Joy, who attended the convention held at Rochester, N. Y., under the auspices of the Student Volunteer Movement, spoke of that gathering at the First M. E. church last night in place of the regular sermon. Mr. Joy gave an interesting account of the convention, also telling of what has already been accomplished in the past. His remarks were helpful and served to greatly interest the congregation in this religious work.

"The West Between and Beyond."

The Women's Home Mission Society of the First Baptist church, will meet tomorrow afternoon. The topic will be "The West Between and Beyond," and Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen will present a paper on the wide expanse of the country's forestry possessions. Mrs. Wainwright will lead the devotional exercises with the theme, "My Duty Towards Him."

WHERE ARE THE DEAD?

Rev. Mr. Broek's Idea of What Follows When Earthly Life is Extinct.

HE DISCUSSES THE BELIEFS.

"Soul-sleep" Only a Poetical Expression—Does Not Believe in a Purgatory.

"Where are the Dead?" was the theme of an interesting discourse given at Trinity Reformed church, last night, by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, it being a continuation of the sermon a week previous. Pastor Broek took for his text, 2d. Cor., 5:8: "Absent from the Body, Present with the Lord." Last evening he spoke of the condition of the soul during the interval between death and the general resurrection, in which soul and body will be separated. In part he said:

"What does the Bible teach concerning the condition of the soul during the interval? We know that the body, the mortal part of man is in the grave, but where is the soul?

"Various answers have been given to this question. Materialism, ancient and modern, says that the soul perishes along with the body and when the functions of the body stop, the inhabitant ceases to be. Another erroneous theory is that of soul-sleep. That word soul-sleep, referring to death, beautiful though the expression is, is only a poetical expression, and when death is spoken of in the Bible, as sleep, it only refers to the body. While body and soul are separated, the body sleeps—which passes so rapidly and which is an unconscious sleep, which lasts for a moment."

Still another theory presented and discussed was that of purgatory. Continuing Pastor Broek said:

"The Bible gives us an answer so clear on the condition of the soul after it becomes a disembodied spirit, that there can be no doubt about its teaching. It teaches plainly that at death the soul of the redeemed immediately goes to heaven and is with Christ. There is no intermediate state or place. Jesus said to the dying thief, 'I say unto thee, today thou shalt be with me in Paradise.'

"The poor dying wretch made a request of Christ, and said: 'Lord, Remember me when Thou Comest into Thy Kingdom,' and Jesus said unto him I will remember you sooner than you think or know. This very day you will stand with me on the floors of heaven.

"Furthermore, it is impossible to read the words of Paul without seeing that absence from the body means the immediate presence with the Lord. Death with Paul was synonymous with presence with Christ in Heaven."

The pastor stated he would continue his series of sermons on heaven next Sunday evening.

TWO ADDRESSES GIVEN AT THE FIRST BAPTIST.

An illuminated lecture by L. V. F. Randolph was given before a large congregation at the First Baptist church, last night, it being a description of his recent journey through a part of the Holy Land—a trip from Jerusalem by the way of Damascus to Baal-Bek. Mr. Randolph gave his lecture first, showing about fifteen or twenty fine views afterward.

The lecture was prepared with the greatest care and showed much thought and attention as to detail, while the views among some of the finest shown, gave the audience a clear idea of the country traveled by Mr. Randolph.

In the morning the pulpit was occupied by Rev. Walter Calley, of Boston, representing the Laymen's Missionary Movement. His address was part of an effort to arouse an interest in every Christian for the evangelization of the whole world. He brought with him echoes of the recent big convention held in New York, giving interesting impressions of that gathering.

Make a Complaint.

A complaint has been formulated and will be sent by residents of the West End to Mayor Charles J. Fisk regarding the throwing of snow upon cleaned sidewalks by the trolley company's snow plow. In the complaint it is alleged that the plow operated by the employes of the road threw snow from the side of the street on to sidewalks which had already been cleaned by the property owners.

Announce Engagement.

Frederick James Mitchell, of Providence, R. I., formerly of this city, announces the engagement of his daughter, Catharine Perry, to Howard W. Cobbs, of this city. Miss Mitchell was a favorite in colored society here. Mr. Cobbs conducts a tailoring establishment. The wedding will take place in May.

PRESENCE OF MIND PREVENTED BIG FIRE

Women, sometimes, "lose their heads," when a lamp upsets, but this cannot be said of Mrs. E. M. Dorthy and her eldest daughter, of 20 Madison flats, at West Front and Grove streets.

About 7 o'clock last evening Mrs. Dorthy's ypungest daughter was passing through the rooms. She misjudged the route, bumped into a table, which held a kerosene lamp. When all this occurred Miss Dorthy was in the parlor and the mother was in the kitchen. Little Miss Dorthy screamed and everybody ran to the scene.

Miss Dorthy picked up the lamp as her mother held the curtains and pitched it into the street. That was all right, as far as it went, but the flames in some manner ignited with the blinds on the lower flat, which attracted the attention of a pedestrian on Grove street. He saw the blaze and sent in an alarm.

The fire department responded with its usual promptness and all that was needed to extinguish the blaze was one tank of chemical.

MANDY'S TROUBLES CAUSED BY HER DOGS

"Mandy" must get a license for "Nero" or she will lose the handsome Newfoundland which she avers guards the skirts which occasionally hang on her wash line. Mandy had to tell Judge Runyon this morning why she was harboring dogs which had no license tags attached to their collars and she explained with such a frankness that the court room habitues were convulsed with mirth.

When asked why she had so many dogs about her place Mandy said that she knew of no better guardian of the goods entrusted to her care. She is a laundress and takes pride in getting just the right amount of starch where it will swish to the best advantage, and because her brother was sick and she was taking care of him she had to spend most of her money for medicine. Anyway, Prince, Jim, Nellie and the other canines will have to be disposed of by next Saturday or Mandy Dunham will have a whole lot of licenses to pay for.

CENSURED AND FINED FOR MALICIOUS MISCHIEF

William Hahn, Theodore Merklinger and Frank Tetlow faced Judge Runyon this morning in the city court and were fined eight dollars each for the acts of malicious mischief with which they were charged. The young men paid their fines and were released after Judge Runyon had lectured them on the evil effect of establishing a precedent of too much leniency in cases of this kind.

Judge Runyon said that he was impressed with the fact that they had made good the damage they had caused and this fact alone showed that their intentions were good in the matter of wanting to do the right thing, but he also assured assured them that the case would if brought to the attention of the grand jury, would in all probability brought the young men a heavy fine and possibly imprisonment. It is not at all the desire of the judge to have other cases of a similar nature brought before him, in fact he wishes to discourage the mischief makers who occasionally cause disturbances in this city and he has great hopes that those inclined to that kind of amusement will not attemut it here.

Furnish Y. W. C. A. Rooms.

The hall and large room in the annex to the Y. W. C. A. have been handsomely furnished in excellent taste by Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, who is very much interested in this work. The hall has been furnished with wicker furniture, draperies and floor covering which are very artistic, and the same is true of the large room. A handsome painting by Jonas Lie, entitled "October," has also been loaned for the decoration of the large room.

Y. W. C. A. Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Young Women's Christian Association will be held at the association tonight, when reports for the year will be presented and there will be addresses by James R. Joy and Mrs. Stephen Baker, of New York. There will also be the mid-winter exhibit of the work of the various classes this afternoon and evening.

EULOGIZE DR. RICHARDS

Impressive Service at Crescent Ave. Church Held in His Memory.

LOCAL MINISTERS SPEAK.

Rev. Dr. Zelie Presides at Special Service for Beloved Divine—Large Attendance.

Behind a black draped pulpit symbolic of the mourning for the late Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, who for eighteen years ministered to the spiritual wants of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, five ministers and two laymen paid tributes to the memory of one who was characterized as a man of exceptional character last night in the Crescent Avenue Church. Music appropriate to the services was sung by the quartet choir. The offering taken was for the hospital because of the mixed congregation. Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie presided and introduced the speakers.

The meeting opened with the singing of "Crossing the Bar" by the choir. The invocation was offered by Rev. Mr. Newell, of Orange. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, read the Scripture and Rev. Dr. Zelie delivered the petition and pronounced the benediction. Others who took part in the memorial to Dr. Richards were Rev. Mr. Tilden, pastor of Bethel chapel; Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church; George A. Strong and L. N. Lovell, president of the Board of Education.

Rev. Dr. Zelie in his remarks alluded to the life of Dr. Richards as one divided by God into three periods of usefulness. His first years at the Congregational church in Bath, Maine, eighteen years in the Crescent Avenue church and his last pastorate covering a period of eight years in the Brick Presbyterian church, in New York city. Dr. Zelie said that Dr. Richards had fully determined to remain in Plainfield for the rest of his career, but had listened to the call of the Master when he accepted the call to the New York church. His simplicity and natualness contributed to his success as a minister of the Gospel and his work will be a monument to his passion for the souls of men. His last call was the one in which he brought an unspotted soul home to God.

Rev. Mr. Tilden, of Bethel chapel, who followed Dr. Zelie, paid a high tribute from the colored people of the city to the late minister's work for the race here. Under Dr. Richard's incumbency the work among the colored people was firmly established and had succeeded to an extent which can only be realized by those intimately connected with that work.

Rev. Mr. Newell, of Orange, said that twenty years ago he worked under Dr. Richards as the minister at Hope chapel and his remembrance of Dr. Richard's work in this city will always be an inspiration. Dr. Richards, he said, had a well poised mind and his heart was thoroughly imbued with the faith which inspired other men. He was a worthy successor of Maltby Babcock at the Brick Presbyterian church in New York.

George A. Strong spoke of the great faith of the former pastor and L. N. Lovell told in a brief speech the call and acceptance of Dr. Richards. This was one of the most interesting speeches of the night. Dr. Richards was preaching in a little church at Bath, Maine, when a committee from the Crescent Avenue church made a trip to the little Maine town to hear him. The committee came away satisfied that Dr. Richards was the man they wanted, but he was a Congregational minister then.

The story of the sermon preached in Crescent Avenue church on March 18, 1884, and the subsequent examination of Dr. Richards by the Presbytery; Dr. Richards' reluctance to leave Plainfield and his final resolve to go where he could do the most good kept the big audience spell bound.

Rev. Mr. Goodrich then told of the shock which came to him when he was notified of the death of the noted preacher. Mr. Goodrich said that just previous to receiving the sad tidings he had finished reading a letter from Dr. Richards which had been written the day before and he really could not believe that it was so. The leter written by Dr. Richards was in response to one by Mr. Goodrich relative to a certain work. Dr. Richards had agreed to do what he had been asked to do, but did not live long enough to carry it out.

Rev. Dr. Herring paid a loving tribute to the memory of Dr. Richards and the meeting came to a close after an offering was taken for the ## CONSTITUTION OR LAW?

May Liquor Be Distributed Because of Religion's Demands.

GRAND JURY MAY TELL.

Harry Lewis, Twelve, Was Drunk, But Who Is Responsible Is the Question.

Whether it is right for a rabbi of an orthodox congregation to sell fermented wine or liquor to a minor in contravention of the liquor license law, or in fact whether the rabbi has the right to sell it at all, is a question which Miss Adelaide Ball, an agent of the Board of Education, will in all probability bring before the present grand jury for settlement. The cause for this action is based upon the drunkenness of a twelve year old school boy, who it was erroneously reported attempted to assault his school teacher. The boy was drunk but he was rendered unconscious by the liquor, which had been obtained from a rabbi by his father. There is some doubt whether the liquor was delivered to the boy himself, but in event of that being a fact the law will have to have a different interpretation put on it than that given this morning by City Judge Runyon, when the case came up for a final hearing.

Judge Runyon said that the practice of all religions was a matter of freedom and that if the manufacture of the wine was an orthodox Jewish rite, the constitution would not interfere with its distribution, and he dismissed the complaint of illegal liquor selling. Judge Runyon had previously satisfied himself that it is the custom among the Hebrews to make and distribute the wine, and could find no just cause for holding the father of the boy. Harry Lewis, a baker, of this city, is the father of the boy and he told the court through an interpreter, that the boy had helped himself to the liquor during the absence of his parents. The boy's father was warned to keep the liquor locked up in the future, and was told that he would be responsible for any future indulgences of the youngster who required treatment at the hands of City Physician Lufburrow last Friday.

MISS AUGUSTA MAUL NOW MRS. FUGMAN

Miss Augusta Maul, daughter of Hugo Maul, of Watchung, and Peter Fugman, of Martinsville, were married at 7 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's father by Rev. John Duerschner, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran church, the borough. Only the members of the bride and groom's family were present to witness the ceremony, after which there was a reception.

During the reception Mr. Duerschner baptized four grandchildren, a son and three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Derrevere, of Roselle, Mrs. Derrevere being a daughter of Mr. Maul.

During the evening there was an enjoyable program of vocal and instrumental music and a collation was served. Mr. Fugman is a woodman and has resided at Martinsville for ten years.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF ADAM Q. BLOOM.

Grand Chief Horace J. Martin, of Freedom Castle, Knights of the Golden Eagles, was in Trenton yesterday assisting in making the arrangements for the funeral of Grand High Priest Adam Q. Bloom, who died Friday night following an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Bloom was a member of the order for twenty-two years and was well known among local Eagles. He was a frequent visitor to Freedom Castle.

Two funeral services are arranged. Tonight at the deceased's home, 293 Hamilton avenue, Trenton, the Knights of the Golden Eagles will conduct a special service and at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon the service for the family will be held. A number of members of Freedom Castle will attend tonight's services which will be in charge of the Grand Lodge officers.

HALL PLANT DESTROYED

Fire at Printing Press Works Causes a Total Loss of $40,000.

COVERED BY INSURANCE.

Cause of Blaze in West Dunellen Plant Unknown—Firemen's Fight in Vain.

Fire completely destroyed the pattern storage house of the Hall Printing Press Works at West Dunellen on Saturday afternoon. It was a costly blaze, the total loss being placed at about $40,000. The value on the building is placed at about $10,000 and the contents at about $20,000 to $30,000. Building and contents were insured.

The origin of the fire is unknown but the impression prevails that sparks from crossed electric light wires caused the blaze. The fire was discovered by John King, engineer and watchman, about 4 o'clock. At the time there were only about ten employes at the plant, but no time was lost in putting the factory apparatus in commission.

When King discovered the fire, the flames had made a big headway and the efforts of the factory firemen were futile in trying to stop the advance of the flames. The Dunellen fire department responded promptly but before its arrival the structure was doomed. The local department was in readiness to assist but the services of the local firemen were not called.

The building which was destroyed was a frame structure and separate from the main factory building and other buildings connected with the plant. It was a one-story building, its dimensions being 50x150 feet. All of the patterns belonging to the company, and a large number belonging to other concerns, were totally destroyed. All of these will need be replaced.

DISCUSS OFFER FOR FREE ATHLETIC FIELD

In response to a request of Mayor Charles Joel Fisk a conference was held in his office, Saturday, with some who are interested in the proposition of Andrew McClean Parker to provide an up-to-date athletic field and playground for the city. Those present beside the Mayor were William D. Murray, Herbert K. Parker and Joseph W. Gavett, representing the Y. M. C. A.; President Ralph I. Tolles and Councilman Frederic E. Mygatt from the Common Council; Dr. Henry M. Maxson and Principal Lindsey Best, of the Plainfield High School, and Mr. Parker.

The proposition made by Mr. Parker is intended to be for the benefit of the city in general and not any one individual society or organization. The tract of land is situated at a point beginning on Woodland avenue and running in a northwesterly direction along Randolph road, and comprises about twelve acres. It does not include Crescent Oval.

Mr. Parker offers to lease the tract, fully equipped with running track, grandstands, swimming pool, dressing rooms, baseball diamonds, tennic courts, etc., to the city for ten years at a nominal sum, and at the end of that time give the city an option of buying the same, or if he desires, to present it as a gift to the city.

It is proposed by Mr. Parker to fully equip the land for an up-to-date athletic field, and by his allowing it to be used by the city in general can the city officials agree to assist in the management of the same.

After a general discussion of the proposition and a hasty glance at some of the State laws, it was finally decided to ask Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh to look into the matter and prepare definite plans for the city's acceptance of the offer by Mr. Parker. When this is completed another meeting will be called to make a final decision.

GOING WEST FOR AN ALLEGED BIGAMIST.

Hoboken, Jan. 17.—Detective-Sergeant Lewis Weinthal left here Saturday with papers, which he will present to Governor Fort, asking for the requisition of "Count" Emil Karl von Muller, wanted on a charge of bigamy, preferred by Regina Veihelman, of this city. Von Muller is under arrest at Los Angeles, Cal., and as soon as the State Executive signs the necessary papers Weinthal will proceed West.

According to the records, Miss Veihelman married Von Muller in Hoboken on October 18, 1908. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. J. H. Rudolph, of the German Evangelical church. The bride gave her age as twenty-eight and her address at 111 First street. This is the site of the city hall. Von Muller said he was thirty-four years old and a lawyer, with an address at 217 Edgecomb avenue, New York.

It is alleged that the prisoner has wives in Newark, Montclair and Union Hill, but Chief of Police Hayes refuses to say who they are, declaring that if their names came out in the public print they could not be found when wanted.

KEAN WITHDREW HIS PROTEST TO CENSUS MEN.

Washington, Jan. 17.—A few weeks ago Senator Kean filed a protest with the Senate Committee on Census against the confirmation of Louis V. Hoagland, nominated by the President for supervisor of the census in the Fifth District of New Jersey, and against Samuel A. Smith, who was named for the same position in the Seventh District. Last week Kean withdrew his objections and both nominations were confirmed. The Senator made no explanation of his reasons for protesting against the appointments, and has offered none of his reasons for withdrawing the protest.

Miss May Wyckoff, of Somerset street, has returned from a visit in Jersey City.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

J. Paul Huff, one of the oldest men in Paulsboro, is ill for the first time in his life.

Turner Ashton, of Paulsboro, was badly burned by acid at the Gibbstown powder works on Thursday.

In boring a well at the residence of William H. Borden, at Mickleton, 100 feet of good marl were found.

Nearly all the icehouses in Gloucester county have been filled with ice ranging from eight to twelve inches in thickness.

James P. Gary and Paul C. LaRue, of Baptistown, were severely injured by falls upon ice, LaRue fracturing some ribs.

Following a fall upon the ice, in which he was injured, Daniel Hurley, of Hampton, was stricken with paralysis.

A dog sprang upon Miss Leora Van Lee as she entered the gate at her home on Columbia avenue, Millville, and bit her severely.

Dr. E. B. Harvey, of Atlantic City, was elected president of the Atlantic County Medical Society at its annual meeting Saturday.

Orlando Gibbon, eighty-two years old, who for many years drove a stage between Millville and Bridgeton, is critically ill at his home in Millville.

Mrs. Matilda Sayre, who sustained a fractured hip in a fall downstairs at her home near Heisterville, is not expected to recover owing to her advanced age—eighty-two years.

A committee from the Hancocks Bridge W. C. T. U. has given copies of the cigarette law to all dealers in that vicinity, with the understanding that violators will be prosecuted.

A jury in the Circuit Court at May's Landing refused damages to Councilman Samuel H. Headley, of Atlantic City, who was struck by a runaway team that dashed into the new Chelsea postoffice building several weeks ago. Headley, who is a contractor, was unable to get out of the way of the animals and several ribs were broken. The jury decided there was no cause for action.

Inmates of every charitable institution in Atlantic City were the guests of the Atlantic City Elks at the matinee performance of the Elks' Minstrels, in the Apollo theatre, Saturday afternoon. A big crowd filled the theatre Saturday night at the opening performance of the show, which was the finest ever given by the lodge.

When the account of the Security Trust Company as trustee for the estate of James Kennedy, late of Seventh and Walnut streets, Camden, was approved by Judge Joline Saturday, it developed that there are twenty-six heirs to the estate, which will amount to about $6,000. The estate consisted of small frame dwellings on Walnut street.

Edward Hoffman pleaded guilty in the Quarter Sessions Court at Bridgeton Friday to robbing slot gas meters of the Millville Gas Light Company and was sentenced to sixty days in county jail by Judge Taller.

When City Marshal Charles Biggs, of Millville, started in pursuit of two girls who were wanted as truants from school, the girls reached the shores of Union Lake first and with skates soon left the officer far in the rear.

While taking part in an entertainment, Miss Pauline Lanning, daughter of former Postmaster S. A. Lanning, of Bridgeton, fell ten feet through a trap door of the stage. She was considerably shocked and bruised, but her heavy head of hair saved her from worse injury.

SEES A DEFECT IN THE BISHOPS' LAW.

Burlington, Jan. 17.—Asserting that the bishops' law, long lauded as a piece of perfect legislation against saloon evils, is defective through the skilful omission of a clause generally supposed to prevent the "cap" trade, Mayor Charles P. Farner has called the matter to the attention of Governor Fort and has asked the Executive to request a remedy from the present Legislature. Mayor Farner Saturday made public his letter to Governor Fort, and explained he had discovered the alleged loophole in the law when preparing to move against certain local saloon-keepers against whom complaints had been filed by citizens. In part, his letter says:

"In an effort to enforce what generally has been supposed to be the law against the sale of intoxicating liquors by an inn and tavern-keeper in quantities less than one quart to be carried off the premises where sold I find the loophole in the bishops' law in which provision against this trade is omitted. Under present conditions it is impossible for any public official to halt these sales, which are undoubtedly a menace to law and order. I find the provision against the sale of intoxicating liquors to be drunk off the premises in the Wertz law of 1908. This provision is eliminated, however, from the bishops' law by the apparently clever omission of a few important words in the first paragraph of the amendment as passed in 1906."

Plainfield, N. J., January 17, 1910.

No time should be lost by the city in accepting Andrew McClean Parker's generous offer of a fully improved public athletic field. While the public spirit of our citizens is far above that of the average community, unfortunately too few have given what would be lasting monuments to themselves and genuine benefits to the city. There are many things that a municipality can not afford and the only way they can be obtained is through private generosity. The Job Male library and the Andrew McClean Parker field are both great public benefits. Pity that we have not more such men as these.

Not in all Union county has there been one word of dissent to the reelection of Frank H. Smith tonight as Republican county chairman. This is not at all surprising to any one at all acquainted with the present condition of affairs in Union, a rock-ribbed county of Republicanism, where the voters are a most intelligent and particular lot. Mr. Smith has long since demonstrated his real executive ability, genuine fairness and loftiness of political ideals. He has strengthened the party immeasurably. Today there are no factions; today everything is done in the open and on the square. This is because he will have no part in underhand dealings or star-chamber dictation. To him, Governor Fort recently pointed as "the ideal county chairman," immediately following his denunciation of the general run of such political heads in the State.

Danziger a Suicide.

It was rumored that David Danziger, formerly interested in "The Fair," on West Front street, had committed suicide in a Bowery Lodging house yesterday, using gas as the medium. Mrs. Danziger left Elizabeth this morning to visit the morgue in New York in an effort to identify the body. Her husband left home last Friday afternoon but she has heard nothing from his since that time.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Johnny Ray has been funny along plebian lines for many years, but now he is royally funny—because his "Casey," who was formerly the janitor, is now "King Casey." The Rays will make their appearance in that side-splitting farce of the Island of Lala Pa Zaza, a fantastic realm born of the whimsical imagination of Aaron Hoffman, at the Plainfield theatre January 20.

The entertainments presented by the company have been more nearly in conformity to the ideas of minstrelsy patrons than those of other producers. The productions of the Al G. Field Minstrels have been on a higher plane—the scenic surroundings have always been appropriate and beautiful, the music of a higher order, the costuming more gorgeous than that of other high class offerings. Mr. Field promises even greater things for his twenty-fourth season. The coming of the superb company is announced for January 22, matinee and night, and the usual overflowing crowds will be in attendance.

Elsie Janis, lately "The Hoyden" of Cosmo Hamilton's fanciful comedy, is now "The Fair Co-Ed" of Mr. George Ade's cleverly satarized midwestern "fresh water" college play. Mr. Ade, it is said, has written a fitting successor to his merry "College Widow," and in "The Fair Co-Ed' Miss Janis is even happier than she was as the dainty and delightful "Hoyden' of previous seasons. Miss Janis and her associates in Mr. Charles Dillingham's company in "The Fair Co-Ed' will be seen at the Plainfield theatre on January 24.

TO AVOID WRINKLES.

When carrying several blouses in a suitcase place them all on a padded coat hangers so that the width of the blouse will run along the length of the suitcase. In this way the crease from folding will come at the waist line and will not be seen when the blouse is worn. The hanger will be found useful at the journey's end, since the blouses will be hung on it durng the visit.

To keep a pleated skirt fresh looking baste all the pleats in place before packing. This will obviate the necessity for pressing it at the end of the journey.

Throughout the trunk or suitcase lay a roll of crushed tissue paper within the folds of every garment to keep the sharp crease from forming, and save your paper for the home journey if you are a provident being.

LIVING ON NOTHING A YEAR.

It's exciting.
It is ultra chic.
It requires social backing.
Otherwise it tends jailward.
Poverty is really a smart occupation.
To dine expensively for nothing takes talent.
Also to motor phrenziedly on the brink of the financial precipice.
To let the butcher and baker pay for one's hats is the plan of some.
Dressmakers may at times put up for a trip to Palm Beach, in a roundabout way.
Of a truth one-half the world does not know how the other half lives.

PREPARED TO PAY.

The Right Rev. Bishop of Delaware tells the following story, according to Lippincott's Magazine:

A young man came to me one day and said: 'Bishop, I want you to marry me on next Wednesday.'

"'All right, young man; I'll marry you,' I assured him.

"'Well, I want the bell to ring,' he continued.

"'Very well, you can have the bell rung.'

"'Well, I want the organ to play.'

"'All right, you can have the organ played.'

"'And I want everything else that anybody ever had at a church wedding.'

"'Certainly; you shall have it.'

"Well, the night came, the bell rang, the organ played, the church was crowded, and everything went off as the young man wanted it. When the ceremony was over the young couple waited, instead of leaving the chancel. So I held out my hand, shook hands with the bride, and then held out my hand to the bridegroom. He had his hand deep in his trousers pocket, and as I stood with my hand out he said, somewhat impatiently and in a tone that could be heard all over the church:

"'Now, don't be in such an all-fired hurry, Bishop. I'm getting the money out just as fast as I can.'

"And everybody in the church giggled."

A Leather Muff.

For a women who delights in motoring during all kinds of weather there is a leather muff, large and comfortable. It is lined with fur, and in the outer pocket a waterproof cape, folded compactly, can be stored. The leather is able to withstand wind, sleet and rain, and seems to be particularly appropriate for a leather-trimmed automobile.

A Suspicious Program.

"Santa Claus is the great representative of generosity and self-sacrifice."

"I don't know so well about that. He manages to have a good time and get away before the bills come due and the worst of the winter sets in."—Washington Evening Star.

Winter Wear.

"Nature always puts the heavy fur on the back."

"And nature's example is safe to follow, I take it."

"Of course."

"Then this peekaboo idea for the chest must be all right."—Washington Herald.

Always Something.

"Ain't you humorists hard pressed for a subject sometimes?"

"Oh, no, one thing leads to another. All the men who figured in the Christmas cigar jokes are now swearing off."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Get a Good One.

"I want to give a girl a fountain pen. Do you think anything with a sharp point severs friendship?"

"Not necessarily. But I would be very careful in picking out that fountain pen."—Exchange.

A Mild Flareback.

"Better cut out the booze, old boy. There's nothing in it."

"I don't expect to realize any profits, old chap. I drink purely for pleasure, I assure you."

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The little scrap over the election of Charles Meyer, as chief of the fire department will probably end where it is. Meyer was elected chief at the election held two weeks ago. Several days after the smoke of battle had cleared away, some of the members of Excelsior H. & L. Co. raised the question of Meyer's eligibility for the office on account of his being a resident of Somerset county. The protestants were told to put their kick in writing. When it was brought to the attention of the Township Committee. This has not been done as yet and the chances are Excelsior company will be good sports and stand by the result of the election.

Sometime after midnight Friday night some one cut out a window light in Deegan's hotel barroom and stole $18 in cash and some cigarettes which were piled on the shelf near the money. No entrance was made. The thief evidently knew where the money from telephone tolls was kept and about when to make the haul. No clue was left and its hardly likely that the thief or thieves will ever be apprehended.

The trolley company made a brave effort to keep the main line open during the blizzard. At one time five cars were stalled in the Graceland cut, but the snow plows dug them out after a tie-up of several hours. The company was able to maintain a fair schedule again yesterday.

The snow had drifted so in places on some of the walks in town that it was impossible to get the horse and snow plow through the banks until they were broken up. However by Saturday noon all the walks were made and the residents were again able to get around again.

Miss Joplin led an interesting meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the parlors of the church. "Candles under Bushels" was the topic discussed.

The residents of the borough who attend service at the Baptist church enjoyed a straw ride to service yesterday instead of the several stage rides.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the class rooms of the Methodist church.

Several straw rides are under way and the young people are preparing to enjoy the snow while it lasts.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

In spite of the weather man the young folks are skating on the lake. Saturday a number of the boys got together and started to clear off a space for skating. A fairly large space was cleared. This was crowded Saturday night and all day yesterday.

The S. F. T. A. B. Society met yesterday morning in the rooms of the society. The members have decided to hold a sleighing party on Wednesday night. The party will leave the club rooms at 7:30.

The regular monthly meeting of the fire company will be held in the fire-house on next Friday evening.

The John Sobelscki Society will hold its semi-annual dance in Washington Hall on January 22.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Mrs. J. C. Camper, who has been a resident of the borough for several months, has returned to her former home at Brooklyn.

Rev. W. W. Giddes preached to a large and interesting congregation in the First Baptist church last night.

Miss Emma Danz entertained friends from Plainfield several days last week.

Mrs. Frank Smalley has been entertaining friends from Orange.

Ogden Meeker has resigned his position at Day's grocery.

Fred Broglio and family have removed to Somerville.

Michael Gallagher is confined to his home by illness.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The teachers of the public schools will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon at the High School. Mr. Munroe, of Montclair Normal School, will address the meeting.

Mr. Parvin will lecture at the High School tomorrow morning at 8:45, on "The Building of a Ship." The address will be illustrated with many beautiful slides.

Why He Killed Dog.

William Diehlman, of 954 West Front street, reported to the police this morning that before down he had shot and killed a hound which had broken into his place and was in the act of killing some of the chickens. Mr. Diehlman said the dog acted as though mad and had bitten one of his dogs. The bitten animal has been chained up until the period for inoculation for rabies is passed.

MRS. LINBARGER'S OBSEQUIES SPLENDID TRIBUTE PAID.

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah R. Linbarger, who died last Wednesday, took place Saturday afternoon at 1:30 and was largely attended. The services were conducted by Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace Methodist church and the interment was in Bound Brook cemetery in the family plot. The bearers were Judge J. H. Snape, Peter Y. Layton, Jacob Long and Truman Bilyeu.

Many handsome floral tributes were reecived from friends and relatives and Rev. Mr. Shoop pronounced a splendid eulogy of Mrs. Linbarger. He took for a text an old favorite theme of Mrs. Linbarger's from Job. 5:26: "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age like as a shock of corn cometh in its full season." Speaking with much feeling of the beautiful life of the woman Rev. Mr. Shoop rounded out the story with a beautiful poem.

Silver and White.

A lovely evening hat is of white beaver in a large shape, with an upturned brim at the left side. Curving over the crown is a graceful willow plume which is large enough to cover entirely the crown at the front and sides. And here is the attractive touch; at the side of the brim are two, tiny mercury wings of silver braid. So small are they in contrast with the large hat that they have flown into notice. The combination of silver and white is less flashy and decidedly more elegant than white and gilt or any of the more contrasting metallic shades.

Bound Brook Floods.

According to recent reports from Bound Brook unless the dam at Riverside Park is dynamited this week Bound Brook will be put under four feet of water and a consequent damage of thousands of dollars will ensue. There is no doubt that the residents of the town are alarmed over the prospect and the Council will be petitioned tonight to permit of the blasting of the ice at the dam.

Mike Says "Never Again."

Mike Kettle, of New Market, was allowed to go this morning by City Judge Runyon because he said it would be the last time, as it was the first, that he would appear before a judge on a charge of intoxication. ## THE FORUM.

140 Central Avenue.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Dear Sir—Mayor Fisk in his report recommends what he calls a "better regulation of the liquor traffic," and makes a statement that if true, stands as an everlasting disgrace and humiliation to the State of New Jersey.

Mr. Fisk says: "Under the present practice and rules of evidence adopted by the courts, it is more difficult to secure a conviction for a violation of the liquor laws or illegal sale of liquors than it is for murder."

Such a humiliating report to come from the chief magistrate of Plainfield ought to sink deep into the hearts of all who have any interest in the welfare of their fellow men.

Just think of this sad state of things. It is easier to convict a fellow creature for murder than it is to find a saloon-keeper guilty of breaking liquor traffic laws. Such a confession ought to arouse all citizens to a realization of the great danger under which we labor.

Mr. Fisk, who makes further statements, which plainly shows that he has failed to grasp any true remedy that will bring about a "better regulation of the liquor traffic." He tells us that from the year 1797 up to the present time this State has been tinkering with liquor laws with a view to a "better regulation," all of which have been total failures to stop drunkenness, and for that reason he advises "that boards be elector with power to grant, refuse (not prohibit) and regulate." Can Mr. Fisk or any other person show how you can regulate if you have not the power to prohibit?

Surely after so many failures to regulate as has been made for the last 113 years Mr. Fisk ought to be convinced that it is high time to try some other remedy than a mere shuffling of the cards, such as he proposes, which is simply juggling.

Mr. Fisk and Governor Fort both say that prohibition "is an unlikely condition." How do they know that prohibition will not meet the case? Has it been tried in this State, or could prohibition prove anything like as great a failure as the past 113 years of failure have been? I think not.

If Mr. Fisk can prove that prohibition is a failure, he will prove far too much, for he will then have proved that almost all our laws are failures and should be discontinued, for from his standpoint they are not practical. When God said (Deut., 5:7) "thou shalt not kill," He did not make any mistake, even though men do set that law at defiance, and kill their fellow man. Mr. Fisk will not dare to say publicly that that law is a failure for he knows better.

The great failure I think is in that six months' labored report, after over 300 wintnesses (not one mother called to hear witness in that 300) were called is that Mr. Fisk has not discovered that it is the nature of intoxicating drinks to make those drunk who drink it. It is not a question of the character of the man who sells the liquor, but the character of the liquor itself. For if Mayor Fisk himself sold intoxicatants behind the bar and people drunk it from his hands the same evils would exist as if handed out by the greatest bum in our midst.

The bid is in the nature of the drink to create drunkenness and the only way to stop that great curse is to stop drinking that which creates drunkenness. I have tried prohibition for 73 years upon myself and I find it a very safe plan to adopt. Total abstinence for the individual, prohibition for the nation, is a good plan. Let us try it.

Mr. Fisk may pass into law all the restrictions he is capable of and I will say amen to such, but don't fail to give the people their just rights to prohibit when they become educated up to that high moral standpoint. The strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not to please themselves.

Very respectfully,
J. W. HARRISON.
Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 17, 1910.

A BROCADE GOWN.

Straw-colored brocade shows to advantage the dark colorings of a brunette. As this rich material is more and more gaining favor, there are many visits to grandmother's trunk in an unfrequented part of the attic, and gorgeous silks once more are used in the golden lights of evening.

One lovely gown evolved by a Paris dressmaker is such that deft fingers on this side of the water can copy.

It is pale yellow brocade, over which a tunic of ecru net embroidered with gold beads is thrown. This hangs from the bust to the knee, and is caught at the waist by a girdle of soft yellow satin. A fringe of fine beads three inches in length edges this overgarment.

The sleeves are formed of net and strings of beads, while tiny stiff bows of satin form a line on the outer seam.

A chemisette, called by some the "modistie," in this case departs from the white, and is of pale blue tulle, which gives a lovely empire touch to the whole scheme.

Court Watchung, Independent Order Foresters, will meet tomorrow night in Knights of Columbus Hall. There will be business of importance to every member and various committees for the year will be appointed.

THE ATMOSPHERE.

Without It There Would Exist a Queer State of Affairs.

Without the atmosphere, besides the inconvenience to breathing, a great many peculiar things would be observed that would seem very extraordinary to us. The sun would rise straight up in the morning into a sky as black as ebony, traverse a black sky and sink down to rest at night into a black bed. No beautiful glories of the sunset and sunrise would appear, no blueness of the heavens be seen, no red sun gradually growing brighter, but one that would rise as a fiery orb and remain thus all day. No twilight and no daybreak could cheer us, for there would be nothing to diffuse the light.

Unless the sun shone directly on a thing we could not see it. Thus our houses would have to be made of some transparent substance or else be artificially lighted in the daytime. No soothing shades would appear in the landscape, but everything would stand out boldly and clearly, every object casting dense black shadows that would render invisible any one entering them. No voice or music could be heard, for there would be no medium to carry it. No birds or insects could flit about in the trees and above us, for there would be nothing to enable them to utilize their wing motion. No clouds would be seen in the intensely black sky, and no thunderstorms or high winds would be possible. No vegetation could exist, and no animal could live. In fact, this old earth would be as dead as Hector as far as activity was concerned.

Yet this is the exact condition of affairs on the moon, which has no atmosphere and consequently suffers every one of these disadvantages.

It is rather interesting to contemplate the successive events on the earth if the atmosphere should be quickly removed. The first thing that would probably happen is that every animal, insect, fish, bird and plant would suffer a violent explosion, for each contains air at a pressure of fifteen pounds to the square inch on the outside, which is balanced by an equal pressure on the inside and would rush outward on the first pressure being removed. This can be shown by placing the hand over an air pump and gradually exhausting the air. The part exposed will gradually swell. Another illustration is when a tornado sweeps round a house, taking the outside air away for an instant. If the house is closed the windows and doors will be blown outward with enormous force, and sometimes the sides themselves of the house are blown in all directions. —Chicago Record-Herald.

ACCIDENTAL NONSENSE.

Things That Amused Lear, the English Artist and Writer.

It is not surprising that the gifted inventor of such classic imaginative nonsense as "The Jumblies" and "The Owl and the Pussy Cat" took a keen delight in the real nonsense of real life whenever he chanced to encounter it. During a doleful stay in a dreary little mining village where it rained all the time and he was not well and could not accomplish the work he had set his heart on doing, the late Edward Lear, although a good and decorous churchgoer, found his source of cheer in the parish clerk. "Oh, beloved clerk!" he wrote gratefully to a friend. "He reads the psalms enough to make you go into fits. He said last Sunday, 'As white as an old salmon,' instead of 'White as snow in Salmon,' 'a lion' for 'alien to my mother's children' and 'they are not guinea pigs' instead of 'guiltless.' Fact, but I grieve to say he's turned out for the same and will never more please my foolish ears."

Even funnier was the erratic English of a foreigner which once enlivened for him the prolonged formalities of an official dinner.

"Sitting next to the captain of an Austrian frigate at Sir H. Sterle's on Thursday evening," he recorded, "the German officer said to a subaltern—the conversation was about the good looks of women—'I do think the Englishwoman conserve her aperient galship (girlhood) longer than all the women, even as far as her antics' (antiquity, age).

"The subaltern withered with confusion till I ventured to interpret, 'The Englishwoman preserves her appearance of youth longer than all women, even if she be old.'"—Youth's Companion.

Enough For Him.

When the physician arrived at the designated house he found that his patient was a decrepit negro, who sat up in bed and inquired:

"How much yo' charge, doctah?"

"Two dollars a visit, which includes my time, experience, advice and the medicine."

"A poor old coon like me don't need all dem extras. Just gib me 10 cents' wo'th-o' you' cough med'cine, and dat's enough fo' me."—Judge.

Too Harsh.

"Wretched woman! You took advantage of my hospitality to steal my husband!"

"Pardon me, but is it exactly stealing where a guest, wishing a souvenir of an agreeable visit, carries away with her some trifling thing which her hostess gives every token of caring little for?"—Life.

The Very Simple Life.

Pierre Loti, the French author, always did like a practical joke. A French poet who had been advocating a return to the simple life decided one day to make the acquaintance of Loti. He left his village, he who never travels, stick in hand, to make the journey to Hendaye, the home of Loti, on foot. He prayed the celebrated novelist to receive him without ceremony; that he should be satisfied with a bowl of milk for his repast.

But he was much astonished when the novelist took him at his word. In the dining room on a table without cloth or napkin there was only an immense crock of milk.

The visitor showed some hesitation about beginning the feast. Meanwhile his host began to walk around the room like a bear in a cage, only interrupting his walk from time to time to take a long swig of milk from the crock. Without saying a word the host invited the astonished guest to imitate him.

The man of the simple life had found one more simple than himself, and he left the house convinced that the great novelist had become crazy.

Murder Revealed by a Dream.

Perhaps the most amazing crime mystery ever solved by a dream was that revealed by a murder trial a couple of generations ago. The dead body of Mr. Norway, an inoffensive Cornish gentleman, had been found by the roadside between Wadebridge and Bodmin brutally murdered. No trace of the murderer could be found, and the mystery of the crime seemed beyond all solution when Mr. Norway's brother, a naval officer, arrived in England and told the following story: On the very night of his brother's murder, when he was on his ship in the West Indies, he saw him in a dream walking along the Bodmin road, when from a dark recess in the hedge two ruffians sprang out, slew and robbed him and then made their way to a house in Wadebridge, which he saw vividly in his dream. To this house he conducted the police officers, and there he found the very two men whom in his vision he had seen commit the murder. They confessed and suffered the extreme penalty of the law.—London Answers.

There Was No Duel.

Colonel Crisp when in the Missouri legislature was one of the central figures in a scene which promised bloodshed, which ended in a hearty laugh and which was the cause of an astounding remark from Hon. John W. Farriss, the then speaker, said Champ Clark. Crisp and another member got into a debate which grew into a quarrel. They shook their fists at each other and roared like a pair of Numidian lions. Everybody expected and many hoped to see a regular old fashioned knockdown and dragout fight, which expectation and hope were frustrated and dashed to the ground by Speaker Farriss remarking:

"If you gentlemen do not quit fussing and take your seats I will order the chaplain to take you into custody," which so amazed the belligerose legislators that they stood in a state of lingual paralysis, while the spectators laughed till they were red in the face. Humor saved the day.

How He Helped the Blind.

"Please help a blind man," said a fellow with green goggles as he held a tin cup toward the line of people issuing from the Union depot. "I always help the blind," said one of two young men who were passing, and he stopped and took out a five dollar bill. "Can you get a quarter out of this?" "I guess so," said the blind man, fishing out a handful of change and counting out $4.75. "Well, John," said the benevolent young man's companion as they walked on, "you're a bigger fool than I took you to be." "Am I?" said John. "Yes, you are. That fellow's no more blind than I am. How could he tell that was a five dollar bill?" "Blamed if I know," said John innocently, "but he must be mighty near sighted not to see that it was a counterfeit."—Chicago News.

Settled the Difficulty.

An insurance agent had vainly tried to persuade a man to insure his valuables against burglary. "A safe's all very well," he admitted, "but look at the constant trouble of locking up and unlocking to see if your things are all right."

"I've got over that difficulty," declared the weary listener.

"Indeed!" said the agent incredulously. "How?"

"I've had a window put in the safe," growled the other.

An Indiscreet Memory.

The Hostess—Don't you think Colonel Broadside is quite a wonderful old man? Look at him. He is as straight and slender as an arrow, and he has the most wonderful memory. The Lady of Dubious Age—I think he's an atrocious old bore. He remembers when everybody was born.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Poor Dogs!

Returned Explorer—Yes; the cold was so intense at the pole we had to be very careful not to get our dogs— Miss Youngthing—Indeed! Why was that? Returned Explorer—You see their tails were frozen stiff, and if they wagged them they would break off.—Boston Transcript.

Where Her Thoughts Were.

Daughter—To tell the truth, pa, I didn't think much of the close of the sermon. Father—Thought more of the clothes of the congregation, eh?

If a man wishes to be treated with courtesy he should show courtesy to others.

—He took from his pocket a worn leather case, which he opened, disclosing a small, browned clay bowl of the kind workmen use, and, fitting it with a red stem, he filled it with a dark and sinister tobacco from a pouch. "Always my pipe for me," he said and applied a match, inhaling the smoke as other men inhale the light smoke of cigarettes. "Ha, it is good! It is wicked for the insides, but it is good for the soul. When I am alone I am a chimney with no hebdomadary repose. I smoke forever. It is on account of my young friend I am temperate now."

"It is wicked for the insides, but it is good for the soul."

"He has never smoked, your young friend?" I asked, glancing at my visitor rather curiously, I fear.

"Mr. Saffren has no vices." Professor Keredec replaced his silver rimmed spectacles and turned them upon me with serene benevolence. "He is in good condition, all pure, like little children, and so if I smoke near him he chokes and has water at the eyes, though he does not complain. Just now I take a vacation. It is his hour for study, but I think he looks more out of the front window than at his book—yes, very much since the passing of that charming young lady some days ago."

"You say your young friend's name is Saffren?"

"Oliver Saffren." The benevolent gaze continued to rest upon me, but a shadow like a faint anxiety darkened the Homeric brow. Finally he said abruptly, "It is about him that I have come to talk to you."

"I shall be very glad."

"Ha, my dear sir," he cried, "but you are a man of feeling! It was the way you have received my poor young gentleman's excuses when he was so rude which makes me wish to talk with you on such a subject. It is why I would not have you believe Mr. Saffren and me two very suspected individuals who hide here like two bad criminals!"

"No, no!" I protested hastily. "The name of Professor Keredec"—

"The name of no man," he thundered, interrupting, "can protect his reputation when he is caught peeping from a curtain! Ha, my dear sir, I know what you think! You think: 'He is a nice, fine man, that old professor—oh, very nice, only he hides behind the curtains sometimes. Very fine, man—oh, yes, only he is a spy.' Eh? Ha, ha!"

"Not at all," I laughed. "I thought you might fear that I was a spy."

"Eh?" He became serious.

"I supposed you might be writing a book which you wished to keep from the public for a time and that possibly you might imagine that I was a reporter."

"So! And that is all," he returned, with evident relief. "No, my dear sir, I was the spy; it is the truth. I confess my shame. I wish very much to know what kind of a man you are. And so I have watched you."

"Why?" I asked.

"The explanation is so simple; it was necessary."

"Because of—of Mr. Saffren?" I said slowly and with some trepidation.

"Precisely." The professor exhaled a cloud of smoke. "Because I am sensitive for him and I am his guardian, but I am not his guardian by the law."

"I had not supposed that you were," I said, "because, though I do not understand his—his case, so to speak, I have not for a moment thought him insane."

"Ha, my dear sir, you are right!" exclaimed Keredec. "He is as sane as anybody in the whole world! Ha, he is now much more sane, for his mind is not yet confused and becobwebbed with the useless things you and I put into ours. A few months more—ha, at the greatest a year from now—and he will not be different any longer. He will be like the rest of us, only"—the professor leaned forward, and his big fist came down on the arm of his chair—"he shall be better than the rest of us! But if strange people were to see him now," he continued, "it would not do. There are so many who judge quickly. If they should see him now they might think he is not just right in his brain, and then, as it could happen so easily, those same people might meet him again after awhile. 'Ha,' they would say, 'there was a time when that young man was insane. I knew him!' And so he might go through his life with those clouds over him.

"Ha! I wish you to know my young man," Keredec went on. "You will like him—no man of feeling could keep himself from liking him—and he is your fellow countryman. I hope you will be his friend. He should make friends, for he needs them. You will dine with us tonight?" he suggested.

Acquiescing cheerfully, I added, "You will join me at the table on my veranda, won't you?"

Before answering he cast a sidelong glance at the arrangement of things outside the door. The screen of honeysuckle ran partly across the front of the little porch, about half of which it concealed from the garden and consequently from the road beyond the archway. I saw that he took note of this before he pointed to that corner of the veranda most closely screened by the vines and said:

"May the table be placed yonder?"

"Certainly."

"Ha, that is good!" he exclaimed.

Suddenly we heard the rapid hoof beats of a mettled horse. He crossed our vision and the open archway—a high stepping hackney going well, driven by a lady in a light trap which was half full of wild flowers. I had not the least difficulty in recognizing her. At the same instant the startled pigeons fluttered up from the garden path, betaking themselves to flight, and "that other monsieur" came leaping across the courtyard and into the road.

"Look quickly!" he called. "Who is that lady?"

Amadee awoke with a frantic start and launched himself at the archway.

"That lady, monsieur?" he gasped, gazing after the trap. "That is Mme. d'Armand."

"Mme. d'Armand." Saffren repeated the name slowly. "Her name is Mme. d'Armand?"

"Yes, monsieur," said Amadee complacently. "It is an American lady who has married a French nobleman."

CHAPTER V.

MY ankle had taken its wonted time to recover. I was on my feet again and into the woods.

July came, and one afternoon I sat in the mouth of the path just where I had played the bounding harlequin for the benefit of the lovely visitor at Quesnay.

I heard the light snapping of a twig and a swish of branches from the direction in which I faced. Evidently some one was approaching the glade, though concealed from me for the moment by the winding of the path. Taking it for Saffren as a matter of course—for we had arranged to meet at that time and place—I raised my voice in what I intended for a merry yodel of greeting.

I yodeled loud, I yodeled long, and my best performance was not unsuggestive of calamity in the poultry yard. And when my mouth was at its widest in the production of these shocking ulla hootings the person approaching came round a turn in the path and within full sight of me. To my horror it was Mme. d'Armand.

I grew so furiously red that it burned me. I was plainly a lunatic, whooping the lonely peace of the woods into pandemonium. She kept straight on. Then suddenly, while I waited in sizzling shame, a clear voice rang out from a distance in an answering yodel to mine. There was a final call, clear and loud as a bugle, and she turned to the direction whence it came. Then Oliver Saffren came running lightly round the turn of the path. He stopped short.

Her hand pressed against her side.

He lifted his hat and spoke to her, and I thought she made some quick reply in a low voice, though I could not be sure.

She held that startled attitude a moment longer, then turned and crossed the glade so hurriedly that it was almost as if she ran away from him. She did not seem to see me. Her dark eyes stared widely straight ahead, her lips were parted, and she looked white and frightened.

I stepped out to meet him, indignant upon several counts, most of all upon his own.

"You spoke to that lady!" And my voice sounded unexpectedly harsh and sharp to my own ears, for I had meant to speak quietly.

"I know—I know. It—it was wrong," he stammered. "I knew I shouldn't—and I couldn't help it."

"You expect me to believe that?"

"It's the truth. I couldn't!"

I laughed skeptically. "I don't understand. It was all beyond me," he added huskily.

"What was it you said to her?"

"I spoke her name—'Mme. d'Armand.'"

"You said more than that."

"I asked her if she would let me see her again."

"What else?"

"Nothing," he answered humbly. "And then she—then for a moment it seemed—for a moment she didn't seem to be able to speak"—

"I should think not!" I shouted and burst out at him with satirical laughter. He stood patiently enduring it, his lowered eyes following the aimless movements of his hands, which were twisting and untwisting his flexible straw hat.

"But she did say something to you, didn't she?" I asked finally.

"She said, 'Not now.' That was all."

"I suppose that was all she had breath for! It was just the inconsequent and meaningless thing a frightened woman would say."

"Meaningless?" he repeated and looked up wonderingly.

"Did you take it for an appointment?" I roared.

"No, no, no! She said only that and then"—

"Then she turned and ran away from you!"

"Yes," he said, swallowing painfully.

"That pleased you," I stormed, "to frighten a woman in the woods!"

I set about packing my traps, grumbling various sarcasms, the last mutterings of a departed storm, for already I realized that I had taken out my own mortification upon him, and I was stricken with remorse.

"I wouldn't have frightened her for the world," he finally said, and his voice and his body shook with a strange violence. "I wouldn't have frightened her to please the angels in heaven!"

I stared at him helplessly, nor could I find words to answer or control the passion that my imbecile scolding had evoked.

"You think I told a lie!" he cried. "You think I lied when I said I could not help speaking to her!"

"No, no," I said earnestly. "I didn't mean"—

"Words!" He swept the feeble protest away, drowned in a whirling vehemence. "And what does it matter? You can't understand. When you want to know what to do you look back into your life and it tells you, and I look back—ah!" He cried out, uttering a half choked, incoherent syllable. "I look back and it's all—blank! All these things you can do and can't do—all these infinite little things! You know, and Keredec knows, and Glouglou knows, and every mortal soul on earth knows, but I don't know! Your life has taught you, and you know, but I don't know. I haven't had my life. It's gone! All I have is words that Keredec has said to me. I would burn my hand from my arm and my arm from my body rather than trouble her or frighten her, but I couldn't help speaking to her any more than I can help wanting to see her again."

He paused, wiping from his brow a heavy dew, not of the heat, but like that on the forehead of a man in crucial pain. I made nervous haste to seize the opportunity and said gently, almost timidly:

"But if it should distress the lady?"

"Yes—then I could keep away. But I must know that."

"I think you might know it by her running away—and by her look," I said mildly. "Didn't you?"

"No!" And his eyes flashed an added emphasis.

"Well, well," I said, "let's be on our way."

"I don't believe she was distressed," he went on. There was something, but it wasn't trouble. We looked straight at each other. I saw her eyes plainly, and it was"—he paused and sighed, a sudden, brilliant smile upon his lips—"it was very—it was very strange!"

There was something so glad and different in his look that, like any other dried up old blunderer in my place, I felt an instant tendency to laugh. It was that heathenish possession, the old insanity of the risibles, which makes a man think it a humorous thing that his friend should be discovered in love.

"But if you were wrong," I said, "if it did trouble her, and if it happened that she has already had too much that was distressing in her life"—

"You know something about her!" he exclaimed. "You know"—

"I do not," I interrupted in turn. "I have only a vague guess. I may be altogether mistaken."

"What is it that you guess?" he demanded abruptly. "Who made her suffer?"

"I think it was her husband," I said, with a lack of discretion for which I was instantly sorry, fearing with reason that I had added a final blunder to the long list of the afternoon—"that is," I added, "if my guess is right."

"Is he alive?" he cried sharply.

"I don't know!" I returned emphatically. "Probably I am entirely mistaken in thinking that I know anything of her whatever. I'd rather not say any more until I do know."

"Very well," he said quickly. "Will you tell me then?"

"Yes—if you will let it go at that."

"Thank you," he said and, with an impulse which was but too plainly one of gratitude, offered me his hand. I took it, and my soul was disquieted within me, for it was no purpose of mine to set [illegible] foot in regard to the affairs of Mme. d'Armand.

It was early dusk. From the courtyard of the inn came the sounds of laughter and chattering voices. Before the entrance stood a couple of open touring cars, the chauffeurs engaged in cooling the rear tires with buckets of water brought by a personage ordinarily known as Glouglou, whose look and manner as he performed this office for the leathern dignitaries so awed me that I wondered I had ever dared address him with any presumption of intimacy.

As we turned to enter the archway we almost ran into a tall man who was coming out, evidently intending to speak to one of the drivers.

The stranger stepped back with a word of apology, and I took note of him for a fellow countryman and a worldly buck of fashion indeed.

We were passing him when he uttered an ejaculation of surprise and stepped forward again, holding out his hand to my companion and exclaiming:

"Where did you come from? I'd hardly have known you."

Oliver seemed unconscious of the proffered hand. He stiffened visibly and said:

"I think there must be some mistake."

"So there is," said the other promptly. "I have been misled by a resemblance. I beg your pardon."

He lifted his cap slightly, going on, and we entered the courtyard to find a cheerful party of nine or ten men and women seated about a couple of tables.

I went almost as quickly to my pavilion and without lighting my lamp set about my preparations for dinner. The party outside, breaking up presently, could be heard moving toward the archway with increased noise and laughter. A girl's voice in very attractive voice called, "Oh, Cressie, aren't you coming?" and a man's replied from near my veranda, "Only stopping to light a cigar."

A flutter of skirts and a patter of feet betokened that the girl came running back to join the smoker. "Cressie," I heard her say in an eager, lowered tone, "who was that devastating creature in white flannels?"

The man chuckled. "Matinee sort of devastator—what? Monte Cristo hair, noble profile"—

"You'd better tell me," she interrupted earnestly, "if you don't want me to ask the waiter."

"But I don't know him."

"I saw you speak to him."

"I thought it was a man I met three years ago out in San Francisco, but I was mistaken. There was a slight resemblance. This fellow might have been a rather decent younger brother of the man I knew. He was the"—

My strong impression was that if the speaker had not been interrupted at this point he would have said something very unfavorable to the character of the man he had met in San Francisco.

I caught a last word from the girl as the pair moved away.

"I'll come back here with a band tomorrow night and serenade the beautiful one."

"Monsieur is served," said Amedee, looking in at my door five minutes later.

"You have passed a great hour just now, Amedee."

"It was like the old days, truly!"

"They are off for Trouville, I suppose?"

"No, monsieur; they are on their way to visit the chateau and stopped here only because the run from Paris had made the tires too hot."

"To visit Quesnay, you mean?"

"Truly. But monsieur need give himself no uneasiness. I did not mention to any one that monsieur is here. His name was not spoken. Mlle. Ward returned to the chateau today," he added. "She has been in England."

"Quesnay will be gay," I said, coming out to the table.

CHAPTER VI.

I HAD finished dressing next morning and was strapping my things together for the day's campaign when I heard a shuffling step upon the porch and the door opened gently without any previous ceremony of knocking, admitting Amedee with a breakfast tray.

"Monsieur," he said, nodding in a panic toward the courtyard, "Mlle. Ward is out there!"

"What!" But I did not shout the word.

"Probably Mlle. Ward has only come to talk with Mme. Brossard."

"I fear some of those people may have told her you were here," he ventured insinuatingly.

"What people?" I asked, drinking my coffee calmly, yet, it must be confessed, without quite the deliberation I could have wished.

"Those who stopped yesterday evening on the way to the chateau. They might have recognized"—

"Impossible. I knew none of them."

"But Mlle. Ward knows that you are here without doubt."

"Why do you say so?"

"Because she has inquired for you."

"So!" I rose at once and went toward the door. "Why didn't you tell me at once?"

He saw the menace coiling in my eye and hurriedly retreated.

"Monsieur!" he gasped, backing away from me, and as his hand, fumbling behind him, found the latch of the door, he opened it and scrambled out by a sort of spiral movement round the casing. When I followed a moment later, with my traps on my shoulder and the packet of sandwiches in my pocket, he was out of sight.

"There, I've gone and started the New Year with a mistake."

"As to how?"

"Wrote it 1909 on all my letters."

Honor for Princeton Geologist.

Princeton, Jan. 17.—Dr. William B. Scott, '77, Blair professor of geology in Princeton University, received word Saturday from the Geological Society of London that the Wollaston Medal for geological research will be conferred upon him this year. This is considered a reward of distinction in geological work and is awarded in recognition of extensive study and research in geology, paleontology and allied subjects, in which Professor Scott for some time has been engaged.

SECOND REGT. OFFICERS HEAR A "REGULAR" LECTURE

A lecture on "Map Reading" was given by First Lieutenant Townsend Whelen, Twenty-ninth Infantry, U. S. A., under the regular army orders, at the Trenton armory Friday night, the occasion being the regular quarterly meeting of the board of officers of the Second regiment.

The lecture Friday night was the first of a series to the Second regiment officers on theoretical and practical military tactics. More than half of the fifty-two officers of the board were present, despite the stormy weather, and listened attentively to the theme of the regular army officer.

STATE PRISON COST $164,489 FOR YEAR.

The annual reports of the inspectors, head keeper and superintendent of the State prison at Trenton show aggregate expenditures of $268,958, of which there was returned to the State $105,469, making the net cost of the institution $164,489. The amount returned was received from contract labor at the institution and exceeded the amount received from the same source in 1908 by $8,164. ## UNION PRINCIPALS AT WESTFIELD SCHOOLS

Members of the Union County Principals' Association spent Thursday afternoon visiting the Westfield schools. The principals were divided into groups and made visits to the different departments in the Lincoln, Washington and Prospect Schools in that city, after which they went to the home of County Superintendent of Schools D. J. J. Savitz and held the regular monthly meeting.

The committee appointed at the December meeting to attend the convention of the New York State Teachers' Association in Manhattan during the week between Christmas and New Year's Day made its report. The new syllabus which is about to be adopted in New York State, the committee reported, was the principal subject discussed. The committee said the new syllabus was a good thing and thought it should be adopted in this State. No definite action was taken in the matter.

After the meeting the principals were the guests at dinner of Dr. Savitz. Those present were: R. E. Clement, of Elizabeth; Dr. H. M. Maxson, of Plainfield; W. J. Bickett, of Rahway; A. L. Johnson, of Cranford; D. A. Howell, of Linden; L. D. Deyo, of Roselle Park; Edward W. Wayton, of Springfield; A. G. Woodfield, of Lyons Farms; S. D. Townsend, of Scotch Plains; A. H. Uudyke, of Garwood; J. E. Soehl, of Kenilworth; Snyder, of Mountainside; Dobbins, of New Providence Borough; William Woodruff, of New Providence.

Trinity Church Calendar.

The members of Trinity Reformed church who attended the services yesterday, were delighted over the first appearance of a church calendar. This is among the last of the city churches to adopt the weekly calendar and it has been voted a great aid in disseminating the weekly news of the church. Arrangements have been made whereby they will be continued. A member of the church donated the first issue yesterday, and satisfactory arrangements have been made to print them every week.

Salvation Meeting.

There will be a special service at the Salvation Army tomorrow evening conducted by Adjutant and Mrs. Jackson, of the industrial department. There will be plenty of vocal and instrumental music and a profitable time is assured to all who attend.

RARITAN TEAM LEADS IN BOWLING TOURNEY

As a result of last week's competition in the fraternal tourney, the Raritan team has advanced to first place, displacing the Red Men, who led the tourney for the past few weeks.

The advantage held by the Raritan pin knights over the former leaders is slight and when these two teams come together on Thursday night some interesting doings are looked for.

The Knights of Columbus are holding down third place while the Ponies ousted the Woodmen from fourth place.

In the individual average race, Johnny Campbell is high with 192.4 for eleven games, three points ahead of "Loole" Menzenbach, who has a mark of 189.1.

MISSIONARY WILL VISIT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

The next two weeks beginning tomorrow will be full of interest to the members of Trinity Reformed church, for Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, the church missionary to Arabia, will spend that time here among the members of the church and take part in various services. Wednesday afternoon he and Pastor Broek will speak at a meeting of the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the church to be held in the lecture room. Miss Maud Pearl McAfee will be the leader.

Wednesday night, Dr. Harrison will be present at the prayer-meeting and speak. He will also take part in the service Sunday morning, January 23, and at the prayer-meeting Wednesday night, January 26, and on the following night at the church a reception will be given to Dr. Harrison under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. On Friday night, January 28, a farewell service will be held in the church.

A mail bag is being planned for Dr. Harrision for use while en route to Arabia. This is in charge of Mrs. William A. Woodruff, who can furnish all information concerning the arrangement.

HALF MILLION GIVEN TO PRINCETON UNIV.

The meeting of the trustees of Princeton University last week was one of the most important in years. Gifts aggregating more than a half million dollars were announced. The situation in regard to the graduate college has been complicated by the announcement of two gifts, one of $500,000 by William C. Proctor, 1883, of Cincinnati, and another of $200,000 by Mrs. Thompson Swann, who died. Proctor, it is believed, is in favor of building the graduate college on the golf links, but the terms of the Swann will require that the graduate school be placed on "college grounds."

The endowment of the beautiful new laboratory, known as Guyot Hall, by Cleveland H. Dodge, of New York, with $100,000, and the founding of the C. C. Cuyler fund with $300,000 bequeathed under the will of Morris K. Jesup to the Princeton University, are the principal gifts. The total gifts amount to $571,631.99.

CALL REV. DR. MEAD TO DR. SCUDDER'S PULPIT

The First Congregational Church of Jersey City has asked the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead, pastor of the First Methodist church, of Hoboken, to become its pastor when the resignation of the Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder shall take effect on July 1.

Dr. Scudder recently resigned because of increasing deafness. Dr. Mead when notified by a committee of the First Congregational church asked time to consider. He is one of the most eloquent and popular clergymen in theNewark Methodist Conference. He preached to congregations of ten thousand persons and conducted Bible classes of several hundred persons in the Auditorium at Ocean Grove last summer. He has been mentioned for the post of Methodist bishop.

In the fifteen years Dr. Mead has been a minister he has been the pastor of the First church, of Rutherford; the First church, of Hoboken, six years; the Centenary church, of Newark, four years, and again the First church, of Hoboken, for nine months.

OLD GLORY COUNCIL FOURTEEN YEARS OLD

Old Glory Council, No. 62, Daughters of Liberty, in addition to installing its officers-elect on Saturday night, also observed its fourteenth anniversary. There was a large attendance of members, including the State Councilor, Mrs. Mary Erwin, of Trenton, who installed the officers. She also made an interesting address. The council was congratulated upon its fine showing during the past fourteen years, and its steady growth in membership. The roll now numbers over two hundred and new members are taken in every week.

During the evening there were recitations by Mrs. Mary Mulford and Mrs. Annie Wyckoff, and in addition there were vocal and instrumental selections by the members. After the installation there was a collation and social time. These officers were installed:

Councilor, Willard R. Cook; vice-councilor, Mrs. Jeanette Van Pelt; associate councilor, Mrs. Anna A. Kittenring; associate vice-councilor, Mrs. Lizzie Ganun; treasurer, Mrs. Eva J. Moore; recording secretary, Mrs. Annie Wyckoff; assistant secretary, Miss Mabel Wakefield; financial secretary, Frederick L. Soper, Jr.; guide, Mrs. Ella Demarest; inside guard, Miss Blanch Thorn; outside guard, Lester C. R. Dunham; trustees, Elmer D. GaNun, Mrs. Gertrude Rittenhouse, Mrs. Anna Kettenring; representative to State Council, Mrs. Annie Wyckoff, William F. Welsh, Frederick L. Soper, Jr.; alternates, Mrs. Mary Stewart, Mrs. Lottie Anson, Mrs. Eva J. Moore.

Annual Meeting of Dutch Arms.

The annual meeting of the Dutch Arms will be held at Trinity Reformed church Friday night, when officers for the coming year will be elected. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance. Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, will be present and address the men.

Mayor's Son a Rancher.

Clarence Smalley, son of the borough's mayor, has tired of the stone contracting business and will in the future, for a few years, content himself with wild west life. Young Mr. Smalley leaves tonight for Montana, where he intends to remain for three years.

Enjoyed a Sleighride.

The young people of the Netherwood Reformed church enjoyed a fine sleighride to Westfield and back, Saturday night, the trip being made in a large box sleigh.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sandford, of East Front street, left today for Lawrenceville, Va., where they will remain for a month.

Hallet & Davis Player-Piano

The Hallet & Davis Piano

The discerning player-piano purchaser demands not only a piano of unquestioned superior tone quality, but of strong and durable construction, to withstand the greater use accorded a player-piano than an instrument without the player mechanism. The Hallet & Davis piano is constructed to meet the most severe requirements. The crown of the sounding board is supported by fifteen ribs, while the usual number is only eleven. The metal plate is square and very heavy, securing great rigidity. The piano action and hammers are designed for hard service, making an ideal instrument for the introduction of automatic player mechanism.

The Player Action

The salient features of the player action in the Hallet & Davis player-piano are:

A button softening the treble and another softening the bass.

A lever softening the whole piano and one operating the sustaining pedal of the piano.

The usual tempo and re-roll levers.

But most important of all, an automatic tracking device which is absolutely essential with the new standard 88-note music roll, as the holes are smaller and nearer together than on the old 65-note roll.

(The least swelling or shrinking of the paper causes the holes in the paper to be out of line with the holes in the tracker board, resulting in a discord unless equipped with a tracking device.)

Plays any standard 88-note music roll.

Daily demonstrations at our warerooms.

CARS THAT HAVE MADE GOOD

Automobile buyers might be pardoned if they felt a little bit bewildered right now. There are so many new cars being announced and so many radical claims being made for them, that buyers are apt to be a little up in the air.

You can't make a mistake if you buy a car of established reputation. A car that has stamped upon it a big, successful reliable name. A car with a record. A car that the people have bought, in quantities.

You might make a mistake buying some other kind of a car. A new car may be a good car, but no one knows that it is until it has been thoroughly tried out.

You take no risk when you buy a Chalmers-Detroit car. Our cars have made good for years.

In two seasons of Motor contests Chalmers-Detroit stock cars have won 89 firsts, 32 seconds and 21 thirds. "The Motor Age" "Record" gives the Chalmers-Detroits title of the Champion cars of the year.

Orders for more than two-thirds of our entire allotment for 1910 have already been booked. We believe all remaining spring deliveries will be booked at the end of the Garden Show week.

Y. W. C. A. YEAR'S WORK

Encouraging Reports Presented at the Third Annual Meeting.

TOTAL RECEIPTS WERE $6,160.04

All the Directors Re-elected—Some Interesting Addresses—Meeting Is Largely Attended.

The Young Women's Christian Association held its third annual meeting and an exhibit of work of the educational classes at the association, last night. The exhibit included a display of hats and ribbon flower work from the millinery department, sample and embroidery, raffia rags made in a raffia class and of dresses and undergarments from the dressmaking department.

There were about one hundred and fifty members and friends present to hear the reports and addresses. Mrs. Frederick G. Mead presided and after Mrs. Frank W. French, the secretary of the Board of Directors, presented her report, Mrs. Mead summed up the year's work by telling of the enlarged plant which is now enjoyed.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. James R. Joy, showed that the end of the year the receipts had been $6,160.04 and the expenditures $5,763.82, leaving a balance of $396.22.

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart in her report for the finance committee extended the thanks of the association to all who had in any way contributed to the success of the work. The report of Miss Lillian A. Force for the membership committee, showed a membership of 732 and she told of the contest for new members, called the "War of Roses" held in the fall.

Miss Goddard's report of the religious work department outlined the various Bible classes and vesper services which were held at Silver Bay.

The department of physical training was reported by Mrs. William Taliaferro, who told of the splendid work done in the gymnasium department under the direction of Miss Margaret E. Mosher, of the health talks given by the physicians of the city and of the walks and outings enjoyed throughout the year. About 160 girls are using the gymnasium weekly.

Another committee that meets the popular demand, the educational, was reported by Mrs. W. D. Murray. There are 138 girls enrolled in the various departments and are learning dressmaking, millinery, embroidery, stencilling and cooking.

The entertainment committee, under Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, has made the house hospitable and an attractive place through the year and has charge of many entertainments and enjoyable social gotherings. The chairman of the house committee, Mrs. John Gray Foster, told in an interesting manner of the many improvements made and of the additions made and the library by the "book contest" and various gifts of books.

The junior committee which gave its first report showed a full fledged new department in running order. Mrs. Frederick G. Andrews, the chairman, gave the reports of the sub-chairman. Miss Colton told of the High School Club, the Friend Evening Girls' Club, under the direction of Mrs. Hart and a Wednesday afternoon club cared for by Miss Ethel Titsworth and Miss Ethel Price. Mrs. David E. Titsworth reported the printing of the year books.

The nominating committee, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Miss Lockert and Miss Isabelle Scarborough, brought in the following names for re-election of the board:

Mrs. Frank W. French, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. W. A. Conner, Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Rufus T. Lincoln, Mrs. W. D. Murray, Mrs. C. W. Tennant and Mrs. David E. Titsworth. This report was accepted.

After the close of the business session, Mrs. Stephen Baker, of New York, a member of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., was introduced and for twenty minutes or more held the close attention of her audience. Following her introductory remarks, during which she expressed surprise and pleasure at the wonderful growth of the association here as shown by the reports, Mrs. Baker took for the theme of her address, these words from 17th chapter of the Gospel of John: "For their sakes He sanctified Himself."

Among other things, she called attention to the fact that if an association would be truly successful, it must be composed of really consecrated women, and she spoke of the three things which are necessary to accomplish this, namely, separation, (from worldliness) suffering and service. Following the example of

ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY TO MEET AT ROSELLE

The Presbytery of Elizabeth held its eighty-eighth stated meeting in the First Presbyterian church of Roselle this morning at 10 o'clock. The meeting was opened with a devotional service led by the moderator, John T. Reeve, of Basking Ridge.

Among the important matters which came before the presbytery at this meeting was the request of Licentiate George G. Dunshee for ordination. Mr. Dunshee has been pastor of the Bethany chapel of the Third Presbyterian church of Elizabeth for the past few years and it has greatly prospered under his ministration.

Special committees' reports were submitted as follows: On minutes of the general assembly concerning five overtures, Rev. John T. Zelie, of this city; on First German church of Rahway, Rev. William F. Whitaker; on the religious instruction of children, Rev. William Happaugh, of Springfield.

LE ROY A. ELLIS HONORED BY COUNTY DEMOCRATS

The Union County Democratic committee elected officers for the new year last night at its annual session at Democratic headquarters in the Lyceum theatre building at Elizabeth. William E. Tuttide, of Westfield, was again chosen chairman; LeRoy A. Ellis, of this city, was elected vice chairman, and Frederick Zior, of Elizabeth, secretary, with former Judge J. Williams Crane, treasurer; J. H. R. Corbitt, sergeant-at-arms. Several honorary members were also elected.

Mr. Zior was endorsed for member of the Union County Board of Elections.

CONTINUES BUSINESS WITHOUT A LICENSE

Pending the review of the granting of a license for the sale of liquor to Daniel Whalen, of Metuchen, on a writ of certiorari, Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen decided yesterday at Somerville that the writ should not act as a stay to prevent Whalen continuing selling. The matter was presented to the justice in his rooms yesterday, former Senator James H. Van Cleef appearing in behalf of the Law and Order League of Metuchen and Senator George S. Silzer for the saloonkeeper.

Mr. Silzer held that the application of Whalen had been withdrawn because it had appeared that there were not enough signers to the application. The court, it was argued, had refused to grant the application on this ground but permitted the application to be withdrawn. Mr. Van Cleef took the ground that inasmuch as the court had refused the application it could not be withdrawn. The court could not discover any record of the matter having been presented before and granted the order permitting Whalen to continue his sales of liquor until the matter is finally adjudicated.

Mrs. Margaret Baglin.

Mrs. Margaret J. Baglin, wife of James Baglin, of Stone street, died last night at her home. The funeral will take place from her late residence, No. 4 Stone street, on Thursday, morning at 8:30 and from St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock. A requem mass will be said for the repose of her soul. Mrs. Baglin is survived by a son and two daughters besides her husband, James. The son is Dennis Baglin and the daughters Mrs. C. F. Guinee and Miss Margaret Baglin.

Mrs. Smalley's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Ambrose Smalley, of Codington avenue, who died suddenly on Sunday night from apoplexy, will take place tomorrow afternoon. Following services at the house at 1 o'clock, interment will be made at Bound Brook. The husband and eight children survive her. Mrs. Smalley was the daughter of the late John Lambert and was married sixteen years ago.

He Paid His Fine.

Furman Goodman, who thought it would be cheaper to live on the food furnished at the North Plainfield lockup than to pay a fine imposed two days ago decided it would be the better part of valor to declare his impressions wrong this morning and pay the fine of three dollars which had been imposed upon him for an offense.

The P. H. S. basketball team will play the Cranford High School five at Cranford tomorrow afternoon.

OVERWHELMED WITH SNOW

But Why Complain? The Elements Cannot Be Controlled, Can They?

FIRST TIME IN TEN YEARS.

Carelessness of Trolleymen Responsible for Some Objections To the Snow Plough.

What nature and the elements are trying to do to the city is quite unexplainable, but what some of the residents are saying, sometimes vehemently, is reported as being somewhat worse. But Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett is doing his utmost to make both elements and the complaining citizens realize that the work of removing the objectionable snow and slush is being done with the utmost expedition.

Mr. Gavett is out early and late directing the work of the gangs who are doing the work and about seventy men are shoveling and carting away the stuff. But what can anybody do to help matters along?

Complaints have come in from all quarters that the accumulation of snow and slush is a menace to pedestrians. So it is, but it cannot all be removed in an instant. Any way it is believed that what is being done is the best that any commissioner could do. Several citizens of the West End have made complaint against the Public Service Railway for throwing snow back on the sidewalks after they had been shoveled off. The matter has been taken up with that company and is being rectified as fast as possible.

It is believed that the acts complained of were not committed maliciously, but through carelessness, and those responsible for them will probably have to face the accusation of carelessness but nothing more severe.

Several minor accidents have been reported, occasioned by slippery sidewalks and gratings over cellars. These are unavoidable under the circumstances. Not since February, 1899, has any such quantity of snow fallen in this part of New Jersey. In that year, on the third of February the business houses along Front street were hidden behind piles of snow almost as deep as those rolled up during the great blizzard of March 12, 1888. It looks as though everybody ought to be patient and hope that no more of the "beautiful" will come this way until 1919.

The snow was being removed from North avenue this afternoon faster than the heat could melt it, and that is going some. One of the victims of the bad walking last night was City Judge William N. Runyon, who fell on West Fourth street injuring his elbow and otherwise being shaken up.

HERE'S A CHANCE FOR AN EASTER HAT CHEAP

The following interesting report of the millinery committee was presented at the annual meeting of the Y. W. C. A. last night:

"Perhaps you think its early to think of Easter bonnets, but, do you realize that Easter is on March 27, and that if you are going to be ready, its time you were thinking about it. Hats are always expensive, but this year, they bid fair to be more expensive than ever. The season is so short this spring, that the milliners will simply have to make up for it by charging more for their hats.

"Would it not be better to avoid this. Listen, and I'll tell you how. At the Young Women's Christian Association, for less than the price of one hat, they teach you how to make their own. Not one, but many—in fact all your bonnets from now on. To begin the work until you can talk over and decide on your hat, you are taught to make the most beautiful ribbon flowers, from the simple daisy to bride roses. These you are taught to make up into simple or elaborate hair bandeaux and corsage bouquets.

"By this time you are ready to make your hat. The first one a more or less simple walking hat of straw. The next is more elaborate, made of chiffon, lace embroidery or what you wish. All this, as I said before, for less than the price of one hat. Classes begin in February. Register now."

RE-ELECT FORCE PRES'T

Plainfield Merchants Association Makes no Change in Officers.

BIG BANQUET NEXT THURSDAY.

Two Hundred and Thirty at Least Will Be Present—William L. Saunders to Act as Toastmaster.

An important meeting of the Merchants' Association took place in Coward's hall last night, and was attended by nearly all the members. Routine business was despatched with alacrity and new business taken up, including the election of officers for the ensuing year. All the old officers were re-elected and the same executive board appointed.

The officers of the organization are: President, A. E. Force; first vice-president, H. Schuldenfrei; second vice-president, F. A. Duttenhofer; secretary, H. B. Greenwood; treasurer, J. S. Johnson. The executive board consists of H. Schwed and M. C. VanArsdale.

William Kitchen will collect from the merchants daily all the waste paper and cardboard which is usually burned in back yards and other places. The object of this work is to obviate as far as possible chances of fire.

Attention was called to the banquet which will be held at Truell Hall on Thursday night. The prominence of the speakers who will respond to toastmaster former Mayor William L. Saunders invitation to address the gathering will no doubt attract a large number of men to the tables. Nearly all the tickets for the spread have been sold and in all probability more than three hundred diners will be on hand.

Job Hedges, of New York, perhaps one of the most noted after-dinner speakers known, will address the merchants and their guests. Another man, well known for his business integrity and his ability as a speaker, John N. Beach, also from New York city will have something to say that will interest the business men of this city.

Among the other speakers will be Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, James E. Martine, Rev. B. M. Bogan and Rev. George A. Warner.

The banquet promises to be one of the best ever given by the Merchants' Association. Two hundred and thirty-two tickets have been sold.

YOUNG WOMAN QUALIFIES AS A HEALTH OFFICER

Miss Harriett O. Mattison, who has been an assistant in the local Board of Health office for several years, is now qualified for the position of health officer, having successfully passed the examination at Trenton. She was recently notified of her success, and has been receiving congratulations from her many friends.

Miss Mattison surprised her friends by going to Trenton for the examination without disclosing her plans. She was one of two women to take the examination and this fact aroused considerable interest on the part of health authorities throughout the State.

Miss Mattison will remain at the Board of Health office for the present or until such time as she receives an appointment of health officer, which she is now qualified to accept.

Conference On Uniform Laws.

The three days' conference on "Uniform Legislation," which convened in Washington yesterday, was attended by nearly 600 delegates, among them State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, of this city. ## WANT THE MAINE RAISED

The New Jersey Legislature Makes Demands on Federal Government.

MR. SCHWARTZ IS SPONSER.

Unanimous Adoption of Resolution Introduced by Union County Assemblyman May Effective.

An echo of the wreck of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor was heard in the House at Trenton last night, when Assemblyman Schwartz, of Union, introduced the following resolution:

"Whereas, Since February 15, 1898, the wreck of the battleship Maine with the score or more of sailors who went down to an ocean grave, has remained at the bottom of Havana harbor, a menace to shipping; and,

"Whereas, A bill introduced by the Honorable William Sulzer, of New York, in Congress for the removal of the wreck and the proper interment of the bodies of the seamen therein contained is being advocated for passage; be it therefore

"Resolved, That the people of the State of New Jersey, in legislature assembled, urgently request the New Jersey Senators and Representatives in Congres to do their utmost to obtain immediate action on the bill introduced by Representative Sulzer, or some similar bill.

In urging the adoption of his resolution Mr. Schwartz pointed out that there were fourteen Jersey men who were killed in the wreck of the Maine, and that it was a source of constant regret that their bodies should have been permitted to lie at the bottom of the sea for so many years without an effort being made to recover them. "It is a national shame that the wreck of the Maine has not been raised," said Mr. Schwartz. "I venture the statement that no other great power in the world would have permitted such a condition of affairs to exist."

Assemblyman Nichols, of Cumberland, in a stirring speech supported the resolution and declared it was a stigma upon the nation that the government had not made a move to raise the wrecked battleship. He considered it a duty of the Legislature to adopt the resolution and thus voice what he believed to be the unanimous sentiment in New Jersey. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Among the other resolutions introduced was one by Assemblyman McCran, of Paterson, authorizing Clerk Parker to draw suitable resolutions to be adopted by the House, commending Secretary Knox for his services in promoting peace plans of the world.

SHIP BUILDING THEME OF EMERSON E. PARVIN

Emerson E. Parvin, secretary of the International Mercantile Marine Company, delivered an interesting illustrated lecture at the Plainfield High School this morning on the subject of "The Building of Ships." He also gave views of an ocean voyage through the Mediterranean Sea, visiting Spain, Rome and the Holy Land.

Mr. Parvin began with a description of the ark, and then showed step by step the progress made, finally showing one of the newest steamers of the White Star Line. He showed the different periods of construction of one of the ocean greyhounds and also many interior views upon completion. He spoke of the Steamship Philadelphia as one of the oldest ships and yet one of the fastest, on account of its splendid proportions.

One very interesting fact given was the immense quantity of supplies that is required for a ship on a single trip. He said that 25,000 eggs, forty tons of potatoes, 5,000 pounds of butter are among the necessities required for a trip.

Prof. Munroe's Lecture.

Professor Will S. Munroe of the State Normal School at Montclair, delivered a lecture before the teachers of the public schools of this city and North Plainfield at the High School auditorium this afternoon. Professor Munroe's subject was "Imagination in School Work."

THEY ENJOYED SLEIGHRIDE BUT THE HORSE DID NOT

The Flinch Club, of this city, and a few friends to the number of about twenty, enjoyed a sleighride to Westfield, last night, and had dinner at Willett's Hotel. The party engaged a team of horses and a box sleigh belonging to Frank Mobus, of the borough, and his son, Edward Mobus, was in charge.

On the way to Westfield, one of the team, a fine big bay horse, was taken ill with spinal meningitis, and it was with difficulty that the animal was taken to Westfield. It was found necessary to leave the horse with Dr. Butler at that place, and recovery is doubtful. Mr. Mobus sent another team to Westfield to bring the party home.

A pleasant surprise in connection with the affair happened at Willett's Hotel, when Mr. and Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull arrived. They made the trip by train and gave their friends a surprise.

IRA LA RUE PLANS CHAIN OF MARKETS

Ira L. LaRue, who is a member of the Quoin Investment Company, which is operating the city market, now plans to install a chain of markets throughout the State. He will soon open a city market in New Brunswick, just as soon as a deal for the land is closed. It will be in the centre of the city, and will be up-to-date in every particular.

Mr. LaRue also plans to place markets in Brooklyn and Newark. He says that he has an abundance of capital and as soon as suitable sites are selected in Brooklyn and Newark the markets will be opened. His idea is to bring the producer and consumer together, being financially interested in both.

TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF MRS. A. L. FORCE

As a tribute of esteem of the late Mrs. A. L. Force and as words of condolence for her bereaved husband and daughter, the consistory of Trinity Reformed church has passed these resolutions:

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield, N. J., desires to make the following minute on the death of Clarissa M. Force, the beloved wife of Albert L. Force, a member of the Consistory of our church:

"Whereas, It has pleased our Heavenly Father, in his all-wise providence, to take from the church on earth to the church triumphant, our esteemed and beloved friend, Clarissa M. Force, for many years an active and efficient member of our church, and one who most loyally supported its interests, be it

"Resolved, That we hereby express our deep feeling of loss in the passing away of our sister; that we think and emulate her noble Christian virtues that made her character sweet and cheerful, and that we hereby record the appreciation of her services in Christ's church and kingdom. While we shall miss her presence and service here upon earth, we recognize that the wise and holy ways of our Heavenly Father are far better than our own ways. We rejoice that she has fallen asleep in Jesus and has now entered the Master's service in the many mansions above. Be it also

"Resolved, That we extend our sincerest sympathy and Christian expression of love to the sorely bereaved husband, daughter and relatives, and pray that the tenderest, sweetest consolations of Christ's gospel and love, and a Heavenly Father's care be their sustaining strength in the time of their affliction, and that the blessed hope that sometime, somewhere, we shall meet again, be their comfort and stay. Be it also

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Consistory and a copy also be sent to the bereaved family.

"In behalf of the Consistory of Trinity Reformed church of Plainfield, New Jersey, on this thirteenth day of January, nineteen hundred and ten."

New Buick Agency.

The Buick Motor Company, of New York city, will have its own special representative here. Kent Bender, of College place, who recently resigned his position with another concern, is now the representative, and he will be located at 40 Somerset street. As Mr. Bender has already attained a local reputation as a hustler for business, and as other agencies here are active, the outlook bids fair for a big business in Plainfield this summer in motor vehicles.

HONOR FRANK H. SMITH

G. O. P. County Committee in Electing Him Chairman Pays a Tribute.

BANQUET AFTER THE MEETING.

Hamilton Kean Acts as Toastmaster—Resolutions on Mr. Smith's Good Work.

Last night's annual meeting of the Republican County Committee, in the Dix building, Elizabeth, was followed by a banquet, served in the private dining-room of the Burkely Hotel, with Hamilton Kean, brother of the United States Senator, presiding.

The chief speakers were Mr. Kean, James C. Calvert, county clerk; Frank H. Smith, county registrar, and James White, all hard workers for the party.

The following were the officers chosen, the only new appointee being the treasurer, Dr. J. E. Rowe, of Summit, who succeeded Henry S. Fullerton, of Scotch Plains.

Chairman, Frank H. Smith, Plainfield; vice-chairman, James C. Calvert, Elizabeth; secretary, James Warner, of Cranford; sergeant-at-arms, James White, Elizabeth.

Resolutions dwelling on the efficient services of Chairman Frank Smith were adopted unanimously. These resolutions told of Mr. Smith's work on behalf of the party in city, county and State.

The committee in charge of the banquet was composed of James White, chairman; Neil McLeod, Jr., secretary; Andrew McCardell, W. H. Randolph, Jr., Dr. J. E. Rowe.

Henry S. Fullerton, the retiring treasurer, was presented with an engrossed set of resolutions.

Among those who made short addresses were James Warner, the secretary of the committee; Dr. Rowe, of Summit, the new treasurer; Sheriff Kirkland, Robert H. McCready and J. Henry Crane. All of the Plainfield members of the committee, except James F. Buckle, who is abroad, were present.

Following is the resolution passed at the meeting last night:

Resolved, That the successful management of the Republican campaign for the past five years, by Frank H. Smith, chairman of the Union County Republican Executive Committee, is entitled to formal recognition; therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the said members of the committee, hereby recognize the valiant services of our chairman under whose administration harmony has been preserved within the party; effective work done and satisfactory results secured in State, county and municipal matters. He has been tireless in his efforts to promote the welfare of the party as well as considerate in observing and respecting the rights of individuals. Although the duties devolving upon him have been both difficult and exacting, they have not been shirked, nor has responsibility been evaded.

This committee speaking for itself and in behalf of the large constituency it represents hereby expresses sincere appreciation of the personal and official services of its chairman and as the best expression of the confidence in him have unanimously requested him to assume the labors and duties of the office for the coming year. We hereby assure him of our collective and individual cooperation in the discharge of his duties.

REPETITION OF Y. M. C. A. CONCERT TONIGHT.

The repetition of the thirty-fifth concert of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, which will take place tonight in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, will bring to the fore those splendid artists who made such a fine impression at the original performance. Miss Gesswein will sing "Heaven Hath Shed a Tear," and "O, Come to Me Mavourneen."

Mme. Ida Randolph Hilliard will preside at the piano and the orchestra will also be assisted by Harold Jacobs, baritone. Mr. Korff's orchestra is too well known to require any notice here. It will be a treat to all who attend. A silver collection will be taken up.

Beginnings of English Drama.

An interesting paper on "The Beginnings of the English Drama" was presented by Mrs. Charles E. Brooks at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday in the Hartridge School auditorium. The miracle and hystery plays of the early church formed the theme of the paper. It was preceded by an animated discussion on the subject "What is Culture?"

The Loyal Temperance Legion will meet tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at the W. C. T. U. rooms. All children are invited.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

There are more good hearty laughs in the two hour and a half reign of Johnny Ray as "King Casey," in which piece he will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre January 20, than in any other two modern musical farce comedies that can be mentioned. If there is a comedian on the stage who can find and set in motion the risibilities of a confirmed grouch that comedian is Johnny Ray. He has been the peer of all musical comedy funmakers for the past half dozen years, but in his latest offering his own laugh record has been broken.

A minstrel veteran heads the fun forces with the Al G. Field Greater Minstrels; a son of the South, years of association with the darkeys, whose actions and whims have enlivened the American stage with more laughs than those of all other municipalities. Mr. Healey has a bundle of merriment larger than his diminutive body; his appearance and make-up is a laugh. He is irresistible; makes fun as naturally as sunshine makes hay—Healy is the Al G. Fields minstrel provoker. At the Plainfield theatre matinee and night, January 22.

Miss Elsie Janis, who is starring this season in "The Fair Co-Ed," George Ade's newest college play is, as nearly everybody knows, an enthusiastic motorist. Miss Janis is one of the few stars who carries her automobile with her wherever she journeys, and who has the use of it every afternoon that the weather is fine, even if she is playing "one night stands." Miss Janis is an excellent driver herself, and only carries a chauffeur to look after her car. Miss Janis in "The Fair Co-Ed" will be seen at the Plainfield theatre January 24.

W. W. Nugent, of Riverside drive, Bound Brook, is spending several weeks in New York.

E. P. Bryan and son, Edward Bryan, of River Rest, near Bound Brook, are spending a month at Porto Rico.

ITCHING ECZEMA WASHED AWAY

Is it worth 25 cents to you to stop that awful, agonizing itch? Surely you will spend 25 cents on your druggist's recommendation, to cool and heal and soothe that terrible itching eruption?

We absolutely know that the itch is stopped at once by D. D. D. Prescription, and the cures all seem to be permanent.

ASTRONOMICAL EVENTS.

Sun sets 4:57, rises 7:16; moon sets 1:23 a. m.

Plainfield, N. J., January 18, 1910.

The next President of these United States will be Theodore Roosevelt. Such is the handwriting on the wall. Happy the day when we have a return of his ministrations.

At the High School this afternoon Prof. Munroe, of Montclair, lectured on "Imagination in School Work." There is more imagination than work in many instances and more fads than real practical education, too. Unfortunately, however, the pupils do not realize it until they go out in the world of experience to earn a living.

City Treasurer William F. Arnold's annual report gave ample testimony to the arduous and exacting duties devolving upon that official. No one, at all interested in civic affairs, could fail to understand how each penny of the taxpayers' money was spent. The report was so drawn that it was clear at a glance.

OCEAN GROVE ACTIVITY.

Ocean Grove, Jan. 18.—Since the organization of the Ocean Grove Camp-meeting Association in 1870 only two meetings a year have been held by that body. At the annual assembly in November it was decided to have four sessions a year hereafter, "on the basis of regular Methodist quarterly meetings." In consonance with this resolution, the members of the association will assemble here tomorrow for an all-day session.

Among the more important matters to be brought forward for consideration are the work of building a beach pavilion at the north end of the grove, begun last week, the extension of the Boardwalk, the summer program and street improvement. It is expected that arrangements will be made to care for the association's interests in the Legislature in the present fight to have Ocean Grove changed into a borough. In this fight the association does not propose to be caught napping, but will be represented at every session of the lawmaking body. Should the borough bill, shortly to be introduced, be reported for a public hearing, Rev. Dr. Aaron E. Ballard, the venerable president of the association, with former Governor E. C. Stokes, will represent the governing body before the Legislative Committee on Boroughs and Borough Commissions.

At Proctor's.

There is an abundance of comedy at Proctor's theatre this week. The Braithwaites present a rip-roaring sketch in which a man enters the wrong house and the situations following, causes one continual laugh. Mr. and Mrs. Lavernie appear in a clever sketch entitled "Hubby's Bluff," a playlet full of fun. The Wynnings are a pair that never fail to get a big hand, in their clog dancing and yodeling. The films d'art are up to the usual standard always maintained by Proctor & Sanderson.

VICTORY FOR STATE RAILROAD COMMISSION.

Trenton, Jan. 18.—The State Railroad Commission has gained a substantial point in the construction of the law under which it operates by a decision of the Supreme Court refusing to grant a motion for a reargument in the proceedings under which the board ordered the Lackawanna Railroad to furnish adequate railroad facilities at Broadway. The railroad appealed from the order of the board and the Supreme Court held that the order was neither unreasonable nor unjust and dismissed the appeal.

The subsequent application for a reargument was based upon the claim that the disposition of the case did not conform to the act which provides that the disqualified party or company "may file a petition setting forth the particular cause or causes of objection to such order in the Supreme Court against said board as defendant; said action shall have precedent over all causes on the docket of the court, and said cause shall be tried and determined as other civil causes in said court." Justice Bergen, who wrote the opinion refusing the motion for a reargument, said:

The argument of the railroad company now is that the cause was not tried and no definite issue was presented; that the issue in this case is the adequacy of the present facilities for the present traffic, and that in other civil causes the plaintiff has the burden of proving his allegations. The result reached by the Supreme Court was that the evidence before the State board was sufficient to justify its conclusions on the issue presented by the defendant.

The Supreme Court heard the issue in the manner presented by the defendant, who made no attempt to present the issue for trial and determination as other civil causes are tried. The law does not provide the means for any such trial. If one exists the defendant did not avail itself of it, but sought to review the action of the State board without application for a jury or other manner of trial. In the absence of any positive direction in the act we think that the defendant had the trial contemplated, in any event it had the trial it sought, and made no objection to the forum.

CHILDREN'S FURS.

Fashion is leading its votaries towards fascinating furs for little children.

The tiny tots in their white furs look like animated snowballs. Some of the hats, which usually are sold with the coats, are pulled over the head, with only a peep at the merry eyes to convince the outsider of the fact that a little boy or girl is enjoying the cozy warmth.

Naturally, our eyes turn toward the most expensive coats. Ermine is elegant yet babyish for his royal highness. Coats are made of tailless ermine, with muffs and hats to match. On these smaller pieces of the three-part set are the tails. Gray goat is enjoying a new popularity in France for tiny motor coats. Its color and warmth are reliable, and French mothers are wisely pointing a way which others will do well to follow.

MORE THAN 7,000,000 BOOKS CIRCULATED

Trenton, Jan. 18.—That there has been a material increase in the number of books circulated through the 194 public libraries of the State is shown through the anual report of State Librarian Henry C. Buchanan submitted to Governor Fort. Mr. Buchanan gives this circulation for the year as 7,222,760, which means an average of something like four volumes to every inhabitant. Added interest is given to these figures by the further statement that the libraries in question contain but 1,196,297 books, and the traveling libraries maintained by New Jersey 611,186 additional.

In the State Library alone there are 76,003 volumes, about 25,000 of which are included in the law section. Mr. Buchanan sets forth that many of these volumes, as well as hundreds of the reports and documents of other States kept on hand, are of little value and seldom called for. He suggests that these may be discarded with advantage, to make room for more important books.

During the year there were added to the State Library eighteen different lives of Abraham Lincoln, twelve volumes of Robert G. Ingersoll's works, several genealogies of early New Jersey families, Evan's "American Bibliography, 1639-1820," the Iowa and California digests, and thirteen volumes of celebrated trials, as well as twenty almanacs published late in the eighteenth and early in the nineteenth century. United States Senator Briggs was the donor of eight volumes of "Hind's Precedents of the House of Representatives," and Miss Elizabeth A. Smith, of Trenton, gave three manuscripts containing personal reminiscences of her father, Charles Perrin Smith, who was for many years an active politician.

Christ, the women must separate their lives unto God; they must bear the burdens and sins of others, understand the needs and evils of the world in order that they may help others to overcome them, realizing that if they would have their work effective, it must cost them something; then they must render a self-giving service, and this might be accomplished through love and prayer. The prayer life is the greatest part of their service, for in it lies the power and strength to do. They should pray for those for whom they work, for failure so to do must result in spiritual loss to those whom they could help.

In closing, Mrs. Baker said that she had recently seen Montmorency Falls in Canada, and it seemed to her that this scene was a picture of what their Christian life should be. Above the falls was a sea of pure water; this was the peace of God. Then came the torrent, strong and swift, falling into the abyss; this was the result of the power gained through God, which go down into the abyss of sin and suffering in order to redeem. Then beyond lay the quiet waters; peace once more.

Elsie Janis in "The Fair Co-Ed" at Plainfield Theatre Monday, Jan. 24.

Following Mrs. Baker's address, James R. Joy told of the recent conference held in Rochester, N. Y., in connection with the Student Volunteer Movement, under the leadership of John R. Mott. These conferences are held once in four years—once in a college generation—and are attended by students from colleges, universities and normal schools in all parts of the United States and Canada. Each school is entitled to send one delegate out of every one hundred students, in addition to one professor. About two-thirds of the delegates are young men. The object is two-fold; to deepen the spiritual life and to show the students the obligations resting upon them to meet the spiritual needs of the world and to give their lives for this noble purpose. There were 722 colleges and schools represented by the 2,700 delegates.

Mr. Joy told of the numerous prominent speakers at the conference and gave all a clear idea of the entire program, showing how beneficial it is to the delegates. The last of the five days' conference was most impressive. The platform was occupied by the ninety-two student volunteers who had been accepted for service in the mission fields and were awaiting sailing orders. Each was given an opportunity to tell in a few words, to what field he or she was going and why they were going. Then the names of sixty-one who had died in service during the past four years were read. No pledges were given at these conferences, but the spiritual uplift gained there, result in many consecrations to mission work, as shown by the fact that the 4,336 students who have enlisted in this service since 1886 represent one-fourth of all the missionaries.

STATE PAYS TRIBUTE TO FORMER GOVERNOR.

Out of respect for former Governor George T. Werts, who died yesterday at his home in Jersey City, Governor John Franklin Fort last night issued a proclamation paying proper respect to the life and memory of the former Chief Executive. In addition to that, the Senate, in tribute to the former Governor, decided to adjourn last night for the week, after the introduction of bills.

HUMORS OF CIVIL SERVICE

Some Rich Answers in the Examination Papers of Candidates.

A FEW OF THE SAMPLES.

One Says Van Hose is Governor—Another That George Washington Was a Civil War General.

Random selections of answers that are rich in humor to the passing reader, and yet may have spelled a tragedy to the ambitions of those who penned them under mental test provided by the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, in the effort to provide lists of eligible applicants for public jobs, are as follows:

FORMER GOVERNOR GEO. T. WERTS DEAD

Former Governor George T. Werts died at his residence, in Jersey City, at 6 o'clock yesterday morning, aged 63 years. He had been ailing for several months and a few days ago was stricken with pneumonia.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Runyon Werts, and two daughters, Miss Mary Evelyn Werts and Miss Hattie Werts.

The funeral services at the residence Wednesday morning will be for the family only and will be conducted by Rev. Jesse Joralemon, of the Grace P. E. church. The body will be taken to Morristown on the train arriving there at 2 o'clock in the afternoon and following services at the grave in Evergreen Cemetery by Rev. Thompson, of the Morrisville Baptist church, will be interred beside that of his uncle, former Attorney General Vanatta.

GARTER SUPERSTITION.

Nowadays garters are very generally ousted from favor by the more hygienic suspenders, but many superstitions about them still survive. Here are a few:

The marriage of a bride who wears any but white garters on her wedding day will have an unhappy ending.

The girl who wears her garters below the knee will early lose her beauty.

To put on the left garter before the right on dressing in the morning will bring bad luck all day.

The luckiest colors for garters are white, blue and black. The wearers of yellow garters will lose a friend within a year.

FOR EQUAL FRANCHISE

Suffragists Plan to Form Organization in New Jersey.

MRS. MACKEY WILL ASSIST.

Plainfield, Newark, Jersey City, Trenton, Oranges and Other Cities to Be Represented.

Although announced to take place tomorrow, the first meeting to form a State branch of the Equal Franchise Society in New Jersey will not be held in Hoboken until next week, and possibly not until a still later date. The meeting will be held at the home of Richard Stevens, Castle Point, one of the most historical and one of the best known residences in the entire State.

As soon as the New Jersey State branch is organized it is the plan of the prominent men and women interested in it to establish societies in the principal cities and towns of the State. It is likely that the first offspring of the State branch will be in Plainfield, Hoboken, the Oranges, Newark, Jersey City, Atlantic City and Trenton.

The announcement that the meeting would not be held tomorrow was made yesterday at the headquarters of the Equal Franchise Society, in the Metropolitan Insuranee Building in New York, where it was also stated that Mrs. Clarence H. Mackay, president of the society, would preside at the meeting and that Joseph O'Brien, chairman of the organization committee of the society, would attend and in all probably would deliver an address.

The Equal Franchise Society plans to establish tributary organizations or sub-ordinate branches in every State in the country. New Jersey will be honored by having the first of these tributary societies.

Many prominent men and women in New Jersey are now deeply interested in the suffrage movement, and several will participate in the work—to be started at Castle Point for the establishment of a New Jersey branch of the Equal Franchise Society. Mrs. Everett Colby, wife of Senator Everett Colby, leader of the New Idea party and himself an avowed friend of the suffragists, together with Mrs. Alexander, of Castle Point, and Mrs. Decker, of Jersey City, are enrolled in the cause of the Equal Franchise Society. Mrs. Giddings, of Atlantic City, daughter-in-law of Professor Giddings, of Columbia University, and several women prominent in Trenton are associated in the movement.

It is likely that Mrs. Clara V. Laddy, of Arlington, president of the Woman's Suffrage Association of New Jersey, will be asked to attend the meeting at Castle Point. It is the aim of the Equal Franchise Society to work in harmony with all other clubs having for their object votes for women. The Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Woman's Suffrage Association, has indorsed the plan of the Equal Franchise Society to extend branches into all the States in the Union.

According to the laws of the Equal Franchise Society a branch may be formed in any State upon the application of seven persons for a charter and the payment of $10. The presidents of these State branches will form an advisory board of the national or parent organization.

WANTS HUSBAND TO KEEP HIS AGREEMENT.

Trenton, Jan. 18.—Mrs. Rosalie G. Dalsimer has begun suit in the Court of Chancery to compel her husband, Alphonse Dalsimer, of Newark, to fulfill the terms of an agreement entered into last July, under which he bound himself to contribute $30 a week to his wife for the support of herself and her daughter Elsa. According to the bill, the agreement was entered into after Dalsimer had made several attempts to induce his wife to sign articles of separation. This, Mrs. Dalsimer avers, she always refused to do, declaring that for her own sake and that of her children she wished to continue living with her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Dalsimer were married in Savannah in 1887, and have since lived in Philadelphia, Newark and other parts of the country to which the husband's business took him. They have two children, Louis and Elsa, the latter being eighteen years old. During the latter part of 1908 Dalsimer is alleged to have first broached the subject of a separation from his wife upon the ground that he had ceased to care for her. Since then he has brought the subject up several times, according to the bill, and has always been met with a refusal on the part of his wife. It is said, however, that Dalsimer left his home and contributed only irregularly to the support of his wife up to the time of the agreement of last July.

The husband continued the payments of $30 a week until the first of November, when he allowed them to become in arrears. Assemblyman Duane E. Minard was trustee under the terms of the agreement. It is set forth in the bill that Mr. Minard has been frequently appealed to to take action against Dalsimer to compel the making of payments, but has refused to do so. The bill to enforce specific performance was filed by Cortlandt Parker, Jr., counsel for Mrs. Dalsimer.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Chauncey Olcott in "Ragged Robin," at the Academy of Music, New York. Two weeks commencing Jan. 24. Matinee Wednesday and Saturday. Five new songs, sung in his inimitable way, was the occasion for demonstration of the popularity in St. Louis of Chauncey Olcott, at the production of his new play, "Ragged Robin," at the Century last season. "The Eyes That Come From Ireland," "Sweet Girl of My Dreams," and "The Laugh With a Tear in It," seemed to be the favorites, but "I You'll Remember Me" and "I Used to Believe in Fairies," lacked no appreciation. In a plot, filled with romance, the pretty lore traditions of Ireland have an important part, so far as they concern "the little people," the Fairy being who, for good or ill, influence the lives of man or woman. In "Ragged Robin" their ability in both directions is shown. The last act is made very effective by the stage setting, the pursuit of the Will O' the Wisp and the dance of "the little people" in the Fairy circle. The sunrise on the Peat Bog leads to a climax where all ends well. Mr. Olcott's voice seems to grow stronger every season, and the audience just swallow every note that comes from his throat. This will be the last time Mr. Olcott will be seen in "Ragged Robin" in New York.

A Seal Sombrero.

Among the newest models of millinery is a large sombrero of seal musquash. It has the dash of the western plains and the modish turn of a knowing designer. Around the crown passes a band of embroidery reminiscent of Venetian design and colors, and the rest remains with the proper tilt of the wide brim.

Plaster for Feet.

For sensative feet and callous spots on the soles try wrapping them in adhesive plaster, putting it on smoothly and without wrinkles. This will cause perspiration, softening the callous places and finally relieving the soreness entirely.

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY

By Booth Tarkington

Miss Elizabeth sat beneath the arbor at the other end of the courtyard, and beside her stood the trim and glossy bay saddle horse that she had ridden from Quesnay, his head outstretched above his mistress to paddle at the vine leaves with a tremulous upper lip.

An expression in the lady's attitude and air which I instinctively construed as histrionic seemed intended to convey that she had been kept waiting, yet had waited without reproach, and, although she must have heard me coming, she did not look toward me until I was quite near and spoke her name. At that she sprang up quickly enough and stretched out her hand to me.

"Run to earth!" she cried, advancing a step to meet me.

"A pretty poor trophy of the chase," said I, "but proud that you are its killer."

To my surprise and mystification her cheeks and brow flushed rosily. She was obviously conscious of it and laughed.

"Don't be embarrassed," she said.

"I!"

"Yes, you, poor man! I suppose I couldn't have more thoroughly compromised you. Mme. Brossard will never believe in your respectability again."

"Oh, yes, she will," said I.

"What! A lodger who has ladies calling upon him at 5 o'clock in the morning! But your bundle's on your shoulder," she rattled on, laughing, "though there's many could be bolder, and perhaps you'd let me walk a bit of the way with you if you're for the road."

"Perhaps I will," said I. She caught up her riding skirt, fastening it by a clasp at her side, and we passed out through the archway and went slowly along the road bordering the forest, her horse following obediently at half rein's length.

"When did you hear that I was at Mme. Brossard's?" I asked.

"Ten minutes after I returned to Quesnay late yesterday afternoon."

"Who told you?"

"Louise."

I repeated the name questioningly. "You mean Mrs. Larrabee Harman?"

"Louise Harman," she corrected. "Didn't you know she was staying at Quesnay?"

"I guessed it, though Amedee got the name confused."

"Yes; she's been kind enough to look after the place for us while we were away. George won't be back for another ten days, and I've been overseeing an exhibition for him in London. Afterward I did a round of visits—tiresome enough, but among people it's well to keep in touch with on George's account."

"I see," I said, with a grimness which probably escaped her. "But how did Mrs. Harman know that I was at Les Trois Pigeons?"

"She met you once in the forest"—

"Twice," I interrupted.

"She mentioned only once. Of course she'd often heard both George and me speak of you."

"But how did she know it was I and where I was staying?"

"Oh, that!" Her smile changed to a laugh. "Your maitre d'hotel told Ferret, a gardener at Quesnay, that you were at the inn."

"He did!"

"Oh, but you mustn't be angry with him. He made it quite all right."

"How did he do that?" I asked, trying to speak calmly, though there was that in my mind which might have blanched the parchment cheek of a grand inquisitor.

"He told Ferret that you were very anxious not to have it known— You think Louise very lovely to look at, don't you?" she asked.

"Exquisite," I answered.

"Every one does."

"I suppose she told you"—and now I felt myself growing red—"that I behaved like a drunken acrobat when she came upon me in the path?"

"No. Did you?" cried Miss Elizabeth, with a ready credulity which I thought by no means pretty. "Louise said that she wished she could have had a better look at what you were painting."

"Heaven bless her!" I exclaimed. "Her reticence was angelic."

"Yes, she has reticence," said my companion, with enough of the same quality to make me look at her quickly. A thin line had been drawn across her forehead.

"You mean she's still reticent with George?" I ventured.

"Yes," she answered sadly. "Poor George always hopes, of course, in the silent way of his kind when they suffer from such unfortunate passions, and he waits."

"I suppose that former husband of hers recovered."

"I believe he's still alive somewhere. Locked up, I hope!" she finished crisply.

"She retained his name," I observed.

"Harman? Yes; she retained it. At all events she's rid of him."

"It's hard," I reflected aloud—"hard to understand her making that mistake, young as she was. Even in the glimpse of her I've had it was easy to see something of what she's like—a fine, rare, high type."

"But you didn't know him, did you?" Miss Elizabeth asked, with some dryness.

"No," I answered. "I saw him twice—once at the time of his accident—that was only a nightmare, his face covered with"— I shivered. "But I had caught a glimpse of him on the boulevard, and of all the dreadful"—

"Oh, but he wasn't always dreadful," she interposed quickly. "He was a fascinating sort of person, quite charming and good looking, when she ran away with him, though he was horribly dissipated even then. He always had been that. Of course she thought she'd be able to straighten him out, poor girl! She tried for three years—three years it hurts one to think of! You see, it must have been something very like a 'grand passion' to hold her through a pain three years long."

"Or tremendous pride," said I. "Women make an odd world of it for the rest of us. There was good old George, as true and straight a man as ever lived"—

"And she took the other! Yes." George's sister laughed sorrowfully.

"But George and she have both survived the mistake," I went on, with confidence. "Her tragedy must have taught her some important differences. Haven't you a notion she'll be tremendously glad to see him when he comes back from America?"

"Ah, I do hope so!" she cried. "You see, I'm fearing that he hopes so, too—to the degree of counting on it."

"You don't count on it yourself?"

She shook her head. "With any other woman I should."

"Why not with Mrs. Harman?"

"Cousin Louise has her ways," said Miss Elizabeth slowly, and, whether she could not further explain her doubts or whether she would not, that was all I got out of her on the subject at the time. I asked one or two more questions, but my companion merely shook her head again, alluding vaguely to her cousin's "ways." Then she brightened suddenly and inquired when I would have my things sent up to the chateau from the inn.

At the risk of a misunderstanding which I felt I could ill afford I resisted her kind hospitality, and the outcome of it was that there should be a kind of armistice, to begin with my dining at the chateau that evening.

"Did anybody ever tell you," was her surprising inquiry, "that you are the queerest man of these times?"

"No," I answered. "Don't you think you're a queerer woman?"

"Footle!" she cried scornfully. "Be off to your woods and your woodscaping!"

Her bay horse departed at a smart gait.

My work was accomplished after a fashion more or less desultory that day. I had many absent moments, was restless and walked more than I painted and returned to the inn earlier than usual.

While dressing I sent word to Professor Keredec that I should not be able to join him at dinner that evening.

Miss Elizabeth had the courage to take me under her wings when I arrived in acceptance of her invitation, placing me upon her left at dinner, but sprightlier calls than mine demanded and occupied her attention. At my other side sat a magnificently upholstered lady who offered a fine shoulder and the rear wall of a collar of pearls for my observation throughout the evening as she leaned forward talking eagerly with a male personage across the table. This was a prince ending in "ski." He permitted himself the slight vagary of wearing a gold bracelet, and perhaps this flavor of romance drew the lady.

The banquet was drawing to a close when Miss Elizabeth leaned toward me and spoke.

"Anne Elliott, yonder, is asking you a question," she repeated, nodding at a very pretty girl down and across the table from me. Miss Anne Elliott's attractive voice had previously enabled me to recognize her as the young woman who had threatened to serenade Les Trois Pigeons.

"I beg your pardon," I said, addressing her.

"I hear you're at Les Trois Pigeons," said Miss Elliott.

"Yes?"

"Would you mind telling us something of the mysterious Narcissus?"

"If you'll be more definite," I returned in the tone of a question.

"I mean a recklessly charming vision with a white tie and white hair and white flannels," she said.

"Oh," said I, "he's not mysterious."

"But he is," she returned. "I insist on his being mysterious, rarely, grandly, strangely mysterious! You will let me think so?" This young lady had a whimsical manner of emphasizing words unexpectedly, with a breathless intensity that approached violence, a habit dangerously contagious among nervous persons, so that I answered slowly out of a fear that I might echo it.

"Who and what is the glorious stranger?" she asked.

"He's a young American, very attractive, very simple."

"But he's mad!" she interrupted.

"Oh, no!" I said hastily.

"But he is! A person told me so in a garden this very afternoon," she went on eagerly—"a person with a rake and ever so many moles on his chin. This person told me all about him. His name is Oliver Saffren, and he's in the charge of a very large doctor and quite, quite mad!"

"Jean Ferret, the gardener," I said deliberately and with venom, "is fast acquiring notoriety in these parts as an idiot of purest ray, and he had his information from another whose continuance unhanged is every hour more miraculous."

"How ruthless of you," cried Miss Elliott, with exaggerated reproach, "when I have had such a thrilling happiness all day in believing that riotously beautiful creature mad! If he isn't, why does he have an enormous doctor with him?"

"This is romance!" I retorted. "The doctor is Professor Keredec, illustriously known in this country, but not as a physician, and they are following some form of scientific research together."

The windows had been thrown open, allowing passage to a veranda. Miss Elizabeth led the way outdoors with the prince. I caught a final glimpse of Mrs. Harman, which revealed that she was looking at me with tensity, but with the movement of intervening groups I lost her. Miss Elliott pointedly waited for me until I came round the table, then attached me definitely by taking my arm, accompanying her action with a dazzling smile.

Tables and coffee were waiting on the broad terrace below, with a big moon rising in the sky. I descended the steps in charge of this pretty cavalier, allowed her to seat me at the most remote of the tables and accepted without unwillingness other gallantries of hers in the matter of coffee and cigarettes. "And now," she said—"now that I've done so much for your dearest hopes and comfort, look up at the milky moon and tell me all."

She leaned an elbow on the marble railing that protected the terrace and, shielding her eyes from the moonlight with her hand, affected to gaze at me dramatically. "Who and what is the glorious stranger?" she asked.

Resisting an impulse to chime in with her humor, I gave her so dry and commonplace an account of my young friend at the inn that I presently found myself abandoned to solitude again.

"I don't know where to go," she complained as she rose. "These other people are most painful to a girl of my intelligence, but I cannot linger by your side. Untruth long ago lost its interest for me, and I prefer to believe Mr. Jean Ferret, if that is the gentleman's name. I'd join Miss Ward and Cressie Ingle yonder, but Cressie would be indignant. I shall soothe my hurt with sweetest airs. Adieu."

With that she made me a solemn courtesy and departed, a pretty little figure, not little in attractiveness, the strong moonlight, tinged with blue, shimmering over her blond hair and splashing brightly among the ripples of her silks and laces. A moment later some chords were sounded upon a piano, which ran on into "La Vie de Boheme" and out of that into something else. I was floated off into a reverie that was like a prelude for the person who broke it. She came so quietly that I did not hear her until she was almost beside me and spoke to me. It was the second time that had happened.

CHAPTER VII.

"MRS. HARMAN," I said as she took the chair vacated by the elfin young lady, "you remember my woodland didos, I fear?"

She smiled in a pleasant, comprehending way, but neither directly replied nor made any return speech whatever. Instead she let her forearms rest on the broad railing of the marble balustrade and, leaning forward, gazed out over the shining and mysterious slopes below.

"Mr. Cresson Ingle," I hazarded, "is he an old, new friend of your cousin's? I think he was not above the horizon when I went to Capri two years ago."

"He wants Elizabeth," she returned, adding quietly, "as you've seen." And when I had verified this assumption with a monosyllable she continued, "He's an 'available,' but I should hate to have it happen. He's hard."

"He doesn't seem very hard toward her," I murmured, looking down into the garden where Mr. Ingle just then happened to be adjusting a scarf about his hostess' shoulders.

"He's led a detestable life," said Mrs. Harman, "among detestable people."

"He seems to me much of a type with these others," I said.

"Oh, they keep their surfaces about the same."

"It made me wish I had a little more surface tonight," I laughed. "I'd have fitted better. Miss Ward is different at different times. When we are alone together she always has the air of excusing or at least explaining these people to me, but this evening I've had the disquieting thought that perhaps she also explained me to them."

"Oh, no!" said Mrs. Harman, turning to me quickly. "Didn't you see? She was making up to Mr. Ingle for this morning. It came out that she had ridden over at daylight to see you, Anne Elliott discovered it in some way and told him."

"I suppose she finished her investigations. You told her all you could?"

"Almost."

"I suppose you wouldn't trust me with the reservation?" she asked, smiling.

"I would trust you with anything," I answered seriously.

"You didn't gratify that child?" she said, half laughing. Then, to my surprise, her tone changed suddenly, and she began again in a hurried low voice, "You didn't tell her"— and stopped there, breathless and troubled, letting me see that I had been right after all. This was what she wanted to talk about.

"I didn't tell her that young Saffren is mad—no—if that is what you mean."

"I'm glad you didn't," she said slowly.

"In the first place, I wouldn't have told here even if it were true," I returned, "and in the second it isn't true, though you have some reason to think it is," I added.

"I?" she said. "Why?"

"His speaking to you as he did, thing on the face of it inexcusable."

"Why did he call me 'Mme. d'Armand?'" she interposed.

I explained something of the mental processes of Amedee, and she listened till I had finished, then made me continue.

"That's all," I said blankly, but with a second thought caught her meaning. "Oh, about young Saffren, you mean?"

"Yes."

"I know him pretty well," I said, "without really knowing anything about him; but, what is stranger, I believe he doesn't really know a great deal about himself. My idea is that probably through some great illness he lost not his faculty of memory, but his memories, or at least most of them. That's all, except that there's something about the young man that draws one to him. I couldn't tell you how much I like him nor how sorry I am that he offended you."

"He didn't offend me," she murmured, almost whispered.

"He didn't mean to," I said warmly. "I am glad you understand that."

"I saw him today," she said gently. "This afternoon when I went for my walk he was waiting where the paths intersect"—

Some hasty ejaculation I do not know what, came from me, but she lifted her hand.

"Wait," she said quietly. "As soon as he saw me he came straight toward me"—

"Oh, but this won't do at all!" I broke out. "It's too bad"—

"Wait." She leaned forward. "He said he must know if he had offended me."

"You told him"—

"I told him 'No!'" And it seemed to me that her voice, which up to this point had been low, but very steady, shook upon the monosyllable. "He walked with me a little way—perhaps it was longer"—

"Trust me that it shan't happen again!" I exclaimed. "I'll see that Keredec knows of this at once. He will"—

"No, no," she interrupted quickly. "That is just what I want you not to do. Will you promise me?"

"I'll promise anything you ask me. But didn't he frighten you?"

"He didn't frighten me—not as you mean. He was very quiet and"— She broke off unexpectedly with a little pitying cry and turned to me, lifting both hands appealingly. "And, oh, doesn't he make one sorry for him!"

That was just it. She had gone straight to the heart of his mystery; his strangeness was the strange pathos that invested him; the "singularity" of "that other monsieur" was solved for me at last.

When she had spoken she rose, advanced a step and stood looking out over the valley again, her skirts pressing the balustrade. One of the moments in my life when I have wished to be a figure painter came then as she raised her arms, the sleeves, of some filmy texture, falling back from them with the gesture, and clasped her hands lightly behind her neck, the graceful angle of her chin uplifted to the full rain of moonshine.

She stood in profile to me. There were some jasmine flowers at her breast. I could see them rise and fall with more than deep breathing.

GOLF.

That a determined effort will be made shortly toward codifying local golf rules is shown by the fact that at a recent executive session of the Metropolitan Golf Association a committee was appointed for that purpose. Those asked to serve were Walter J. Travis, Leighton Calkins and Max Behr. This project of codifying local rules was first brought up at the Metropolitan meeting a year ago, but absolutely nothing was done. At the recent session the delegates voted favorably on the proposition to codify, though there appeared to be a considerable difference of opinion as to how the subject should be handled.

In discussing the question recently, one of those asked to serve did not hesitate to express his doubts as to the ability of the committee to work the problem out satisfactorily. As he put it, local rules are local rules, made to fit certain existing conditions, and who shall say that they are not there for a purpose or that they are not absolutely essential? If this codification committee decides to delve into the subject carefully it may be necessary for a personal inspection of practically all the links claiming membership in the association.

Furthermore, it is a question if meddling with certain local rules drafted by golfers in every way competent to do such work will meet with general favor. As one devotee of the game expressed it, such action might easily be misconstrued as a reflection on the ability of the club. In the opinion of many, the weakest point with regard to existing local rules lies in their lack of prominence. If more pains were taken to acquaint visiting golfers with local conditions a great deal of the trouble now experienced would be avoided.

LOCAL GUARDSMEN'S PROGRAM A BIG ONE

Following a short drill by Company K at its armory last night, the members were divided into squads under the direction of the corporals and sergeants for instruction in military courtesy. Then a business meeting was held. It was decided to change the date for the annual fair from February 19-26 to March -12. This is done because of two important drills.

On Monday night, February 21, the company will hold its annual drill and inspection under the direction of Captain Allen, U. S. Infantry, and on Saturday afternoon, February 26, the local company will take part in a regimental drill in the armory at Trenton. This will be the first time that Company K has taken part in an afternoon affair of this character. In the evening there will be a review of the regiment by Major-General Wanser.

Captain Harry B. Kitchel informed the men last night that it had been decided that the company will go into camp next summer with the guardsmen of Pennsylvania, presumably at Mt. Gretna. This means that the company will not go to Sea Girt, but instead will have a fine opportunity for securing excellent experience in army movements. Any young men who are interested in the company or its affairs are invited to attend the weekly drills and familiarize themselves with them, and, if the yso desire, to join the company.

VAN M. W. SUYDAM DIES AT NEW BRUNSWICK HOME

VanMarter Wyckoff Suydam, first vice president of the National Bank of New Jersey, at New Brunswick, died Sunday night at his home in that place of pleuro-pneumonia. He had been ill since Wednesday and his unexpected death was a great shock not only to the community, but to many friends in this city.

Recently, Mr. Suydam gave the Netherwood Reformed church a handsome silver communion service, while the Sunday-school class of the First Reformed church, New Brunswick, of which the late Mrs. Suydam was the teacher, gave the local church a communion table. Mrs. Suydam died suddenly last June, as she and her husband were preparing to go to Belmar for the summer, and her husband never fully recovered from the shock. He was sixty-eight years old. He and his brother for some years were partners in the grocery business. Mr. Suydam served as deacon and elder alternately of the First Reformed church, New Brunswick, for years. He was the son of John W. Suydam and was born at Middlebush. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

GEN. BOOTH AT MORRISTOWN.

Morristown, Jan. 18.—"Service" was the theme of an address in the South Street Presbyterian church Sunday night by General Ballington Booth, of the Volunteers of America. General Booth recounted the missionary service of his own band of volunteers. Through the effort of the organization, he said, thousands of children had been gathered from the dark places in the cities and sent into the open fields of the country; more than 70,000 prisoners were leading reformed lives, and men and women saved from falling into temptations, while two millions and a half had been attracted to the open air meeting of the Volunteers.

"It's service. It's a good cause and go on with it, you workers!" said the speaker. "But I asked myself after looking over the records 'Isn't there something more?' Yes, more service. God loves true workers, and Christ-given service. From the standpoint of numbers Christ wasn't a success, for when he was led to the cross the crowd forsook Him; they fled, but it was the service He had rendered the Father; the service He had rendered you and me."

A CALIFORNIA TRAIN KILLS PATERSONIAN.

Paterson, Jan. 18.—William Eardley, a wealthy iron contractor, residing in this city, was run over by a train in Oakland, Cal., yesterday morning, sustaining injuries which resulted, a short time afterward, in his death. Word of the accident was contained in a telegram received by John Eardley, a brother, of 416 Sussex street. Eardley was about to board a moving train when he missed his footing and slipped beneath the wheels.

Mr. Eardley left this city three months ago to start work for which he contracted in Oakland. He took his wife and three daughters with him The message received here this morning was from Mrs. Eeardly. He was forty-five years old, and besides his widow and three daughters, is survived by two brothers, John, of this city, and Frank, who lives in St. Louis.

Miss Marguerite Phillips, of Madison avenue, left yesterday for Baltimore, where she will make an extended stay with friends.

NOT YET SURE THAT IT IS DANZIGER

Mrs. David Danziger, wife of the Elizabeth clothier, who is believed to be the man who killed himself in a New York hotel, returned to Elizabeth last night without having identified the body. In fact, she did not call at the morgue, having gone to New York on business and without knowing of the alleged suicide.

She will see relatives today and will have them go to New York to learn the identity of the man who killed himself there. As her husband has been absent some days, she fears that it is he.

"I'm afraid it is his body," said she last night. "The accounts in the newspapers indicate that. I hope, however, that I am mistaken. He had no reason for killing himself, as far as I know, except possibly financial troubles."

Mrs. Danziger wept as she spoke.

Danziger was proprietor of "The Fair," a local clothing store now in the hands of a receiver. Danziger is also being sued in the District Court here by several creditors.

In Danziger's pockets were found summonses to appear in the Elizabeth District Court in a civil action for claims against him amounting to $8,400 and a card with the address, 429 West Front street, this city, where Danziger formerly lived.

"The Fair" on West Front street, was closed up some time ago on an order from the District Court.

LAVENDER'S RETURN TO FAVOR.

The use of lavender is growing more and more in favor. When lavender pillows are put in a sunny apartment they are charming and the more they are shaken up the more fragrant they become.

Lavender was called by the Romans lavandula. At cutting time people travel from long distances to inhale the fragrance of the fields.

In the eighteenth century lavender water was the principle perfume of the ladies of that period. Then the fashion changed. Chemically prepared perfumes imported from the Continent became the mode, and "sweet" lavender water became almost unknown, except in country cottages.

The Favorite of Fate.

The great specialist's patient, after many weeks of treatment, says Judge, had at last been declared cured of an "incurable" disease, and with a grateful feeling he asked the physician the amount of his bill.

"That depends, my dear sir," said the specialist. "Whenever I treat a man I always make it a point to determine his occupation and how large a family he has to support Then I make out my bill accordingly, may I ask what you do for a living?"

"I am a poet," replied the patient, soulfully.

"In that case," said the physician, "if you will give me the money in cash now, it will be a dollar and a half."

With the mountain ranges of the Rockies and Sierra Nevada for dividing lines, Miss Clyde Burnet presented a paper on "The West, Between and Beyond," at the meeting of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, yesterday afternoon. The compilation of the paper was skilful and presented in a charming manner. Miss Burnet described the States of Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and California, telling of their natural resources. Mrs. Wainwright led the devotional exercises.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Kleiner at Dunellen.

SYNDICATE PURCHASES A FARM FOR $35,000

That Dunellen farm land, situated on the line of trolley railroad, is highly valued, is brought to notice in the recent deal in which a syndicate of New Yorkers purchased the Sanford place which consists of about fifty acres. The property sold for $700 an acre, which price included all of the buildings on the tract, the total amount of the deal involving about $35,000. The deal represented the biggest real estate transaction consumated in that borough in some years.

While the purchasers of the land are reticent regarding their plans the impression prevails that the new owners made the purchase for speculative purposes and that next spring they will erect a dozen, and possibly twice that number of modern dwelling houses to cost between $4,000 and $5,000 each.

Should Dunellen decide to join hands with North Plainfield in the proposed sewerage with a reasonable amount of dispatch the new owners will not hesitate in pushing forward their plans which will mean a big increase in the valuations of that borough.

The same syndicate recently purchased the Shields' farm at Bound Brook park and is also anxious to secure the farm on the River road, between Bound Brook and New Brunswick, which is owned by J. A. Smith, of this city.

WHERE TO GET TICKETS FOR MERCHANTS' DINNER

William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, will be the toastmaster, and the speakers of the evening will be Job. E. Hedges, and John W. Beach, of New York. Toasts will be responded to by Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, of this city; Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, and several others.

NUGENT FOR WILSON FOR THE PRESIDENCY

James Nugent, chairman of the Democratic State Committee of New Jersey, said yesterday that this State would send a delegation to the next Democratic National Convention pledged to the nomination of Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton, for the Presidency.

"Woodrow Wilson is, without doubt, the most popular Democrat in the East," said Mr. Nugent, "not alone because of his broad political views, but for his high intellectual calibre as well. As the Democratic candidate for President he would sweep the country, for the chaotic condition of the Republicans at Washington means a Democratic victory in 1912."

Mr. Nugent would not discuss the probability of Mr. Wilson being the Democratic candidate for Governor of New Jersey next fall. "Personally," he said, "I am in favor of the nomination of Frank Katzenbach, Jr., of Trenton." The latter was defeated by Governor Fort two years ago.

Mrs. Chickering Improving.

Mrs. Virginia Chickering, of Madison avenue, who was severely burned a few days ago while cleaning some articles of clothing with gasolene, continues to improve slowly. Practically all of the hair was burned off her head, and besides her face, arms and hands were burned. At first it was thought that her eyesight would be impaired, but there is now no danger of that and her recovery is only a matter of time.

PUBLIC EDUCATION IDEAS

Arithmetic Taught Before Pupils Can Grasp the Subject.

SAYS PROFESSOR W. S. MUNROE.

Some Sensible and Timely Advice Given to City and Borough Public School Teachers.

Professor Will S. Munroe, of the faculty of the State Normal School at Montclair, in an address to city and borough school teachers at the high school auditorium yesterday afternoon gave some instructive suggestions on the "Cultivation of Imagination" among school pupils.

In the opinion of Professor Munroe advanced arithmetic is being taught nowadays when the minds of the pupils are not capable of grasping the subject. He suggested that the study be put further on in the curriculum. Fourteen years is the proper age, according to his idea, for children to take up the advanced grades of this study.

"A child can learn more in tw or three weeks in arithmetic at the age of fourteen, than in two or three years, if the start in this study is made too early," declared Professor Munroe.

In citing some of his observations made in his visits to noted schools of Germany and France, Professor Munroe stated that in the study of music, in the German schools especially, there is much stress laid in the cultivation of imagination. "All Americans think about," said Professor Munroe, "is the notes, melody and voice culture, and we don't try to make the pupils imagine what they are singing about."

In another reference to the arithmetic problem, Professor Munroe declared that in German and French schools a course in geometry always precedes advanced arithmetic and algebra. At this point of his address the speaker urged the adoption of a course in geometry by American instructors to take priority over the usual courses of advanced arithmetic.

American teachers, he said, should recognize the existence of the imaginative power. To his mind, children at twelve years of age should be taught no science. It is not the proper time as children at that age, the speaker said, delight in reading history, poetry and literature. At fourteen, he said, their love for stories decrease, and the youthful minds become more adapted to exact science.

"Pupils who can hold before them a clear picture," added Professor Munroe, "can solve it much quicker than pupils who have no imagination."

ANNUAL REPORT OF CITY JUDGE RUNYON.

City Judge William N. Runyon believes in tempering justice with mercy as indicated in his annual report to the mayor and Common Council. That the judge is imbued with a soft heart and leans toward leniency is shown that that in the 910 cases which came before him, in 495 cases he suspended sentence.

During the year he fined 130; 86 were committed to the county jail; 88 were placed on probation; 56 were held for the grand jury; 2 were held for the juvenile court; 16 complaints were dismissed; 2 were held under bonds; 24 were transferred to other departments; 11 cases are still pending.

The total amount collected from fines was $745.50 and the disbursements were $138.55.

Arthur White Talmadge.

The body of Arthur White Talmadge, who died at Prescott, Ariz., on Monday, January 10, arrived here last night, and the announcement of the funeral arrangements will be made later. Mr. Talmadge was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue, and he went to Prescott in June of last year for his health.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison Coming.

MISS MARY E. BROUWER, OF PISCATAWAY, DEAD

Miss Mary E. Brouwer, daughter of the late Samuel and Sarah Brouwer, died yesterday at her late home in Piscataway township in her fifty-sixth year. The funeral service will be conducted at her late home on Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and interment will be made on the following day at Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn. Miss Brouwer at the time of her death, was a member of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church and secretary of the Ladies' Aid Society of that congregation. She had been ill since Christmas, heart trouble and complications being the cause of death.

AUDIENCE SMALL AT ORCHESTRA'S CONCERT

The concert given at the Y. M. C. A. last night was not well attended owing to the storm, but the quality of the music was deserving of a better audience. Mr. Korff's orchestra never played better and the applause was spontaneous and hearty.

Mrs. A. B. Price, of Westfield, sang instead of Miss Laura Gesswein, who was ill, and Mrs. Harry DeMeza and Mrs. Ida Randolph Hilliard alternated at the piano with the orchestra and other accompaniments.

Von Suppe's overture and the Polish National Dance were the instrumental pieces which captivated the audience, the weird, but beautiful melody of the latter being particularly well done. Harold Jacobs rendered several baritone solos in an acceptable manner and received the usual encores.

Because of the small attendance Mr. Korff will repeat the program on next Thursday night. He said that last night's performance was merely a rehearsal, so if the concert of next Thursday equals the rehearsal then all who attend will have a treat.

FOUNTAIN PENS TABOOED; SPOIL PUPILS' WRITING

Modern methods of writing were given a jolt by the Westfield Board of Education last night, when a resolution was passed placing the use of fountain pens by pupils in any of the schools under a ban. This action was taken upon receiving a report from teachers and principals, who assert that the writing of children using fountain pens is not up to the standard of the other children.

This was found to be the case particularly in the High School, where the use of such pens has been widespread, and but remnants of the style of writing taught in the grammar grades are to be found. The teachers believe this condition due to the haste and consequent carelessness made possible by fountain pens.

The school commissioners also said that if the return to old-fashioned pens does not correct defects in the children's writing, they will introduce a course of penmanship into the curriculum of the High School. They believe, however, that the teachers have located the cause of the poor handwriting of the school children.

Funeral of Ex-Gov. Werts.

The funeral of former Governor George T. Werts was held at his home, No. 275 Union street, Jersey City, today, at 9:30 a. m. The services were private. The four ex-governors, the personal staff of Governor Werts, Vice-Chancellor Pitney, Robert S. Foote and State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees acted as honorary pallbearers. The body was taken on the train leaving Hoboken at 12:15 o'clock, and was met at Morristown at 1:25 p. m. and taken to the Morristown Evergreen Cemetery.

Mrs. William H. Yarrow Dead.

Mrs. Emma G. Yarrow, widow of the late Rev. Dr. William H. Yarrow, of Verona, known as "the father of the Primitive Methodist Church of America," died Monday evening at the home of her son, Dr. George G. Yarrow, in Belleville, her death being attributed to grief over the death of her husband a few weeks ago. Mrs. Yarrow was seventy-two years old. She leaves eleven children.

Shower for Bride-Elect.

Miss Marguerite Campbell, of Rockview avenue, gave a handkerchief shower at her home Monday afternoon for Miss Ethel Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., whose marriage to William Barlow, Jr., of Prospect place, takes place tomorrow night. There were about twenty guests, and the affair was a delightful one.

DAMAGES FOR HIS INJURIES.

Hit By Trolley Car, Plaintiff Claimed That He Lost Sight of Eye and Became Deaf.

The $5,000 damage suit brought by Robert Dixon, a pipe fitter of this city, against the Public Service Corporation, which was begun before Judge Vail in the Union County Court, yesterday, was given to the jury at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and in a short time a verdict for $976 was given Dixon.

Yesterday the action developed into simply the question of deciding the damages and Mr. Clark, in order to save time, admitted liability. The suit was brought to recover damages alleged to have been received by Dixon last May, when he was struck by a trolley car at West Front street and Grant avenue and injured.

When hit by the car he was thrown to the street and his face was severely cut and bruised. Since the accident he has been deaf in his left ear, which previous to that time had been affected but had been cured. The plaintiff claims that with his left eye he can see only objects straight ahead of him.

Dixon received his injuries in a peculiar way. He had alighted from a car on which he had ridden from New Brunswick at Grant avenue in Plainfield, and after lighting a cigarette started across the street. He allowed a car going in an opposite direction to the one he left to pass him. The car struck a switch and the front trucks turned into West Front street but the rear trucks shot off at right angles in Grant avenue. When the rear of the car swung around Dixon was still in the street, and was struck on the side of the head and knocked senseless. He was picked up and taken to his home. He did not regain consciousness until the following morning, the accident having happened at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Craig A. Marsh represented Dixon and Alvah A. Clark the P. S. C.

HUNTERDON SENATOR MAKES NOVEL RECORD.

Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon, has the distinction of thus far offering the longest and shortest bills offered in the Senate. The shortest one reads in full as follows: "The use of voting machines in this State is hereby abolished." The longest one consists of several thousand words seeking to establish a Public Utility Commission which will have absolute and unlimited control over all kinds of utility corporations operating in the State.

Another bill by Mr. Gebhardt echoed an issue of the last Presidential campaign. If passed it would require local banks to pay into the State treasury a sum to take care of the losses brought about by insolvent banks. It is modeled after the Oklahoma Bank Guarantee Deposit Bill. Senate Bill No. 8, by Mr. Gebhardt, seeks the same object which Assemblyman Moore, of Passaic, proposes to inculcate in a bill which he will introduce next Monday night. It makes the question of negligence and contributory negligence a question of fact to be determined by the jury in trials for damages in railroad or trolley accidents instead of leaving the question to the presiding judge, as now provided.

CODINGTON MAY ESCAPE

Warren Township Treasurer Takes Advantage of Non Vult Pleas.

ONLY A FINE IS EXPECTED.

Sentence Is Deferred, But It Is Believed the Defendant Will Not Be Sent to Prison.

Joel Codington, treasurer of Warren township and also of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders, appeared before Judge Louis E. Schenck in the Somerset Court at Somerville yesterday, and pleaded non vult to two indictments charging him with unlawfully appropriating the funds of Warren township and of counselling and aiding others unlawfully to obtain the funds of the township. Sentence was deferred, but it is believed that Codington will escape being sent to State prison, and will get off with a fine.

Codington's administration was first investigated by order of Justice Charles W. Parker, of the Supreme Court, on the application of a number of residents of Warren, who charged that he was misappropriating the funds of the township. The investigation adduced overwhelming evidence of Codington's guilt and showed a big shortage in his accounts.

WESTFIELD.

Mrs. Ida W. Smalley, widow of Ambrose Smalley, who died at her home in Plainfield Monday, was formerly a resident of Westfield. She was a sister of Mrs. Edward Gilby, Ira Lambert and Mrs. W. D. Pierson.

Westfield police notified forty-three delinquents Monday to clear their sidewalks of snow and ice within six hours or legal proceedings would be commenced for violation of the town ordinance.

Councilman John J. Schmitt has taken up the matter of public ownership of a town water plant and will insist that the matter be investigated again by the Council the coming season.

Mrs. Julia A. Benhett, aged seventy-eight years, mother of Mrs. J. B. Wilson and Mrs. Carrie L. Hegeman, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Wilson, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bakker, of Plainfield avenue, will remove to their new home, 301 Grant avenue, early in the spring.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

A foreign scribe in discussing the subject of golf supremacy states that not long ago it was the regular order of things for a championship to be won by an Englishman or a Scotchman. Continuing, he says:

America was the first to throw off the British yoke, and the present year has been a remarkable development of strength on the part of the native golfer. Only the other day it was announced that the River Plate open championship at Argentina had been won by a home bred player, Raoul Castillo, described as one of the best caddies at San Andres. So excellent a golfer as Munro Park, who has been inside the prize lists in the open in Great Britain, could only finish sixth, twenty strokes behind the winner, and there were three natives in the first four, P. J. Asae, of London, being the one invader to seriously dispute the right of home rule.

This result does not necessarily mean that the United Kingdom is in imminent danger of being overwhelmed on the links by Argentina, but it is one of several incidents that demonstrate the ever increasing catholicity of the game. During 1909 first time native successes such as that of Castillo have been frequent. M. Francois de Bellet has won the French championship; Mrs. Bevan, a Maori, has gained the New Zealand championship; E. Kelley has become the open champion of Canada and C. Felstead has wrested the Australian championship from the settlers in the Commonwealth. These are signs of the times; who can say that half a century hence the United Kingdom will be still pre-eminent?

From time to time references are made by writers to selected scores of a more or less exceptional nature, but word comes from the other side of a performance on the part of a well known member of the Royal Aberdeen Club that has probably placed all other efforts in the shade. His score for eighteen holes at the Balgowine links was the marvellously low total of 68. This included seven 2s, one 4 and ten 3s. The only 4 in the score was at the second hole, where he missed a chance for a 3. He got within two feet of the hole on his second, only to miss the put and perhaps the chance of a lifetime was lost of doing every hole in 2 or 3.

FOR MODIFICATION OF AUTOMOBILE STATUTE

Backed by what he claimed was the indorsement of every automobile club in the State, as well as by the approval of a big majority of individual New Jersey motorists, Majority Leader Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic County, stands sponsor in the House at Trenton for the introduction of an amendment to the Frelinghuysen automobile law to permit non-resident autoists to come into the State for three ten-day periods each year without extra registration and without the payment of a license fee. The measure was first submitted to Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith who, while not giving it his official sanction, said he personally thought the proposed act a good one. That it will be opposed by President Frelinghuysen, of the Senate, Mr. Edge expects, however, although he is quite confident of getting it through the lower branch.

Last year the Frelinghuysen law was amended by the Colgate bill, which requires non-resident motorists to pay a $1 license fee when entering New Jersey, and after such payment they are allowed the use of the State roads for an eight-day period each year. Mr. Colgate favored the no-license law, however, but consented to the $1 proposition after the farmer members of the Legislature had raised a kick.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Johnny and Emma Ray will appear at the Plainfield theatre January 20 in a new edition of their most successful musical comedy, "King Casey." The piece is aptly described as a riotous hodge podge of mirth, frivolty and music. It is in two acts—the first laid in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York city, and the second on the island of Lala Pa Zaza.

Doc Quigley has been associated with the Al G. Field Minstrels for almost a lifetime, but in all the years gone before, never has he been seen to such advantage as this season—In the Frogs Wedding, and in the Evolution of Minstrlsy; in the restaurant scene when he depicts true to life the pompous head waiter, with the dances that have made him famous. As America's greatest eccentric dancer, he shines forth as he never did before; the dancing head waiter, the policy playing parson, and many other character characterizations that he has made his own, makes him justly entitled to the distinction he has long enjoyed. Doc Quigley, he with the comedy legs. At the Plainfield theatre matinee and night January 22.

Mr. Charles B. Dillingham announces for the Plainfield theatre January 24, the youngest star, Miss Elsie Janis, in a new musical comedy "The Fair Co-Ed," which has recently concluded a long and prosperous season in New York. "The Fair Co-Ed" played twelve weeks at the Knickerbocker Theatre, and then was obliged to move up to the Criterion to extend its run for the rest of the season.

THE CASE OF GUERRE

One of the Queerest Stories of Doubles in History.

AUDACITY OF THE IMPOSTOR.

He Deceived Not Only the Sisters, but Even the Wife, of the Man Whose Place He Usurped—The Return of the Real Guerre and the Exposure.

Perhaps the most remarkable case of doubles in all history is that of Martin Guerre, a Frenchman, who was born near Bayonne in the first half of the sixteenth century. Martin Guerre was the son of a well to do farmer and brickmaker, and, as was the custom of the country at the time, he married at the age of eleven Bertrande de Rols, who had then reached the age of ten. For eight years they lived together.

Unfortunately Martin stole a bushel of corn from his father. Frightened by the heinousness of his crime, he deserted his wife and fled to Spain. There he entered the service of Emperor Charles V. and after several years of campaigning seems to have forgotten his wife, Bertrande, and his baby boy, Sancho. At any rate, he ceased to write home, and his family lost all trace of him. His absence stretched on to eight years.

Then one evening a stranger arrived at the inn of the village where the deserted wife was still living. He at once told his host that he was Martin Guerre and recounted the adventures and hardships that had kept him from home so long. The rumor of Martin Guerre's return soon spread, and his four sisters hastened to the hostelry to welcome him home. They found him much changed. He had gone eight years before, scarcely more than a boy. Now he was a mature man, bronzed and bearded. Nevertheless they welcomed him, embraced him and carried the news to his wife. Bertrande hastened to him at once. When she saw him first she started back with misgiving. But he addressed her tenderly, repeated word for word their parting conversation and mentioned details that only a husband could have known. He even spoke of the clothing he had left behind and where it could be found. Bertrande was convinced. She begged forgiveness for her doubts and threw herself into his arms. An uncle arrived. He, too, hesitated, but the newcomer detailed to him all the minutiae of their business transactions eight years before, and he also was convinced.

The upshot of the matter was that this newly arrived Martin Guerre returned home with his wife and lived happily and without suspicion with her for four years. During this time they had two children, and Martin's father at his death bequeathed him a farm.

However, a soldier passing through the village declared that he had seen Martin at the siege of St. Quentin, that he had lost a leg there, but that he was still alive, and the soldier left a written deposition to that effect. The rumor spread that the man living as Martin Guerre was an impostor.

Bertrande at this filed a criminal information against the man to whom for four years she had granted the rights of a husband. He was described in the accusation as Arnault du Tilh and was committed to prison. The prisoner said that the uncle had influenced his wife and that the whole charge was a conspiracy to deprive him of his fortune of 8,000 livres. He submitted to a searching interrogatory, after the French fashion, and answered all questions satisfactorily. He told of his campaigns and revealed the most intimate details of the family history. He relied for his defense, too, on the four sisters who still called him brother, on his four years' life with Bertrande with her consent, and pressed her in the presence of the judges to swear that he was not her real husband, declaring that if she so swore he was ready to forfeit his head. Bertrande refused to take this oath. She was confused by his confident manner.

In the trial 150 witnesses were examined. Of this number forty deposed that the man was the real Martin Guerre, fifty deposed that he was Arnault du Tilh, and sixty declined to pronounce any opinion, owing to the extraordinary resemblance. In spite of the conflicting evidence the judge pronounced him guilty. He at once appealed to the parliament of Toulouse.

On this appeal thirty witnesses were re-examined. Ten deposed that he was Martin Guerre, eight that he was an impostor, and the remainder confessed that they were too bewildered to have any opinion. The judges were sorely perplexed and leaned to the side of the prisoner.

By a curious coincidence just at this juncture the real Martin Guerre made his appearance on the scene. He showed the same marks on his face as those borne by the prisoner. The men were confronted with each other in court. Even the four sisters, who till now had clung to their belief in the prisoner, confessed their mistake. The prisoner lost his nerve, confessed his crime and begged forgiveness. He was condemned to death and executed. The real Martin was restored to his rights.—Conrad Oak in New York Tribune.

"In what way?"

THE CAT AND THE BABY.

A Medical Opinion as to the Tradition of a Feline Danger.

Several physicians have investigated the ancient story that cats suck the breath of babies, and Dr. J. Rice Gibbs declares that the theory is ridiculous. Cats occasionally kill children, he declares, but they do it in a different fashion.

"It has been stated that a cat's nostrils are so formed as to make a perfect juncture with the nose of a baby," said Dr. Gibbs, "and that a little pressure would push them upward and make them a perfect fit. Then the cat's chin would rest over and below the baby's mouth, preventing it from opening to relieve the strangulation while the cat sucked its breath. That is all rot. The manner in which little children are killed by cats is this: A cat looking for a warm place to curl up and sleep lies down upon the chest of a little child, and, being quite heavy—many cats are as heavy as little babies—simply crushes the breath out of the child's lungs, and strangulation takes place, but not through sucking of the child's breath.

"The idea that only black cats kill little babies is equally ridiculous. It is simply because black cats are considered unlucky. In former times the black cat was considered the very genius of witchcraft. In those days when a baby died the blame was often fixed upon some hag who, the judges said, had sent a black cat to suck the baby's breath. And often hag and cat suffered death at the stake.

"Evil omen is still the cry in many parts of the world whenever a black cat approaches a cradle. Many persons are so superstitious that the appearance of a black cat in a sick room is considered equivalent to an announcement of approaching death. What could be more absurd?

"Mothers need not be afraid of cats, black, white or green, sucking their babies' breath and murdering them. It is time that this popular fallacy should be exploded."—New York World.

THE BASEBALL UMPIRE.

Very Different From the Fight Referee or the Race Judge.

Good umpires are rare. In the whole country there are not more than ten first rate ones. The combination of the keen eye, nimble brain and cold nerve is not a common one.

The umpire is the chain lightning of baseball. His decisions are rendered in the fifth part of a second. He renders them knowing that he must stand by them afterward, no matter what happens. Every man inside the fence, whether blinded by prejudice or loyalty to the home team, sees the same things and therefore feels that he has a right to his own opinion, but the umpire is the one man who is paid to know what he sees.

The prizefight referee sometimes has to decide which boxer won a hard battle. He has had time in which to review the situation. The whole moving picture of the fight stretches backward in his memory. Should the choice prove a difficult one there is always the comfortable middle ground—the draw decision, in which neither man wins or loses. The baseball umpire can render no draw decisions. The man is safe or he is out.

When two race horses come nodding down to the wire and two noses flash by the post so close together that a finger breadth means thousands of dollars to the backers, the race track judge may fall back on the dead heat. The baseball umpire has no dead heats. Watching foot and ball, he must know which one was first. He can confer with no one. Right or wrong, the judgment must be made in the twinkling of an eye.—C. E. Van Loan in Munsey's Magazine.

The Piano Virtuoso's Hands.

Contrary to popular belief, the piano virtuoso as a rule has extremely unattractive hands. "The artistic hand" is a phrase peculiar to the hysterical young woman who haunts musical recitals, but in reality the hand of the pianist is not at all artistic or beautiful when judged by the usual standards of the artist, the painter or the sculptor.

Constant, vigorous practicing overdevelops the hand and makes it actually ill shaped. The fingers do not taper, but are blunt and round, ending often in what appears to be a cushion of hard flesh.—New York World.

Aggravating.

When the late General Edward M. McCook lived in Pike's Peak he once presided at a dinner in honor of a famous Indian fighter.

Mr. McCook, as he then was, concluded his introduction of the Indian fighter with the words:

"I can find but one fault with the colonel's methods. I allude to his well known custom of enlisting in his regiment only baldheaded men. To aggravate the Indians' feelings so cruelly as that is carrying war too far."

Cheerful.

A certain philosopher used to thank God when he had the gout that it was not the toothache, and when he had the toothache he gave thanks because he had not both complaints at once.

Error of the Types.

The editor wrote that the speaker's address was "notable," but the printer spaced it wrong and it read "not able."—Kansas City Star.

Cool.

COST OF HANDLING MISSIONARY FUNDS

INJUNCTION IS CONTINUED.

The injunction restraining Sheriff Kirkland and detectives employed by Leavitt & Atwater from selling the effects of Herman O. O. Schmidt, former proprietor of the Kenilworth Inn, under an execution issued on a judgment secured by Valentine Vonderlin, was continued yesterday by an order granted Attorney Robert L. Eaton, in the Court of Chancery. Mr. Eaton represents Paul Schmidt, the former hotelkeeper's brother, who holds a chattel mortgage on Schmidt's effects. When the detectives employed to levy on the goods at the hotel advertised for a sale, Mr. Eaton went to the Court of Chancery and secured an injunction. Yesterday he appeared in the Chancery Chambers, Newark, and secured a continuation of the injunction.

Fudge Delight.

Mix together in a porcelain saucepan one cup of white sugar and one cup of dark-brown sugar and add to it a quarter of a cup of molasses and half a cup of rich cream. In another little pan melt about a quarter of a cup of butter, and when melted add it to the other mixture. Bring it all to a boil and keep it boiling for two or three minutes, while you stir it rapidly. Then add two squares of grated chocolate. Boil hard for five minutes more, stirring rapidly at first, and gradually more slowly. Remove from the fire and add a teaspoon and a half of vanilla. Stir until it becomes thick, pour into buttered pans and set away to cool, marking out in squares before it hardens.

Strenuous braking as he fell from a shunted car enabled a companion brakeman to save the life of Fred Lofland at Vineland. His companion stopped the car just as the wheels reached the unconscious man, and Lofland is now in the Vineland Hospital, unconscious.

Its wings were scorched, but the bird was otherwise unharmed.

GOOD WORK.

Done Daily in Plainfield—Many Citizens Tell of It.

Nearly every reader has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Plainfield still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case.

Mrs. W. W. Mills, 304 West Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says:

"A dull, heavy, bearing-down pain in my back bothered me a great deal, especially when I caught cold. I also had frequent headaches and was at times so dizzy that I could scarcely see. If I did much stooping or lifting, my back became very lame and though I used plasters, I was relieved only for the time being. Finally on the advise of a friend, I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. They acted in every way as represented and in a short time rid me of all symptoms of kidney trouble. I am pleased to recommend a remedy of such undoubted merit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1908, by the McClure Company
Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Ridgway Company

"I haven't had my life. It's gone." It was almost as if I heard his voice close at hand with all the passion of regret and protest that rang in the words when they broke from him in the forest. And by some miraculous conjecture within the moment I seemed not only to hear his voice, but actually to see him, a figure dressed in white, far below us and small with the distance, standing out in the moonlight in the middle of the tree bordered avenue leading to the chateau gates.

I rose and leaned over the railing. There was no doubt about the reality of the figure in white, though it was too far away to be identified with certainty, and as I rubbed my eyes for clearer sight it turned and disappeared into the shadows of the orderly grove where I had stood one day to watch Louise Harman ascend the slopes of Quesnay.

But I told myself sensibly that more than one man on the coast of Normandy might be wearing white flannels that evening and, turning to my companion, found that she had moved some steps away from me and was gazing eastward to the sea. I concluded that she had not seen the figure.

The round moon was white and at its smallest, high overhead, when at midnight I stepped out of the phaeton in which Miss Elizabeth sent me back to Mme. Brossard's.

When my lamp was extinguished I set my door ajar, moved my bed out from the wall to catch whatever breeze might stir, "composed myself for the night," as it used to be written, and lay looking out upon the quiet garden, where a thin white haze was rising. Just as I had begun to drowse the gallery steps creaked and the noble form of Keredec emerged upon my field of vision. From the absence of the sound of footsteps I supposed him to be either barefooted or in his stockings. His visible costume consisted of a sleeping jacket tucked into a pair of trousers, while his tousled hair and beard and generally tossed and rumpled look were those of a man who had been lying down temporarily

I heard him sigh—like one sighing for sleep—as he went noiselessly across the garden and out through the archway to the road. At that I sat straight up in bed to stare, and well I might, for here was a miracle! He had lifted his arms above his head to stretch himself comfortably, and he walked upright and at ease, whereas when I had last seen him the night before he had been able to do little more than crawl, bent far over and leaning painfully upon his friend. Never man beheld a more astonishing recovery from a bad case of rheumatism.

After a long look down the road he retraced his steps, and the moonlight, striking across his great forehead as he came, revealed the furrows plowed there by an anxiety of which I guessed the cause. The creaking of the wooden stairs and gallery and the whine of an old door announced that he had returned to his vigil.

I had perhaps a quarter of an hour to consider this performance, when it was repeated; now, however, he only glanced out into the road, retreating hastily, and I saw that he was smiling, while the speed he maintained in returning to his quarters was remarkable for one so newly convalescent.

The next moment Saffren came through the archway, ascended the steps in turn—but slowly and carefully, as if fearful of waking his guardian—and I heard his door closing very gently. Long before his arrival, however, I had been certain of his identity with the figure I had seen gazing up at the terraces of Quesnay from the borders of the grove. Other questions remained to bother me: Why had Keredec not prevented this night roving, and why, since he did permit it, should he conceal his knowledge of it from Oliver? And what, oh, what wondrous specific had the mighty man found for his disease?

A note lay beside my plate next morning addressed in a writing strange to me, one of dashing and vigorous character. It read:

In the pursuit of thrilling scientific research, what with the tumult which possessed me, I forgot to mention the beast that links us. I, too, am a painter, though as yet unhonored and unsung. It might be only because I lack a gentle hand to guide me. If I might sit beside you as you paint! The hours pass on leaden wings at Quesnay. I could shriek. Do not refuse me a few words of instruction, either in the wildwood, whither I could support your shrinking steps, or from time to time as you work in your studio, which I glean from the instructive Mr. Ferrett is at Les Trois Pigeons. At any hour, at any moment, I will speed to you. I ask, sir, yours, if you will but breathe a "yes."

ANNE ELLIOTT.

To this I returned a reply, as much in her own key as I could write it, putting my refusal on the ground that I was not at present painting in the studio. I added that I hoped her suit might prosper, regretting that I could not be of greater assistance to that end, and concluded with the suggestion that Mme. Brossard might entertain an offer for lessons in cooking.

The result of my attempt to echo her vivacity was discomfiting, and I was allowed to perceive that epistolary jocularity was not thought to be my line. It was Miss Elizabeth who gave me this instruction three days later, on the way to Quesnay for "second breakfast." Exercising fairly shamefaced diplomacy I had avoided dining at the chateau again, but by arrangement she had driven over for me that morning in the phaeton.

"Why are you writing silly notes to that child?" she demanded as soon as we were away from the inn.

"Was it silly?"

"You should know. Do you think that style of humor suitable for a young girl?"

This bewildered me a little. "But there wasn't anything offensive"—

"No?" Miss Elizabeth lifted her eyebrows to a height of bland inquiry. "She mightn't think it rather—well, rough? Your suggesting that she should take cooking lessons?"

"But she suggested she might take painting lessons," was my feeble protest. "I only meant to show her I understood that she wanted to get to the inn."

"And why should she care to get to the inn?"

"She seemed interested in a young man who is staying there. 'Interested' is the mildest word for it, I can think of."

At the chateau, having a mind to offer some sort of apology, I looked anxiously about for the subject of our rather disquieting conversation, but she was not to be seen until the party assembled at the table, set under an awning on the terrace.

Mrs. Harman had not appeared at all, having gone to call upon some one at Dives, I was told, and a servant informing me, on inquiry, that Miss Elliott had retired to her room, I was thrust upon my own devices indeed.

CHAPTER VIII.

I WENT home. Outside the inn I saw Miss Elizabeth's phaeton.

But it was not Miss Elizabeth who had come in the phaeton, though a lady from Quesnay did prove to be the occupant. At sight of her I halted stockstill under the archway.

There she sat, a sketchbook on a green table beside her and a board in her lap, brazenly painting, and a more blushless piece of assurance than Miss Anne Elliott thus engaged these eyes have never beheld.

She was not so hardened that she did not affect a little timidity at sight of me, looking away even more quickly than she looked up, while I walked slowly over to her and took the garden chair beside her. That gave me a view of her sketch, which was a violent little "lay-in" of shrubbery, trees and the sky line of the inn. To my prodigious surprise and, naturally enough, with a degree of pleasure I perceived that it was not very bad—not bad at all, indeed. It displayed a sense of values, of placing and even in a young and frantic way of color. Here was a young woman of more than "accomplishments!"

"You see," she said, squeezing one of the tiny tubes almost dry and continuing to paint with a fine effect of absorption, "I had to show you that I was in the most abysmal earnest. Will you take me painting with you?"

"I appreciate your seriousness," I rejoined. "Has it been rewarded?"

"How can I say? You haven't told me whether or no I may follow you to the wildwood."

FASHIONABLE GLOVES.

Instead of wearing pure white gloves in the afternoon the fashionable woman is inclined toward a delicate pearl shade or pearl apricot and tan colorings.

She is choosing for motor wear the "chevrette" of elbow length, with a strap at the wrist to pull the leather together. This is generally lined with fur or wool.

Women find it hard to approve of the sharp dividing line between long sleeves and short gloves and are wearing with afternoon toilets longer shapes, which pass in wrinkled fullness over the cuffs.

Gloves of two-button length are worn with coat suits. The buttons are very large and are made of mother-of-pearl.

For driving, mocha gloves in pale colorings, which, strange to say, wear much better than the dark ones, are popular.

Of course, the evening gloves are virtually the same. Long white glace, with occasionally a decoration to carry out the scheme of the gown, are worn.

By their gloves you will know the well-dressed women.

TELEPHONING TO THE COUNTRY

THE City and the Country are bound together by the telephone line.

For the suburban and country resident, the telephone puts the city's friends and business houses at his call.

City people also find the rural telephone of great advantage. A traveler, from his room in the hotel, talks with the farm folk miles away. Unless they have a telephone he cannot reach them.

The farmer himself may travel far and still talk home over the Long Distance Lines of the Bell System.

Hallet & Davis Player-Piano

The Hallet & Davis Piano

The discerning player-piano purchaser demands not only a piano of unquestioned superior tone quality, but of strong and durable construction, to withstand the greater use accorded a player-piano than an instrument without the player mechanism. The Hallet & Davis piano is constructed to meet the most severe requirements. The crown of the sounding board is supported by fifteen ribs, while the usual number is only eleven. The metal plate is square and very heavy, securing great rigidity. The piano action and hammers are designed for hard service, making an ideal instrument for the introduction of automatic player mechanism.

The Player Action

The salient features of the player action in the Hallet & Davis player-piano are:

A button softening the treble and another softening the bass.

A lever softening the whole piano and one operating the sustaining pedal of the piano.

The usual tempo and re-roll levers.

But most important of all, an automatic tracking device which is absolutely essential with the new standard 88-note music roll, as the holes are smaller and nearer together than on the old 65-note roll.

(The least swelling or shrinking of the paper causes the holes in the paper to be out of line with the holes in the tracker board, resulting in a discord unless equipped with a tracking device.)

Plays any standard 88-note music roll.

Daily demonstrations at our warerooms.

C. STOUT DOES STAR PINNING FOR THE ELKS

The Elks dropped two games out of three to the Public Service bowlers in a Fraternal League series on Campbell's alleys last night, but it was not the fault of Chauncey Stout that the antler combination lost the series. Stout's fine pinwork was the feature of the series. His performances of 232, 239 and 182 represented an average of 217.2 for the three contests.

The trolleymen annexed the first contest by a score of 865 to 846. In the second contest the Elks came back with a rush and won out by a score of 952 to 805. In this engagement Stout's 239 mark was seconded with Laing's 213, which was the newsdealers' star effort of the night.

The final game, which the P. S. C. quintet won by the score of 838 to 831, or a margin of 7 pins, was in doubt until the end. In the final frame Causebrook was more steadier than Laing, which tells the story of the P. S. C. victory. The scores:

BLUEBEARD VICTIMS' DELUGE OF LETTERS

Chief of Police Hayes, of Hoboken, is receiving letters from women all over the country, who say they are victims of Amiel Carl von Mueller, now under arrest at Los Angeles on a charge of bigamy. Four letters arrived in yesterday morning's mail. One was from a woman in Philadelphia, who said that she was married to von Mueller in Camden, N. J., in 1902, and that he deserted her after getting possession of her money and ewelry. Chief Hayes said he would respect the wishes of his correspondent and not reveal her name at present.

Another letter was from Mrs. L. Schoppe, of No. 1721 Bank street, Baltimore. She told a similar story of marriage and desertion on the part of Von Mueller, and said that when he left her he took her money with him, but she did not say how much. A third writer was Mrs. Susan Smith, of Dubuque, Iowa. She says that Von Mueller married her four months ago and soon deserted her, taking with him $2,300 and all of her jewelry.

The fourth letter was from Mrs. Fannie Wagner, of Rockwell, Ill., who recognized pictures of Von Mueller in the Chicago newspapers as those of the man to whom she was married last year, and who deserted her after he had got from her $1,000 in cash and all of her jewelry. She begged the Chief to have the man kept under arrest until she could prosecute him.

Detective Sergeant Louis Weinthal, of the Hoboken police, and Detective William McDonald, of Prosecutor Garven's office, are now on their way to California with requisition papers signed by Governor Fort.

W. C. HOPE LECTURES ON RAILROAD HISTORY

An address on "The Development, Methods and Characteristics of the Passenger Business," was given by W. C. Hope, general passenger agent of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in Roselle Monday night.

Mr. Hope said that he would endeavor to give a brief insight in his address into a large subject. He told how a century ago the stagecoach and water furnished the only means of transportation, how it took a week to go from Boston to New York, and three weeks to go from New York to Charleston.

The B. and O. road, said Mr. Hope, is the pioneer of all, having been chartered in 1827. Its first fifteen miles of track were completed in 1830. Its trains were run with horse and sail power. Steam, Mr. Hope said, was introduced into the railroad business in 1831.

Regarding the passenger traffic of today, Mr. Hope said it was only profitable in thickly settled sections. In 1851 the Erie built its through line from New York to Buffalo, and in 1853 the New York Central had a like line. In 1853 there were 9,000 miles of tracks in the country, while today there are over 225,000 miles of railroads. A 100-mile journey, which required a day in the early fifties, is now accomplished in two hours. While as late as the '80s it required thirty-six hours to go to Chicago, now the distance is traveled in half that time. Mr. Hope said that distance was now measured by minutes instead of miles, and the short-distance traveler did much to contribute to the success of the railroads.

Mr. Hope gave a history of the Central, and told how the road had but six passenger cars in 1848, with three trains a day, and how it required one hour and twenty minutes to go from Cranford to Elizabethport, where a ferry carried the passengers to New York.

NATURALIZATION COURT TO CONVENE TOMORROW

Judge Atwater will hold the January session of the Naturalization Court at Elizabeth tomorrow. According to the records at the County Clerk's office there will be seventy aliens appearing before the court anxious to take the necessary examination which will entitle them, if they pass to the satisfaction of the Judge, to their second citizenship papers and make them after swearing allegiance to the Stars and Stripes, full-fledged citizens of the United States.

Of those who will apply for the naturalization papers forty-six have been in the court before and for some reason or other failed to pass the required examination. The remainder of the applicants make their first appearance. It is probable that the examining of applicants tomorrow will be done by United States District Attorney Reilly, who has been at Elizabeth before. The Government is becoming more strict at each examination regarding the qualifications which the applicants must show before being made citizens. Each naturalization day large number of aliens who apply are unsuccessful in their examinations and are ordered to appear again.

In preparing for tomorrow, County Clerk Calvert has sent out notices to all the men who are to appear before the court. They are informed that if they are not present their cases will be dismissed. Each applicant must bring two witnesses and special instructions are given the applicant that if their witnesses are naturalized citizens they must bring their citizenship papers.

Finds Children Destitute.

The three small children of Antonio Cachario, who was committed last Thursday to the Essex County jail, were found in a destitute condition at their home, in Orchard street, East Summit, yesterday, by Overseer of the Poor Thomas Baird. They have been alone since the day their father went to jail, without food or fuel, and their condition is described as pitable. The overseer of the poor has placed the little ones in the care of a neighbor pending efforts to get their parent out of confinement. The mother, it is said, died some years ago.

WHAT THE CENSUS ENUMERATOR WILL ASK YOU WHEN HE IS MAKING HIS ROUNDS IN THIS CITY

Census Supervisor L. V. Hoagland, of this district, has received from the Census Bureau a supply of blank applications for persons applying for positions as census enumerators. These will be forwarded to his list of applicants as soon as possible.

The applications, properly filled out, must be returned to the Supervisor not later than January 31, the Census Director having extended the time for filing from January 25, which was the date first set for closing the consideration of applications. The "test" will occur February 5, as previously announced.

The instructions printed on the application form state that a definite answer is required to each of the questions, which are:

"Are you a citizen of the United States? If naturalized citizen, when and where were you naturalized.?

"Of what State or Territory are you a legal resident? How long have you been a legal resident thereof? Of what county and of what town or city and ward are you a resident? How long have you been a resident thereof?

"What is your sex and color? What was your age at last birthday? Where were you born?

"What is your education? (Give the principal facts).

"What is your present occupation?

"What is your professional or business experience? (Give the principal facts, and, if at present an officeholder, name the office you hold.)

"Have you ever been employed on census work, either National or State? If so, in what capacity and for how long a period? If an enumerator, for what territory or district? (Describe as accurately as possible).

"Are you physically capable of a full discharge of the duties of a census enumerator? Have you any defect of either sight, hearing, speech or limb? If so, state nature of defect.

"Do you speak English? Do you understand and speak any language other than English? If so, what language? ((Specify languages spoken, as Bohemian, Chinese, Danish, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Italian Japanese Lithuanian Magyar, Norwegian, Polish, Portuguese, Russian, Slavic, Spanish, Yiddish, etc.)

"Are you a member of a political committee of any party? (Answer 'Yes' or 'No,' but do not indicate what party.)

"In view of the fact that you may be required to take a test before a postmaster, state what postoffice would be most convenient to you for this purpose. (This test is of a practical character, consisting chiefly or wholly of the filling out of a sample schedule of population from information furnished regarding typical families, and, in the case of enumerators whose work will be in rural districts, the filling out of a sample schedule of agriculture).

"Are the answers to each of the foregoing questions true to the best of your knowledge and belief? Are they in your own handwriting?

Endorsements of each applicant must be secured from two representative citizens of the community in which the applicant resides. They must be at least 21 years of age and acquainted with the applicant not less than one year. Endorsements will not be accepted from any person who is in any way related to an applicant. The endorsement certifies that the applicant "is a thoroughly trustworthy and honest person, of good habits, and, in my opinion, is fully capable of discharging the duties of a census enumerator, if appointed."

Detective Found Dead in Bed.

Herman Petersen, State detective of the New Jersey Bottlers' Association and a former member of the Newark Police Department, was found dead in bed at his home, No. 58 Crawford street, Newark, yesterday morning. When his wife made the discovery their thirteen-year-old son was asleep beside the body of his father. The boy stated that he had heard his father cry "Help!" during the night, but thought he was dreaming. County Physician McKenzie decided death was due to heart disease. Petersen was sixty-one years old. He leaves a wife, three sons and a daughter.

Mrs. Case, mother of J. Herbert Case, of the Plainfield Trust Company, has been quite ill at her home on Madison avenue, with bronchitis.

TO HELP THE HOSPITAL

The Patrolmen's Association Plans for a "Week of Self-Denial."

THROUGH THE LOCAL SCHOOL.

Mayors Fisk and Smalley and City Judge Runyon to Be Judges—Prizes Are Offered.

The Patrolmen's Benevolent Association has decided on a plan whereby it will be able to render substantial aid to Muhlenberg Hospital. It will inaugurate what will be known as a "self-denial week," March 13-18, and the plan is of such a scope that every family in the city and borough will be reached and given an opportunity to contribute to the hospital. It has the approval of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of this city; Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of the borough, as well as the heads of the public schools and Boards of Education.

The scheme is this. On Friday, March 13, a box will be placed in every school room in the city and borough schools, to be returned on the following Friday, March 18. The children in any school room returning the largest amount of money will receive a handsome silver loving cup, and the school returning the largest amount of money will be presented with a pennant bearing the inscription, "Muhlenberg Hospital, 1910." Both the loving cup and pennant will be presented by the patrolmen's association as an incentive to the children to swell the receipts.

The association has secured the consent of the Boards of Education of Plainfield and North Plainfield and in addition to the work to be done in the public schools of the city and borough, other schools to be included in the contest will be the Parochial School, Hartridge School, Plainfield Seminary, the Plainfield Business College, the Drake Business College, Leal's School and the educational classes of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

The various boxes will be collected from the schools on Friday afternoon, March 18, and taken to the Common Council chambers, opened and the contents counted and the prizes awarded.

Ralph Willis will be present to represent the people; William C. Kinney will represent the hospital and Patrolman Charles A. Flynn the patrolmen's association, as a board of auditors, while Mayors Fisk and Smalley and City Judge William N. Runyon will act as judges.

The committee from the patrolmen's association, which planned the "self-denial" week, comprises Charles A. Flynn, Daniel MacDonald, Dennis O'Keefe, of this city, and Marshals Charles Keller and Lemuel B. Pope, of the borough police department.

It is hoped that in this way every family in the city and borough will contribute something no matter how small, toward the hospital. The contest will cost the patrolmen's association a considerable sum, but it is believed that its efforts will be appreciated and a large sum will be received for the hospital.

ELSIE JANIS COMING IN "THE FAIR CO-ED"

Miss Elsie Janis is coming to the Plainfield theatre Monday night presenting for the first time here a new musical comedy entitled "The Fair Co-Ed." To say that the new piece is by George Ade, author of "The College Widow," brings up at once memories of that brilliant young author's other tremendously successful college comedy, "The College Widow."

The scenes of "The Fair Co-Ed" are located in an anonymous "fresh-water college" town, whose institution of learning has just adopted the policy of the co-education of the sexes. Cynthia Bright, created by Miss Janis, is the only damsel who has matriculated under the new order of affairs and her fair presence has agitated the entire undergraduate body and a section of the sedate faculty to a degree when the action of the play begins. "The Fair Co-Ed" had a tremendous run in New York and is just finishing a second big season in Chicago.

LEHIGH MAY ESTABLISH CAR SHOPS NEAR HERE

Residents of New Market and South Plainfield are interested in the report going the rounds in railroad circles in those places that it is the intention of the Lehigh Railroad Company to establish a large car shop at either one of those points during the coming year. The company, it is understood, is desirous of locating a repair headquarters, as well as a machine manufacturing plant, within easy acess to New York, and that a site at one of the above named places will be selected.

The company owns considerable land along its road in this section. The location of the different shops are mostly in Pennsylvania, and the company's intentions to get nearer to New York may mean the establishment of a big industry in this section which is bound to be a benefit to this city, as well as New Market or South Plainfield.

DESERVED PROMOTION FOR CHARLES B. BROWN

Charles B. Brown, formerly of this city, and later special financial secretary for the Masachusetts State Y. M. C. A., where he has been doing a splendid work, has been extended a call by the Board of Directors of the New Bedford, Mass., association, to assist General Secretary Edward G. Caster in the work of soliciting funds for that association. Mr. Brown will assume his duties within a short time.

Mr. Brown has been doing special financial work under the direction of the Massachusetts State Association, and has been very successful in raising funds for different associations. He is also well-known in the west as well as the east. He was born in New York city, attended the public schools there and the College of the City of New York. After a business career, Mr. Brown entered church work and for two years was a lay assistant at the First Baptist church, this city, under Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes.

From there he entered Y. M. C. A. work in Minneapolis and became assistant superintendent of the Union City Mission, the largest institution of its kind in the west. He was also acting pastor of one of the smaller churches of Minneapolis.

After a brief work of the Y. M. C. A. of Duluth, Minn., he returned east and for three years was general secretary of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A., after which he became associate State secretary of New Jersey, which position he held for nearly seven years. Mr. Brown, for the past three years, has been doing special financial work for the Massachusetts State Y. M. C. A. committee and meeting with considerable success. Among the places visited, and in which he has helped through different financial propositions, are Attleboro, Middleboro, Malden, Somerville, North Adams (which had been closed and was reopened within two weeks after Mr. Brown reached there), Cambridge, Gloucester, and more recently Beverly, where all records were broken by the raising of $83,000 in six days.

New Bedford has a fine plant, a good work under way, and the opportunities for extension in this rapidly growing city are very many. Mr. Brown has been engaged to help the association in meeting this growth and to secure, if possible, more general contribution to the association work.

AGREED ON THE DAMAGES

P. S. C.'s Offer of $1,000 Accepted by Counsel for Injured Boy.

HURT BY A LIVE WIRE.

Clarence Mundy, Jr., Aged Six, Sues Through His Father—The Verdict is Directed by the Court.

In the damage suit instituted by Clarence Mundy, of this city, on behalf of his six-year-old boy, Clarence Mundy, Jr., against the Public Service Corporation for $10,000, for injuries received as a result of picking up a live electric light wire, the company today in the county court, offered to pay $1,000 damages to the boy in addition to his father's expenses and the jury returned a verdict accordingly.

The case was called before Judge Vail in the Circuit Court, yesterday, and among the witnesses examined was Dr. Graham Thomas, of New York, an expert in nervous troubles.

After a conference between Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the plaintiff and Alvah A. Clark, representing the company, the latter offered a compromise of $1,000 in addition to expenses. Mr. Marsh so stated to the court and added that the boy's father accepted the offer which he thought was creditable to the defendant. He asked the court to direct the jury to return a verdict accordingly.

Mr. Clark confirmed Mr. Marsh's statement and said that a verdict was necessary because the plaintiff was an infant. The court commended counsel for the course taken and declared that the settlement was just and fair to both sides.

The boy took hold of a live electric light wire in July last and was badly burned in the thumb and palm of one hand and was not able to continue his studies at the fall term of school. The amount recovered is the exact amount for which the father offered to settle before the trial was begun.

FREIGHT TRAIN WRECK ON JERSEY CENTRAL

A train wreck in which fifteen loaded freight cars were derailed occurred at Fisher's Corner, near Bound Brook Junction at 11 o'clock last night. The train was traveling eastward, when several of the cars "buckled," and jumped the track.

As a result of the wreck traffic was delayed to a great degree last night and considerably this morning. New York trains were about fifteen minutes behind scheduled time this morning. By reason of the wreck all trains bound for Easton and points west obliged to switch over to the Lehigh Valley road at Bound Brook this morning and take that route.

The wrecked cars were filled with merchandise and it is reported that the accident will result in a heavy loss to the Jersey Central.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. O. J. Shoop, pastor of the Grace M. E. church in the presence of about fifty guests, relatives and friends of the couple.

The bridal couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Diehl. A reception followed the ceremony at which Mr. and Mrs. Haines were showered with congratulations before departing on a short wedding tour.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH AT MISSIONARY CONVOCATION

The winter session of the New Brunswick Missionary Convocation, Diocese of New Jersey, was held in St. Luke's church, Metuchen, on Tuesday, and despite the severe storm Bishop Scarborough and about twenty-five clergymen attended.

The session began in the morning with the celebration of the Holy Communion, followed by a business meeting in which the mission work of the past three months was reviewed. Encouraging reports were received from the various parishes and mission stations. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock, after which the afternoon session was held. Archdeacon Henry B. Bryan made an interesting address on the work of the church in the Panama Canal zone, which was of an encouraging nature.

An interesting statement was that the work of building the canal is half completed, that through approved plans of sanitation the zone has been rid of all mosquitoes and other troublesome insects and the possibilities of infectious and contagious diseases reduced to a minimum.

In the evening Rev. Mr. Cuthbert, of Kyota, Japan, delivered a missionary sermon, telling of the work of the church in Japan and making an earnest appeal for more funds. Dean Baker, of Princeton, presided at the sessions and Dean Perkins, of Burlington, was present and made an address. Rev. Courtlandt Mallery, of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, attended the convocation and enjoyed its deliberations.

Mott in the leadership of the foreign department of the Y. M. C. A. and has been heard here in the Crescent Avenue church. Mr. McBee is one of the leading laymen of the Episcopal church.

TELLS WOMEN THEIR DUTY

Rev. G. A. Warner Advises Them to Righly Concentrate Their Efforts.

WASTE THEIR TIME ON FADS.

Clergyman Urges Club Members to Devote Efforts on Employment of Young Problems.

Members of the women's clubs of this State were scored yesterday for their lack of interest in the subject of child labor by the Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, who spoke at the annual meeting of the New Jersey child labor committee in the Free Public Library building at Newark.

Mr. Warner declared that the women's clubs of the State should interest themselves more in the problem of the employment of young persons, instead of spending their energy, money and powerful influence in fads of no importance.

It was explained by Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing, of East Orange, that the Federation of Woman's Clubs had a standing committee on child labor which had been doing good work, but Mr. Warner believed that the federation itself could be interested more in the work instead of having only a committee to take care of it.

The committee finally decided to have the secretary, Charles A. MacCall, ask charitable organizations and other societies throughout the State interested in child labor to send delegates to represent their societies on the child labor committee.

The Olwell bill, which prohibits night work for children, and which was presented to the Legislature last week, was indorsed by the committee. Chairman Orlando P. Lewis, of Elizabeth, who presided at the meeting, declined a re-election, as he has now taken a position with the Prison Association of the United States, which will take up all his time. Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing was elected in his place, and the secretary, Charles A. MacCall, and William F. Morgan, treasurer, were reelected.

It was decided to continue the committees on legislation and publicity of last year. Mrs. G. H. Perry, of Hackensack, is chairman of the publicity committee, and Mrs. Cushing of the legislative committee. The next meeting of the committee will be called by the chairman.

REINHART PROPERTY SALE IS POSTPONED

The foreclosure proceedings of the Prudential Insurance Company against Joseph W. Reinhart's valuable estate on Belvidere avenue were postponed at the office of Sheriff Kirkland, at Elizabeth, yesterday, until Wednesday, February 2, at the request of Attorney Edward Duffield for the insurance company.

The residential property of Mr. Reinhart, which is located on Belvidere avenue, is considered one of the finest in the city, there being two houses on the tract which takes in a whole block. The property is approximately valued at $75,000. The main residence has been vacant for several years, Mr. and Mrs. Reinhart having resided elsewhere since the marriage of their daughters.

MRS. BEULAH RALEIGH IS GRANTED A DIVORCE.

Mrs. Beulah Raleigh has been granted a decree of divorce from her husband, John Raleigh, in the Court of Chancery. Desertion was the ground on which the decree was granted.

Mrs. Raleigh, before her marriage, was Miss Beulah Waters, and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Waters, formerly of this city. The couple were married by the Rev. J. O. McKelvey in 1901, and parted two years later. There is one child by the union, Mary Adelaide, six years old, who the court placed in the custody of Mrs. Raleigh. Robert Newton Crane was counsel for Mrs. Raleigh.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO WIFE MURDER CHARGE

Walter Jacobson, the young militiaman, who shot and killed his wife in their home at Elizabeth, was before Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen in Elizabeth yesterday. He entered a plea of not guilty to the indictment of having murdered his wife. The trial of Jacobson will begin Monday, January 31.

The ordeal through which he has gone is showing its effects on Jacobson. He was pale and nervous when before Justice Bergen. The indictment was read by Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, which charged the prisoner with maliciously murdering his wife. Jacobson was mute while the prosecutor was reading. Several times he nodded his head.

At the conclusion of the reading of the indictment City Attorney James C. Connolly, retained by members of Company C to defend Jacobson, said:

"We plead not guilty to the indictment."

The shooting took place while Jacobson and wife were celebrating Christmas around a tree.

BASKETBALL PLAYER DISLOCATES HIS ARM

While engaged in basketball practise at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night, Walter Cahoone, a member of the Association's five, met with an accident in a scrimmage in which an arm was dislocated. Dr. Albert Pittis was summoned by telephone and succeeded in setting the dislodged bone back in its place.

While no serious results are entertained it is possible that the Y. M. C. A. team will lose Cahonne's services for the remainder of the season. Despite a slight soreness in the effected arm this morning Mr. Cahoone was all right and able to go to New York and attend to business.

The accident occurred while several players were on a run trying to shoot a goal. Cahoone slipped and his teammates fell on top of him.

TWO MARRIAGES OF INTEREST TO SOCIETY

Plainfield society will be interested in the announcement of two approaching weddings, one of which will take place tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Everett Johnson Peck, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, will be married to Miss Cornelia Kahle, daughter of Mrs. Marcell Kahle, of New Brighton, S. I.

The ceremony will take place at St. Mary's Episcopal church, West New Brighton, S. I., and the rector, Rev. Dr. Frost, will officiate. Owing to the recent death of the bride's father, the guests will be limited to a few intimate friends. The couple will sail on Saturday for Bermuda, where they will enjoy their honeymoon.

An interesting fact is that Arthur Peck, who will be his brother's best man tomorrow, will himself be married early in February to Miss Jean Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Burnham, of Philadelphia. The wedding will take place at the summer home of the bride's parents at Berwyn. Mr. Burnham, father of the bride, is manager of the Baldwin Locomotive Works of Philadelphia, the largest concern of its kind in the world, and the family is one of the oldest and best known in the Quaker City.

Clarence Peck, the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, a few years ago married the eldest daughter of Mrs. Marcell Kahle, of New Brighton, and they are now living at Charleston, S. C., where Mr. Peck is engaged in business.

Everett Peck is engaged in business in New York, being a patent lawyer associated with the firm of Duell, Warfield & Duell, of New York city.

MISS OSTROM A BRIDE

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Ostrom Becomes Mrs. R. M. Smith.

DR. CHAMBLISS OFFICIATED.

Miss Florence B. Hutchison Maid of Honor and David Mauger the Best Man.

Miss Marguerite Summerbell Ostrom, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom, of Albert street, and Raymond Morrow Smith, son of H. Craig Smith, of Madison avenue, were married at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of about seventy-five relatives and friends from New York, Brooklyn and this city. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by Miss Florence B. Hutchinson, of Brooklyn, as maid of honor, and Miss Marion Pierson, of this city, and Miss Dorothy Hoar, of Fanwood, as bridesmaids. Dorothy Johnson, of Brooklyn, was flower girl. The best man was David Manger, of this city, and the ushers were George L. Bentley and Homer B. Smith, the latter a brother of the groom.

The bride's gown was of white satin with tunic of chiffon cloth bugle trimmings and point lace. She carried a sheath bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and marguerites. The maid-of-honor's gown was of white chiffon cloth, embroidered with pink roses, while the gowns of the bridesmaids were pink satin with tunics of pink silk net. The maid-of-honor and bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink roses. The flower girl was dressed in white silk mull over pink and she carried a hat of marguerites. The bride's mother wore a handsome gown of faille Francaise trimmed with rose point lace.

The wedding march, as well as the music for the reception which followed the ceremony was played by Charles Suhr's Imperial Orchestra. The bride was given in marriage by her father. After the ceremony congratulations were offered and supper was served.

The house was lavishly decorated for the affair, pink being the prevailing color. There was an attractive arrangement of palms, greens and pink roses throughout the parlor, hall and dining room.

The bride and groom left during the evening for a six weeks' trip to Southern Florida, Cuba and the Bahama Islands, and upon their return will reside at Truell Hall until Spring. Mrs. Smith was the recipient of a large collection of handsome and costly gifts from relatives and friends with whom she is very popular. In the exchange of gifts in the bridal party, the groom gave the bride a diamond crescent, the best man and ushers received gold stick pins with pearls, while the maid of honor and bridesmaids received gold pins with pearls from the bride.

The groom is employed by the bond house of Charles W. Place in Wall street, New York, where he holds a responsible position. Both he and his wife have a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Owing to the recent death of Mr. Smith's mother a large number of invitations to the wedding were recalled and only the relatives and intimate friends were present to witness the marriage.

REV. E. O. WILSON MAKES FAVORABLE IMPRESSION.

TELLS GRAND JURY TO PROBE ASYLUM DEATH.

Trenton, Jan. 20.—Charging the January grand jury in Mercer Court Tuesday, Supreme Court Justice Reed called its attention to the recent death of Henry D. Cruson, at the State Hospital for the Insane, in this city. Crusen was formerly a letter carrier in this city. He became mentally unbalanced and was sent to the hospital. He died after he had been in the hospital a few weeks, and it was found that he had sustained a number of fractured ribs and was otherwise injured.

Justice Reed told the jury that it is the policy of the State to keep a close watch on attendants in institutions of this character, and charged that if it can fix the responsibility for the injuries sustained by Crusen it is its duty to indict.

The court also called attention to the death of Michael Murphy, who died some time ago from injuries sustained while being ejected from a local restaurant.

CHILD SUCCUMBS TO BULLET IN BRAIN.

Trenton, Jan. 20.—Riccardo Sandirocco, the five-year-old Italian boy from Stockton, who has been in St. Francis' Hospital for several days with a bullet in his brain, received as a result of the accidental discharge of a rifle with which he was playing, died yesterday morning, between 1 and 2 o'clock.

The boy was operated on during the afternoon, and the bullet removed from his head. He improved following the operation, and it was thought that he would recover. Toward midnight, however, he suddenly took a change for the worse, and died about two hours later.

WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA.

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

ELECTRIC MOTORS AT PRISON WORKSHOPS.

Trenton, Jan. 20.—Because the old engines in the prison workshops are about worn out it has been decided by the State prison inspectors to replace them with electrical motors. With this end in view the board met yesterday and examined plans and specifications for the purpose of determining as near as possible the cost.

Bids will be advertised for within a few days, and if the contract prices are within reach of the appropriation the work will be given out at once. It is the intention of the board to have the work finished by spring. It is estimated that the installation of electric motors would be cheaper and more durable than replacing the old engines.

PEARY TALKS ABOUT COOK.

Worcester, Mass., Jan. 20.—Commander Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, lectured here Tuesday night. Previous to the lecture he broke his long reserve concerning Dr. F. A. Cook, and, in answer to a question as to how he accounted for the fact that his story and that of Dr. Cook agreed accurately concerning conditions at the Pole, said:

"What I have always advocated, and what practically all scientists were satisfied about, was that there was no land at the Pole, but rather distinctively smooth ice, the ice growing smoother the nearer you got to the Pole. This is a matter that I had published in some of my books, and a guess that the condition became better as one neared the Pole was ninety-nine chances to one in favor of such a condition.

"The farther away you get from land the more smooth the ice becomes. When I was 123 miles away from the Pole I figured out the conditions just as I found them when I reached the Pole. I printed them, and they were known to Dr. Cook and every one else interested in the matter. It was with the assistance of my data and his own imagination that Dr. Cook was enabled to write a description of his alleged discovery of the North Pole."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE ARGUMENT.

Burlington, Jan. 20.—"Give the women a chance to vote and then we'll clean our pavements," was the ultimatum handed to Patrolman Fitzpatrick by a prominent society matron when the officer, in pursuance of orders from Mayor Farner, requested her to have the snow removed from the sidewalk in front of her property. "American women are tired of taxation without representation. We want the right to vote for the men who make the laws women must obey. We're worse than salves," she continued, with a vim that nearly dislodged the officer from the top step.

Then, before the astonished Fitzpatrick could recover his breath, she followed with another suffragette battery. "It's proper enough to have the pavements cleaned. But you tell the Mayor to get after the 'big bugs' and politicians who can do as they please about this town against women who own property and pay taxes, but can't vote!"

The policeman informed the woman that the new Mayor had made it a point to go after the "big bugs and politicians" first and had told them they should set an example for the city. "That's as good doctrine as woman suffrage; I'll clean my sidewalks!" the woman said.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

That the sentiment of golfers in the West is not unanimous for secession from the United States Golf Association is indicated by the following extract from "The Chicago Record-Herald."

The Chicago golf clubs which are members of the United States Golf Association as well as the Western Golf Association are not wholly in sympathy with the proposed expansion movement of the Western body, according to statements made by prominent members of the United States Golf Association clubs of the city. There are six clubs in Chicago—the Chicago Golf Club, the Midlothian Country Club, the Glen View Golf Club, the Onwentsia Golf Club, the Homewood Country Club and the Exmoor Country Club—and, with the exception of the Glen View club, all seem to favor the United States Golf Association in case it should become necessary to make a choice.

Although no official action has been taken by any one of the clubs, it appears that each prefers a compromise of some sort, one which would still leave the United States Golf Assbciation in control of national golf play, but at the same time one which would furnish a rearrangement of governing power so as to give the West better representation than it has had in past years. Each club hopes to avoid any kind of a golf war, and also hopes that the elements which now appear about to be plunged into war will devise some means whereby trouble can be avoided and friendly conditions established between all parts of the country.

There is a growing belief among members of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association that it would be a wise move to hold their annual championship tournament at some other time of the year than the spring. It has long been customary to run this affair off the latter part of May, incidentally causing a conflict of dates with the men's metropolitan tournament. One reason for holding the women's so early has been to get the competition out of the way for the Eastern championship meeting, which follows early in June. An official of the metropolitan body stated last night that she was in favor of holding the tournament in the fall, or shortly before the national championship, when all the players would be in better practice. These and other questions will be seriously discussed at an executive committee meeting to be held shortly.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"King Casey," monarch of the Isle and of Lala Pa Zaza, a dream of a grotesque king in a fantastic realm born of the fertile imagination of Aaron Hoffman, playwright, will be the attraction at Plainfield theatre tonight. Johnny and Emma Ray, farceurs to the universe, and more especially prime favorites with local theatregoers, will be the central figures in this latest and most pretentious musical farce comedy. Mr. Ray will, of course, be Casey, the same as he has apparently always been, and Mrs. Ray still remains the pleasingly resonant and statuesque Goldie Mine.

David, with his harp of a thousand strings was a minstrel, and the singers of all ages were minstrels. The minstrel's songs are the popular music of the day. Surrounded with natural and appropriate environments that harmonize with the compositions, the dances, the unctuous humor, the minstrel brings amusement to all people. The people want it. You can make it better, but those that have tried to force the latter-day hot-house emanations of sensations on the public under the guise of minstrelsy have invariably failed, while those who have endeavored to present minstrelsy in a manner up to the demands of an ever discriminating public reap their reward. Al G. Field's Minstrels will be at the Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, January 22.

Elsie Janis, who charmed everybody by her impersonation of a young American girl just escaped from a French convent in "The Hoyden," is to be seen at the Plainfield theatre, January 24, in her newest vehicle, "The Fair Co-Ed." Again the ebullient Miss Janis is a sprightly school-girl, but in this instance she is the one lone victim of a new co-educational experiment at a "fresh water college" in the middle West. George Ade, whose "College Widow" proved his accurate knowledge of student life, is the author of "The Faid Co-Ed" and Gustav Luders, composer of the music of "The Prince of Pilsen" and numerous other musical comedies, has contributed the score. "The Fair Co-Ed" has had a wonderful success in New York and Chicago, and comes under the aegis of Charles Dillingham with the original cast and production intact.

QUASHES BILL AGAINST F. B. HAM FOR FORGERY

The motion to quash the indictment found against Frank B. Ham, civil engineer, licensed preacher and prominent Westfield citizen, charged with the forgery of a deed, made by his counsel, former Governor Foster M. Voorhees, on July 7 last year, was granted yesterday by Judge Atwater in the Court of Quarter Sessions at Elizabeth. When the motion was made last summer, it was opposed by Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, and as a result of an argument between counsel, Judge Atwater reserved decision in order to consider the points raised.

In the indictment which was found against Ham during the May term, while he was acting at a petit juryman, he was charged with forgery in four counts. The first count charges that he inserted the words "bargain and sell" in the deed, changing it from a quit claim deed.

He was charged in another count with publishing the deed, and in another with forging the certificate of acknowledgment. Harriet and Chas. Griffith, with others who are unknown, were the grantors named in the alleged forged deed, and are those claimed to have been injured by the alleged overt act.

Mr. Voorhees' argument on motion to quash was that if the changes were made in the deed as charged, no crime was committed, as the records proved that the persons alleged to have been injured were not in possession of the title to the lands purported to be conveyed by the alleged forged deed.

A PROFESSION COMPANY IS THE LATEST FORMED.

Trenton, Jan. 20.—Secretary of State Dickinson granted a charter yesterday to one of the most novel companies that ever applied in this State for incorporation. It is the Professional Service Corporation, with headquarters in Camden, and its object is to act as a medical director, osteopath, dentist, oculist, druggist and lawyer for clients.

It will contract with physicians, osteopaths, oculists, druggists or lawyers to carry on their professional work, and will also manufacture articles used in such work. It has a capital stock of $125,000, and the incorporators are Charles B. Winters, Harry B. Plumb, Fred G. Winters and Frank A. Kuntz.

KUSER GIVES $60,000 FOR PHEASANT STUDY

Announcement has been made by the board of managers of the New York Zoological Society to the effect that Colonel Anthony R. Kuser, of Trenton, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, and a director of the Public Service Corporation, was the donor of the special fund of $60,000, which the organization recently received, to defray the expenses of an expedition around the world for the study of pheasants in their native environments.

C. William Beebe, curator of birds, has been sent on the expedition. He is accompanied by his wife and an assistant.

Colonel Kuser has at his country home in Bernardsville one of the finest, if not the best, private collection of pheasants in this country.

Another gift that was announced by the organization was one of $5,000 from Andrew Carnegie. In varying amounts, Mr. Carnegie has given about $50,000 to the society, and other benefactors have also contributed largely to the organization's treasury. Those who have given $25,000 or more are, in addition of Mr. Carnegie and Colonel Kuser, William Rockefeller, Samuel Thorn and Jacob Schiff. Those names were announced Tuesday, and at the same time plans were discussed for raising during the present year one-fourth of the proposed endowment of $1,000,000.

H. C. PITNEY WAS 83 YEARS OLD YESTERDAY.

Morristown, Jan. 20.—Former Vice-Chancellor Henry C. Pitney yesterday celebrated his eighty-third birthday. He had no birthday cake with eighty-three candles, or anything like that.

Mr. Pitney was at his desk in the Iron Bank building when the reporter went there, and was hard at work with his stenographer. He still goes to his office every day, sometimes walks and other times rides and spends many hours over legal papers.

FEARS FOR OLD SOLDIER.

Toms River, Jan. 20.—The whole countryside is wondering over the mysterious disappearance of Jacob Disbrow, a Civil War veteran, who lived alone in a cabin or shanty south of this village. Disbrow has not been seen since Christmas night, and his old war comrades fear that he perished in the big storm either in a neighboring pond or in the woods.

Disbrow's shanty stood by itself south of the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks, which is three-quarters of a mile from the village proper, and on the bank of a millpond. The road from the village to the railroad station, which Disbrow traveled to reach his lonely cabin, is across a causeway with ponds on one side and the river on the other. Disbrow was of convivial habits, and when last seen in the storm he had been drinking. He had recently come from the hospital at Long Branch, where he had a cancer cut from his face, and was not very strong.

NEW BRUNSWICK'S BALL TEAM COST $14,000

New Brunswick's crack baseball team cost the New Brunswick Amusement Company $13,468.89 last season. The annual report which was presented at the meeting of the association Tuesday night showed that $4,958.20 was paid out for salaries of players, $4,503.39 as guarantees to visiting teams, and $4,007.39 was expended for the erection of grandstand, bleachers and putting the diamond in shape.

It is probable that Dave Driscoll will pilot the Middlesex aggregation again. The annual meeting of the association, according to reports, was a scrappy affair between the Driscollites and those who opposed Driscoll's re-engagement as manager for the 1910 season. The former won out by a small majority, which make it almost certain that the former Plainfield favorite will land the plum again.

SAYS MILLER IS INSANE.

Relatives Wrangle Over Condition of Man's Mind.

Robert Miller, a resident of Union, was adjudged insane by a jury in the County Court yesterday afternoon. The case was tried before a lunacy commission, of which Foster M. Voorhees was chairman. Some of Miller's relatives testified that he was sane and that there is no good reason why other relatives should want him declared insane.

On the other hand, these latter testified that they were taking the step for his own good and as a measure of safety for his family. Miller is wealthy. He took the stand in his own behalf. Theodore C. English represents him.

LOVE AND GENIUS.

Love stories of even the most humble order are always interesting, but the love affairs of greatness and genius have a fascination that never ceases. The great men of passing centuries have been charmed by all kinds of women—old women of wonderful minds, young women of no minds at all, ladies of the hipless figure, ladies of tublike lines, beautiful women, plain women, good women, and those who are not so good. But genuine, true, unaltering affection has been claimed only by those who merited it through goodness, character and mental brilliancy.

As a general rule the man of splendid intellect who indulges in great hopes and great deeds, who gives his heart and mind and soul to splendid endeavor and high art seeks for his loved one that type of woman who best understands and who most deeply appreciate his ambitions and his work, who encourages always, dispels his fears, doubles his hopes, and who gives the strength and power of her woman's sweetness and companionship to help him along the rough way of life. The tremendous influence of the woman of cleverness and wit is typified by the love affairs of George Sand, who for many years was surrounded by a circle of the greatest and most wonderful men of her day.

MENDING FOR BACHELORS.

The taste and skill which is required for high-class dressmaking and millinery is often lacking in a girl who is otherwise a good needlewoman, and who would be only too willing to turn her knowledge of plain needlework—mending, darning, etc.—to a useful account as a means of earning a little money if some occupation in this line could be found for her.

To such a girl mending for bachelors would provide the means of making a small income, which, by steady perseverance and the recommendation of clients, would increase year by year.

No capital is necessary and no training, hence it will appeal largely to the girl whose means are limited and who has not the opportunities of training for some more technical occupation.

A practical knowledge of needlework, darning, sewing on buttons firmly and neatly, marking handkerchiefs, which should always be done extremely carefully, and of carrying out the minor repairs of a man's wardrobe is all that will be required. Sometimes the mender can recuff shirts, and this is an advantage but as a good sewing machine is necessary to carry out the work successfully it is not always practicable.

No very important repairs will be expected of the mender for bachelors, as the relining of coats, new velvet collars, etc., are invariably sent to a tailor, but she might be required to doctor the frayed edges of trousers, and small repairs such as enlarging a waistcoat, etc., would be considered within her scope.

To renovate trousers which are frayed at the edges the most satisfactory plan is to undo the hem, stitch (preferably with a sewing machine) the frayed edges together on the wrong side, hem up afresh and press most carefully with a damp cloth laid over the material.

Thorough pressing with a heavy iron is the secret of successful mending, as it is for the successful making of clothes, and is one of the things which the mender should never omit.

To obtain work the mender must canvass in the neighborhood in which she resides, and further afield if necessary.

A call should be made and cards left with the heads of large boarding houses, the housekeepers of bachelor flats, and cards might be left at flats of houses known to be inhabited by bachelors.

The heads of large boarding houses would be only too pleased to place the mender's card in the bachelors' rooms, as if mending were passed on to her their maids would be spared the trouble of sewing on odd buttons for the boarders—more mending than that never being either expected or done.

John Healy, in Al. G. Fields' Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre Saturday, Matinee and Night.

WANT MINISTERS TO WORK AGAINST LIQUOR.

It was urged at the eighty-eighth meeting of the Presbyterq of Elizabeth, held in the First Presbyterian church at Roselle Park, that the clergymen take a more active and personal part in fighting the liquor interest. Delegates suggested that they, as clergymen, should be seen oftner before excise boards and courts opposing liquor licenses. Rev. J. G. Mason, of Metuchen, opened a discussion among the delegates on the liquor question when he made his report as chairman of the temperance committee. Mr. Mason, in his report, said that the friends of the saloon are working to deceive the people. He scored the people of Atlantic City by declaring that, when they stood for the open saloon and the saloon interest, they were as much in rebellion against good government as were the people of the South in 1865. He referred to the recent situation in Atlantic City as the "Rum Rebellion."

"New Jersey," he said, "is in bondage, because of its archaic liquor laws." Mr. Mason asked for a larger appropriation for temperance work and approval of the work of the State Anti-Saloon League. He favored local option and also favored petitioning the State to enact laws that would prevent other States from sending liquor into the State.

CHANGES IN COURTHOUSE OFFICES ARE TO BE MADE.

The Public Grounds and Buildings Committee and the Committee on Jail Inspection of the Union County Board of Freeholders met Tuesday afternoon in the Courthouse in Elizabeth. The Jail Committee made its usual inspection.

The other committee, accompanied by contractors, spent considerable time in the offices of County Clerk Calvert, Sheriff Kirkland and County Registrar Smith. The freeholders expect to make several important changes in the equipment and arrangement of the offices. In the county clerk's and registrar's office partitions will be erected so that the clerks can do business from behind an enclosure as in banks and other business houses.

At the present time there are only railings and tables in the offices separating the business force from the main part of the office rooms. The sheriff's office will be enlarged by the cutting down of a partition separating at the present time the constables room and that used by the sheriff as a main office.

CLEVELAND'S BOYCOTT CUTS PRICES ON MEAT.

The anti-meat-eating movement started in Cleveland some days ago, which has given impetus to such a move throughout the country, already has had its effect in that city. A straight cut of two cents a pound on certain meats has been announced, and other cuts are to follow. Meat dealers said that sales had fallen off one-half in two days and they were alarmed.

Already over 10,000 persons have pledged themselves to abstain from meat for at least thirty days, and the vegetarian plan has met with such favor that thousands over the State are getting in line following the suggestion of State Senator Williams that a meat boycott be inaugurated till Easter Sunday.

The Butchers' Protective Association held a meeting last night in an effort to devise plans for combating the movement.

A MERCHANT OF FEZ.

Description of His Rise and His Ignominious Fall.

The merchants of Fez are to be found all over Morocco. In due course Ali Mahmoud launches out into business on a large scale. He prospers exceedingly and presently purchases a black female slave to assist his wife in her duties. Ali Mahmoud takes a house in the Medina quarter of Fez, overlooking the pleasant olive groves. In course of time he buys two more slaves and is fairly set up as a householder.

When his first daughter is born there is great rejoicing. The baby is immediately stained all over its little body with henna and then smeared liberally with butter and wrapped in woolen cloths. On the seventh day these are removed, and the child is washed for the first time. When the girl has reached her first year her head is shaved, leaving a little tuft by which Mohammed could catch her up to heaven if he were so disposed. In her seventh year her hair has grown long again. She is then veiled, and her proud father sets about looking for a husband for her. It is still the custom to betroth children from infancy.

Ali Mahmoud prospers, and, save for a few domestic troubles, his life runs smoothly. In the evenings Ali will sit and smoke in the bosom of his family. On Thursdays and Saturdays he visits his friends. They pass the time in simple games of cards or in listening to the weird efforts of itinerant musicians. Our merchant gets stout as he approaches middle age. One day his world tumbles about him. Such is the uncertainty of fate in Morocco.

He was serving in his shop when the customer suddenly raised his voice and cried out that he was getting false weight. The accusation was terrible, and Ali vehemently protested his innocence. It was an arranged charge by an enemy of the merchant, who philosophically bowed his head with the saying: "Kismet! Mine enemy has found me, and the serpent requires milk." The arbitrators are called, and, having been bribed previously, they find Mahmoud guilty and sentence him to the usual punishment meted out to givers of false weights. He is dragged to the southern wall of the city, to a place where a tall gibbet is erected. By the irony of fate it is within sight of his own house. A rope is made fast to his right wrist and hoisted up until his toes can just touch the ground. Here he is left till sunset. The idlers jeer at him, and the gamins of the quarter pelt him with stones and refuse. At sundown his friends carry him home, a poor, bruised and senseless body. Broken and disgraced, thus ended his career as a respectable merchant.—Morocco Cor. London Graphic.

Oil Bathing.

Oil bathing is a regular institution among the Hindoos. An experienced masseur rubs the oil on his patrons, friends or relatives generally once a week. And it is a fact that moles, warts and such faults of the surface of the skin are very rare among them. The newborn infant gets the oil bath daily for forty days. The intervals are then gradually lengthened, but he will be considered a very naughty boy who during his school days tries to shirk the oil bath at least once a week. As a youngster he yells all the time he is being bathed. Perhaps it is good for his lungs. Anyhow, nobody thinks of finding fault with the nurse for the hallooing of her charge, and generally speaking it may be said that Indians have better lungs and better pectorals as compared to the body weight than the Europeans, and the feminine bust is decidedly fuller and more perfect.—C. N. Saldanha in Lancet.

How to Carry Books.

The Philadelphia free library permits patrons to take out six books at a time during certain months.

"If you are not going to wrap those books up let me show you how to carry them," said one of the assistants at the library recently.

Then the young woman slipped a cover of one book inside of a cover of one she placed on the top of it, building up a pile of six books in this fashion, and the man addressed, who was carrying the volumes home to please his wife, the reader of the family, found his difficulties were much lessened.—Philadelphia Press.

Too Much Like Work.

The happy mother of a seven-months-old baby, whose chief business seems to be making a noise in the world, was paying her sister a visit, and the other evening young Master Harry, aged seven years, was delegated to care for the baby while his elders were at dinner. So he wheeled it back and forth, forth and back, the length of the library, giving vent to his sentiments by singing, much to the amusement of the family:

"Gee whiz, I'm glad I'm free!
No wedding bells for me!"

An Expensive Production.

"You were very lavish with the snowstorm in the third act."

"Yes," explained the manager. "I bought that snow when white paper was not so high as it is now."—Kansas City Journal.

Domestic Note.

"Give the devil his due," he said.

"I'm willing to," she snapped, "but you're in pretty good health, and he'll have to wait."—Atlanta Constitution.

GREAT BEAUTY CHORUS IN THE SHOW TONIGHT.

"King Casey," the musical comedy being used this season to further exploit the fun eccentricities of those inimitable farceurs, Johnny and Emma Ray, will be presented at the Plainfield theatre tonight. The piece is by Aaron Hoffman, author of "Wine, Woman and Song," and is one of the most boisterously cheerful combinations of mirth and melody offered in recent years. A company of fifty will be seen in support of the stars, including a well chosen "beauty chorus" and a coterie of the cleverest singers and comedians on the stage.

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

Adjourned meeting of the Union County Board of Freeholders held on Friday, December 31, 1909, at 2:30 p. m.

Roll call showed the following members present: Director King, Freeholders Adams, Cady, Cladek, Crane, Darby, Doane, Garrison, Haviland, Jensen, Jones, Martin, Meisel, Perry, Robison, Smith, Stephan and Wilbur—18.

Absent—Freeholders Krouse and Swain—2.

On motion of Freeholder Cady the minutes of the meeting of December 29 were approved as read.

Communications.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union

Gentlemen—I hereby tender my resignation as a member of this board, to take effect immediately.

Very respectfully,
BENJAMIN KING.

On motion of Freeholder Darby the resignation of Freeholder King was accepted.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur Freeholder Cady was elected Director pro tem.

Freeholder Doane nominated Benjamin King for clerk to fill the unexpired term of S. R. Runyon, resigned, which was seconded by Freeholder Cladek.

It was ordered that the Director cast a ballot and upon ballot being cast the Director declared that Benjamin King was duly elected clerk for the balance of the legal term.

The clerk briefly returned his thanks for the honor conferred upon him.

The oath of office was then administered to him by the Director.

Reports of Committees.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—During the year of 1909 I have investigated 380 cases. There were 120 deaths from railroads, trolley cars, automobiles, electric shocks, falls and drowning, and 260 deaths from natural causes. Six cases were referred to the Coroner.

FRANK WESCOTT,
County Physician.

On motion of Freeholder Cladek received and placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Soldiers' Monuments makes the following as its report for the year ending December 29, 1909:

We have approved on the recommendation of General J. Madison Drake, county supervisor, the payment of $35 in each case for the funeral expenses of (13) thirteen soldiers and sailors as follows: Elizabeth, 5; Rahway, 5; Plainfield, 1; Westfield, 1; Springfield, 1.

The supervisor, whose duty it is to investigate cases of this character, has disapprpoved five applications for this relief, having ascertained that the parties named by the undertaker, who presented bills, left sufficient means to pay for burial.

Fourteen granite monuments were erected at Hillside Cemetery, Plainfield, during the year, and the board has ordered the marking of sixty-seven (67) other graves in various cemeteries, applications for the same having been made by next of kin in each case. The new monuments, to cost $14.75 each, are to be of the best Quincy granite, eight inches thick, twenty inches wide, and set in the ground to a depth of two feet, exposing stone nine inches above the surface at lowest point, showing a polished beveled top, on which will be plainly inscribed the name, rank, command, and dates of birth and death of the dead soldier. Your committee hopes to award the contract of these stones at an early day, so that they may be erected before the coming Memorial Day.

Your committee accompanied the supervisor on his visits to most of the cemeteries in the county, in his search for unmarked graves and were pained to find many in a sadly neglected condition; we also found numerous stones erected by the county incorrectly marked, and in one instance two county stones on one grave, and on several others both a count ystone and a Government stone.

The supervisor, who is working assiduously on the task he has in hand, to which he is devoting intelligent attention, will shortly be able to present to the board a voluminous report, containing the correct name, rank and command, with the dates of birth and death of all soldiers and sailors sleeping their long sleep in the cemeteries of Union county, designating graves that are marked and unmarked. The document will be historical as well as valuable for reference.

Your committe recently addressed each board of freeholders in the State a typewritten circular calling attention to the law making it the imperative duty of all counties to erect monuments, marking the graves of al honorably discharged soldiers, sailors and marines who served in the army or navy of the United States during the late rebellion or in later wars, the supervisor having reported that in certain counties—notably Essex, Middlesex, Somerset and Morris, the graves of the Union county soldiers have not been marked as the law commands. While Union county has already marked many graves of soldiers from abroad, brought within its jurisdiction for interment, and will continue the sacred task until complete, other counties have failed to comply with provisions of the law in paying this tribute to our dead heroes. Particularly is this the case in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, near Elizabeth, and the Catholic cemetery, near Millburn, in Essex county; in Hazelwood Cemetery, near Rahway, Middlesex county; and a cemetery in North Plainfield, Somerset county, in which rest nearly two hundred Union county braves.

Respectfully submitted,
J. HERVEY DOANE,
JOHN N. CADY,
JOSEPH PERRY,
JOHN H. STEPHAN,
CHARLES JENSEN,

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1908, by the McClure Company
Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Ridgway Company

"I mean, have you caught another glimpse of Mr. Saffren?"

At that she showed a prettier color in her cheeks than any in her sketch-

"I think she must be in love."

book, but gave no other sign of shame nor even of being flustered, cheerfully replying:

"That is far from the point. Do you grant my burning plea?"

"I understood I had offended you."

"You did," she said. "Viciously!"

"I am sorry," I continued. "I wanted to ask you to forgive me"—

"What made you think I was offended?"

"Your look of reproach when you left the table"—

"I was only playing offended. I thought your note was fetching!" she said.

"Will you take me painting with you?" she added. "If it will convince you that I mean it I'll give up my hopes of seeing that sumptuous Mr. Saffren and go back to Quesnay now, before he comes home. You can't know how enervating it is up there at the chateau—all except Mrs. Harman, and even she"—

"What about Mrs. Harman?" I asked as she paused.

"I think she must be in love."

"What!"

"I do think so," said the girl. "She's like it, at least. I'm afraid she's my rival!"

"Not with"— I began.

"Yes, with your beautiful and mad young friend."

"But—oh, it's preposterous!" I cried, profoundly disturbed. "She couldn't be! If you knew a great deal about her"—

"I may know more than you think. My simplicity of appearance is deceptive," she mocked, beginning to set her sketch box in order. "You don't realize that Mrs. Harman and I are quite hurled upon each other at Quesnay, being two ravishingly intelligent women entirely surrounded by large bodies of elementals. She has told me a great deal of herself since that first evening, and I know—well, I know why she did not come back from Dives this afternoon, for instance."

"Why?" I fairly shouted.

She slid her sketch into a groove in the box, which she closed, and rose to her feet before answering.

"I might tell you some day," she said indifferently, "if I gained enough confidence in you through association in daily pursuits."

"My dear young lady," I cried with real exasperation, "I am a workingman, and this is a working summer for me!"

"Do you think I'd spoil it?" she urged gently.

"But I get up with the first daylight to paint," I protested, "and I paint all day"—

Oliver Saffren had come in from the road and was crossing to the gallery steps. He lifted his hat and gave me a quick word of greeting as he passed, and at the sight of his flushed and happy face my riddle was solved for me. Amazing as the thing was, I had no doubt of the revelation.

"Ah," I said to Miss Elliott when he had gone, "I won't have to take pupils to get the answer to my question now!"

It was evening when I heard Saffren's voice calling my name.

"Here," I answered from my veranda, where I had just lighted my second cigar.

"No more work tonight! All finished!" he cried jubilantly, springing down the steps. "I'm coming to have a talk with you."

"I won't sit down," he said. "I'll walk up and down in front of the veranda if it doesn't make you nervous."

For answer I merely laughed, and he laughed, too, in genial response, continuing gaily:

"Oh, it's all so different with me. Everything is. That blind feeling I told you of—it's all gone. I must have been very babyish the other day. I don't think I could feel like that again. It used to seem to me that I lived penned up in a circle of blank stone walls. I couldn't see over the top for myself at all, though now and then Keredec would boost me up and let me get a little glimmer of the country roundabout, but never long enough to see what it was really like. But it's not so now. Ah"—he drew a long breath—"I'd like to run. I think I could run all the way to the top of a pretty fair sized mountain tonight and then"—he laughed—"jump off and ride on the clouds."

He paused in his sentry go, facing me, and said in a low voice:

"I've seen her again."

"Yes; I know."

"But that's not all," he said, his voice rising a little. "I saw her again the day after she told you"—

"You did!" I murmured.

"Oh, I tell myself that it's a dream," he cried, "that it can't be true, for it has been every day since then! That's why I haven't joined you in the woods. I have been with her, walking with her, listening to her, looking at her, always feeling that it must be unreal and that I must try not to wake up. She has been so kind—so wonderfully, beautifully kind to me!"

"She has met you?" I asked, thinking ruefully of George Ward, now on the high seas in the pleasant company of old hopes renewed.

"She has let me meet her. And today we lunched at the inn at Dives and then walked by the sea all afternoon. She gave me the whole day—the whole day. You see"—he began to pace again—"you see, I was right, and you were wrong. She wasn't offended—she was glad—that I couldn't help speaking to her. She has said so."

"Do you think," I interrupted, "that she would wish you to tell me this?"

"Ah, she likes you!" he said so heartily and appearing meanwhile so satisfied with the completeness of his reply that I was fain to take some satisfaction in it myself. "What I wanted most to say to you," he went on, "is this: You remember you promised to tell me whatever you could learn about her and about her husband."

"I remember."

"It's different now; I don't want you to," he said. "I want only to know what she tells me herself. She has told me very little, but I know when the times comes she will tell me everything. But I wouldn't hasten it. I wouldn't have anything changed from just this!"

"You mean"—

"I mean the way it is. If I could hope to see her every day, to be in the woods with her or down by the shore—oh, I don't want to know anything but that!"

"No doubt you have told her," I ventured, "a good deal about yourself," and was instantly ashamed of myself. I suppose I spoke out of a sense of protest against Mrs. Harman's strange lack of conventionality.

"I've told her all I know," he said readily, and the unconscious pathos of the answer smote me. "And all that Keredec has let me know. You see I haven't"—

"But do you think," I interrupted quickly, anxious, in my remorse, to divert him from that channel—"do you think Professor Keredec would approve, if he knew?"

"I think he would," he responded slowly, pausing in his walk again. "I have a feeling that perhaps he does know, and yet I have been afraid to tell him. I think he knows everything in the world! I have felt tonight that he knows this, and—it's very strange, but I—well, what was it that made him so glad?"

"The light is still burning in his room," I said quietly.

"You're right. I'll tell him tonight." This came with sudden decision, but with less than marked what followed. "But he can't stop me now. No one on earth shall do that, except Mme. d'Armand herself—no one!"

I saw his hand groping toward me in the darkness, and, rising, I gave him mine.

"Good night," he said. "I'm glad to tell him. I'm glad to have told you. Ah, but isn't this," he cried, "a happy world!"

Turning, he ran to the gallery steps. "At last I'm glad," he called back over his shoulder—"I'm glad that I was born"—

I heard his voice indistinctly, but I thought, though I might have been mistaken, that I caught a final word and that it was "again."

* * * * * * *

It was one of those days when nature throws herself straight in your face and you are at a loss to know whether she has kissed you or slapped you, though you are conscious of the tingle—a day, in brief, more for laughing than for painting, and the truth is that I suited its mood only too well and laughed more than I painted, though I sat with my easel before me and a picture ready upon my palette to be painted.

No one could have understood better than I that this was setting a bad example to the acolyte who sat, likewise facing an easel, ten paces to my left; a very sportsmanlike figure of a painter, indeed, in her short skirt and long coat of woodland brown, the fine brown of dead oak leaves; a "devastating" selection of color that, being much the same shade as her hair, with brown for her hat, too, and the veil encircling the small crown thereof, and brown again for the stout, high, laced boots which protected her from the wet tangle underfoot. Who could have expected so dashing a young person as Anne Elliott to do any real work at painting? Yet she did, narrowing her eyes to the finest point of concentration and applying herself to the task in hand with a persistence which I found on that particular morning far beyond my own powers.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

The horse of Max Taylor took fright Tuesday on the Bridgeton turnpike and ran four miles before it was stopped by W. S. Bethel, a Pine Grove farmer.

For uttering an oath at the dogcatchers, who handled his hound roughly in their net, William Myers, of South Millville, was fined $7.25 by Mayor Smith.

Joseph Moore, alias "Wilson," of Mullica Hill, has gained just twenty-five pounds in six months in the Gloucester county jail, although the allowance for prisoners' food has been cut down by the freeholders.

The parents of seventeen-year-old William Morgan, who left his home in Millville, after a quarrel with his father last Sunday, are very anxious to locate the boy. A post card mailed from Philadelphia states that he is on his way to Atlanta, Ga.

Cologeic Bulfamante and family of six children, who live at Vineland, were saved from death by gas through the heroic efforts of the Misses Rose and Nancy Tusco. The girls awoke half dazed at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning and dragged the victims to the windows, although they said they were so dizzy themselves that they occasionally fell down. A gas pipe had burst in the cellar.

Upsetting an oil stove as she was carrying a Christmas tree out of the house yesterday, Mrs. Christina Rockefeller, forty years old, of 2826 Concord avenue, Camden, set fire to her dress and was burned in a horrible manner about the body, neck and arms. Her condition was reported as being very serious at Cooper Hospital. The rear of the house was gutted by the flames, entailing a loss of about $1,000.

Mr. and Mrs. George Callahan, of Gloucester City, claim to have the smallest baby in South Jersey. The baby was born four weeks ago, and at that time weighed one and one-half pounds, and now weighs but one pound heavier. The child is healthy and doing well, and has been named Walter Elliott Callahan.

First Assistant Chief Bernard C. Lyon, of Gloucester City, was suspended by the Board of Fire Commissioners Tuesday night until the next meeting of Council, which will be asked to dismiss him for disobedience. The board also dismissed eleven members of the department, nine for disobedience and two for dereliction of duty. The vacancies were filled by the election of new members.

William Hinman, of Woodbury, heard a noise on his roof as he and his wife were about to retire Monday night. Thinking it was made by a cat, he procured a revolver and threw up the window. He was confronted by a man lying on the roof, who wore a heavy veil, which disguised his features. Hinman ordered him to throw up his hands, but he merely rolled over and off the roof into a snow bank, out of range of Hinman's revolver shots. Several other residents report having heard similar noises.

The West Jersey Presbytery held its midwinter session in the Grace Presbyterian church, Camden, Tuesday, about forty members being in attendance. The pastoral relations of Rev. William C. Knight, of the Deerfield church, and Rev. John W. Lowden, of the Cold Springs church, were severed, both having gone to other fields, the former to Nottingham, Pa., and the latter to New Castle.

Miss Evelyn Gifford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Gifford, of Jersey City, gave a luncheon Tuesday, when her engagement was announced to Henry A. Gardner, of Chicago. Miss Gifford was a debutante two seasons ago and has been popular in the younger set ever since.

Declaring that her father, William A. Jordan, caused her to invest about $4,000 in property from money she secured from the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in a suit for damages, and that she has not been able to bring about a settlement, Mrs. Nellie R. J. Stiles began suit in the Camden Court of Chancery yesterday for an accounting and to set aside the deeds of several properties. Jordan admitted receiving $3,300 and not $3,900, as testified to by Mrs. Stiles, but declares that the money was a gift, and not given as a trust. He claims that it was his money that purchased the lots and erected buildings on Haddon avenue referred to by his daughter. The case was not concluded.

Misfortune has relentlessly pursued the family of Andrew Snyder, of Millville, in his time one of the most noted deer hunters in South Jersey, who died last July. Just prior to his death his home at Newcomtown was destroyed by fire, two of his horses died, his trained deer hounds were poisoned by an unidentified enemy and he was arrested and fined $100 for an infraction of the deer-hunting law. Now the family of the dead deer hunter is suffering ravages of diphtheria. Two of the children died, the eldest is in a critical condition and three are just convalescing from the disease. All these within the space of less than a year.

Miss Elsie Jones, of Jersey City, has returned home after a visit with friends here.

STOCK EXCHANGE HOUSES ARE CARRIED DOWN

The failure of the important house of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. has been announced on the New York Stock Exchange. At the principal offices of the firm yesterday, it was announced that the failure was due to customers who had refused to make good their impaired margins. No announcement was made as to the assets and liabilities of the firm.

Lathrop, Haskins & Co. had for a long time been intimately associated with the interests of the Columbus and Hocking Coal and Iron Company.

The firm of Lathrop, Haskins & Co. was recognized as the board member, Henry S. Leverich as general partner, and Fannie Graves Lathrop, widow of the former senior partner of the old firm, as special partner.

Formerly the house was prominent in the bond business, but recently has been actively engaged in a general brokerage business.

The failure of J. M. Fiske & Co. was also announced on the Stock Exchange. The Fiske firm was organized in April, 1900. The members of the first are J. M. Fiske, Arthur C. Sherwood, Dudley T. Humphrey and Clifford M. Washburn.

AGAINST BILL FOR SINGLE HEAD BOARDS.

Jersey City, Jan. 20.—It was reported here Tuesday that Hudson County's twelve Democratic Assemblymen will oppose Mayor Wittpenn's bill providing for single-headed commissions in this city, the commissioners to be appointed by the Mayor. The bill will seek to give the Mayor the power of removing the commissioners who serve in his administration.

The Hudson County Assemblymen, in their platform pledges, are on record as favoring the election of more public officers.

At the Democratic caucus, held in Jersey City two weeks before the Legislature convened, the caucus voted to support bills favoring the extension of the elective system to all municipal and State administrative officers. Under this caucus rule the Hudson Assemblymen cannot vote for Mayor Wittpenn's single commission bill.

Were the bill to become a law the Street and Water Board would consist of but one commissioner, and, instead of being elected, he would be appointed by the Mayor. A single commissioner would then do the work of the Police Board, and a single commissioner would also serve for the Fire Board. Same story for the Excise Board.

KIRKPATRICK-MATTISON WEDDING IS ANNOUNCED.

New Brunswick, Jan. 20.—Announcement was made yesterday of the marriage of Andrew Kirkpatrick, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Bayard Kirkpatrick, to Miss Ethel Mattison, daughter of Edgar H. Mattison, of French street. The wedding took place on December 18, 1909, at the parsonage of the Fourth Reformed church, Rev. Alan D. Campbell, officiating.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was formerly employed as telephone operator at the Michelin Tire Works at Milltown. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a great-grandson of one of the early Mayors of New Brunswick, and a nephew of the late Judge Andrew Kirkpatrick, of the United States District Court for New Jersey. His father was city treasurer of New Brunswick for a number of years.

BRAKES DIDN'T WORK AND TRAIN RUNS AWAY.

Califon, Jan. 20.—The wrecking of an ore train on the High Bridge Branch Railroad Tuesday night blocked traffic on the main line of the Central road until 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Several cars and an engine were badly broken in front of the local station.

The fireman sustained injuries by jumping. Dr. William C. Alpaugh dressed the injuries and later he was taken to his home at Phillipsburg.

The engineer left his train on the east bound track and ran to the local station to get orders to run northbound on the barnch. Failure of the brakes to act, it is said, caused the train to run away and collide with the engine. A similar accident occurred here ten years ago, when one man was killed and several persons injured.

HONORS FOR JERSEY STUDENTS.

Princeton, Jan. 20.—In the elections for editorial positions on The Daily Princetonian, the college newspaper, two New Jersey boys were honored. Lawrence Myers Mead, 1911, of Plainfield, was elected managing editor, and Joseph Jeff Van Deventer, 1911, of Netherwood, was chosen assignment editor. In college circles these appointments carry with them a good deal of prestige. J. T. Woodhull, 1911, of San Antonio, Tex., was chosen editor-in-chief, the highest position on the paper, and Simeon R. Winch, 1911, of Portland, Ore., business manager. These men will take charge of the paper March 1.

Knights of Columbus bowlers, in registering a 1,000 score last night on Campbell's alleys against the Woodmen, posted up the highest team score of the season in the Fraternal League. The Knights made a fine start in the series by winning the initial combat 887 to 815. The Woodmen finished on top in the second game after a hard battle by a margin of four pins, the score being 847 to 843. The scores:

LEAL'S TRIUMPHANT OVER SOMERVILLE TEAM

Leal's basketball team outgeneraled the Somerville High's quintet on the Y. M. C. A. court yesterday afternoon the locals winning by the score of 46 to 14. Plainfield outclassed the Somerset County schoolboys in team work and in shooting goals and experienced little difficulty in landing the victory. The lineup:

Leals: Forwards—Lawrence, Dallas; centre, Jewett; guards, Hibbard, Foote. Somerville: Forwards—Brunt, Davenport; centre, Holstein; guards, Puble, Garretson.

SOMERSET FIELD CLUB IS IN LINE FOR BALL SEASON

The Somerset Field club will be represented on the diamond again next season by a crack nine. Although snow covers the ground the borough athletes met at the home of Malcolm Krewson, 30 Summit avenue, last night, discussed baseball prospects and reorganized for the coming campaign. These officers were elected:

President, Harry Jackson; vice-president, George Townley; secretary and treasurer, Harry Lievers; manager, Malcolm Krewson; captain, George Townley. Manager Krewson expects that next season's aggregation will be considerably stronger in some departments. After the transaction of business refreshments were served.

STAR RIDERS FOR THE NEWARK 6-DAY RACE

The Newark six-day bicycle race, which will be held in the First Regiment Armory, Newark, from February 7 to 12, promises to surpass in high-class riders even the Madison Square Garden event, held in New York in December. The Newark event will have National Champion Frank L. Kramer as the star, a rider of whose equal the New York grind never had, and who will team with Willie Fenn, the "Handicap King." Then two other combinations that John M. Chapman has signed up this week are Jimmy Moran and Iver Lawson and Eddie Root and Joe Folger. Moran is the greatest six-day rider in the world, and, with Floyd MacFarland, was the international championship team.

Promoter Chapman this week filed the plans of his eleven-lap track with the city building department at Newark, and secured the permit to construct it. The track will be built in three days, and it will be ready for the international sprint and motor race meet to be held in the armory Saturday night, February 5, two days before the start of the six-day race.

CRANFORD HIGH SCHOOL IS NOT IN P.H.S. CLASS

The Plainfield High School team defeated the Cranford High School five yesterday afternoon by the score of 91 to 8. The game was a complete walkover for the local team and Cranford did not even have a look in. Morris played the star game for P. H. S., making thirty-eight goals, and Clark was a close second with eighteen.

Not a single member of the Cranford team played especially well. In the first half the visitors made all of their goals and the score stood 51 to 8 at the end. In the second half, the game furnished good practice for P. H. S. The line-up:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Morris, Clark, E. Woodhull, R. Woodhull; centre, Manley; guards, Doane, Overton, Vail.

Cranford—Forwards, Halsey, Lawrence; centre, Smith; guards, Oakey, McKinney.

The freshmen beat the juniors by a score of 26 to 21, between the halves of the other game. Jack Ricketts put up the best game.

Joseph M. Sweeny, son of Mrs. Marguerite Sweeny, of Liberty street, left on Tuesday for Washington, where he will remain until spring.

FARMERS PROSPEROUS SO THE REPORTS SAY

At the opening session of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, at Trenton yesterday, it was reported that the farmers of the State had been successful last year, in spite of bad weather and many new insect pests. The outlook for this year was declared to be promising, especially if the Legislature can be induced to grant an appropriation for combating the brown tail and gypsy moths, which threaten to work havoc with trees and vegetation during the coming summer.

Presenting his annual report, Franklin Dye, of Trenton, secretary of the board, showed that the crops of the New Jersey farms during the last year were valued at $59,357,955. This is an increase over the preceding year of $1,1614,802. Corn was the greatest grain crop of the year, there being a yield of 9,860,000 bushels, worth $7,395,000. Wheat, with 2,200,000 bushels was valued at $2,398,000. White potatoes, of which there were 6,800,000 bushels, were worth $5,576,000 and sweet potatoes 2,751,000 bushels, were worth $1,980,720.

There were 655,500 tons of hay worth $10,817,500, and the miscellaneous vegetables were worth $11,069,805. The milk yield of the year was worth $15,330,000 and the poultry and eggs were worth $2,750,000. The live stock on the farms is valued at $26,993,864. Cranberries were worth more than a million dollars.

Dr. Dye reported that the State has more than a million acres of undeveloped land, much of which may be made productive. He advocated the growing of grapes, vegetables and small fruits in the southern counties and the raising of sheep on the northern hills. Apples, he said, were not doing so well as formerly because of the ravages of the scale.

Dr. E. B. Voorhees, president of the board, made an address congratulating the farmers on their success and prospects. The meetings will be continued until Friday, when officers will be elected. Addresses will be made by experts from this and other States.

STATE PRINTERS' LEAGUE HAS SESSION IN RAHWAY.

The State Printers' League of New Jersey was entertained Sunday afternoon by Rahway Typographical Union, No. 235. The session took place in Washington Hall. Delegates were present from Elizabeth, Jersey City, Hoboken, Newark, New Brunswick, Orange, Paterson, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Rahway, Somerville and New York city. Seventy-two delegates and visitors honored with their presence.

President Claude Reed, of the Rahway Union, called the meeting to order at 2 o'clock, after which President Cornelius Ford, of Hoboken, presided.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Cornelius Ford, of Hoboken; vice-president, L. W. Niles, Somerville; secretary, Kenneth Forbes, Jersey City; treasurer, H. Thomas, Plainfield; sergeant-at-arms, E. Fitzsimmons, Hoboken.

The several reports presented were encouraging. They tend to show that printers were in demand, and, in so far as work was concerned, were prosperous.

Among the prominent speakers of the afternoon were President Small, of Newark Union, No. 103; President Totten, of Jersey City Union, No. 945; Organizers Stein and McLaughlin, of New York, and the Rev. Mr. Monroe, of Newark.

Following the session a repast furnished by the Rahway union was served by Caterer John T. Weber. The afterdinner speeches were in the nature of good and welfare. At the close of the entertainment the delegates ad visitors departed for their respective homes, well pleased with the reception they had received in Rahway.

FORECLOSURE ON RAILWAY.

Mount Holly Bank Seeks to Collect on $550,000 Mortgage.

A bill was filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton yesterday by the Mount Holly Safe Deposit and Trust Company for the foreclosure of a mortgage given by the Burlington County Railway Company to secure an issue of $550,000 in general mortgage five per cent. gold bonds.

This mortgage covers all of the property, franchises, &c., of the company which is a traction concern with a line extending from Stanwick, Burlington county, through Hartford and Masonville.

DISTRICT MEETINGS OF S. S. ASSOCIATION

Under the direction of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association a thorough canvass of the Sunday-school plans and methods throughout the State will be made during the early part of February, when the district meetings will be held in four sections of New Jersey. The district meeting to be held at Newark, February 24, will interest Plainfielders, as it will be represented by the counties of Passaic, Bergen, Hudson, Essex, Middlesex, Union, Somerset and Monmouth.

The other meetings will be held on February 8, 9 and 15, when the other counties of the State will be represented. During the present week the first missionary institute ever held in New Jersey, will convene at Trenton under the direction of the Mercer County Association, assisted by the Young People's Missionary Movement of New York city.

Opening at Vineland on February 8 and closing at Newark, February 24, the State field workers plan to get in touch with the individual Sunday-schools, through the superintendents of the departments and county officers. Rev. Samuel D. Price, of Camden, is acting as recording secretary of the State association in place of Rev. E. Morris Fergusson, who resigned to enter a larger field.

At the last convention held in East Orange, a board of Directors for the School of Methods was organized, to take full charge of the Summer School to be held in the High School Auditorium, Asbury Park, July 5-12, 1910. Miss Elizabeth Denny Paxton, of Princeton, is president of the board. At a recent meeting of the board the program was outlined and among the teachers secured for the work are Rev. Milton S. Littlefield, of Bay Ridge, N. Y.; Prof. H. H. Horn, of New York University and Miss Margaret Slattery, of Fitchburg, Mass.

PRINCETON HEAD DENIES COLLEGES ARE UNSOUND.

Speaking in defense of the American universities and colleges against the charge that their student life was morally unsound, which has been made recently in some quarters, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, indulged in some caustic criticism of the men bringing the accusations. Dr. Van Dyke lectured before the University Extension Society on the subject "Self-Development and Education in America," in Philadelphia.

"I am heartily sick," said Dr. Van Dyke, "of the spectacle presented by certain men, who, apparently, regard it as their religious duty to slander our noblest institutions of learning. From some of their utterances on the platform and in magazines, you would imagine that these colleges and universities were sink holes of iniquity, where vice and infidelity were prevalent. The very men who are doing this thing are the ones, of all others, who ought by every sense of right and decency to rally to their support. It is high time that some man of recognized university standing came forward and repelled these wholly false and unfounded attacks.'

YALE CLASS STATISTICS.

New Haven, Jan. 20.—According to statistics of the senior class of Sheffield Scientific School made public Tuesday, the handsomest member of the class is W. McK. Green, of Cleveland, O., with Spencer L. Murfey, of East Cleveland, O., second. The class beauty is Rufus D. W. Ewing, of Enfield, Mass. The class dude is Carl Ferguson, of Logansport, Ind. The average height of the class is five feet nine and three-quarters inches, almost an inch higher than the average of the seniors of a year ago, and the weight is a pound less, 148 pounds six ounces.

The average expense for the three years is $2,670.30, and the maximum is $15,000, with $600 the minimum. H. F. Andrus easily won the title of the best athlete with 105 votes, while Ted Lilley, the football player, stood second. The favorite New York paper is The Sun, and the favorite actress is Maude Adams. The most popular college next to Yale is Princeton, 132 votes, and Harvard, 25. Smith College received 50 votes as the favorite girls' college, with Vassar 26.

TO POST DRUNKARD'S NAMES.

Newton, Jan. 20.—The Board of Protectors of Branchville has prepared a list of ten names of alleged drunkards of the borough, on which they will take action at their first meeting at the home of George A. Buchanan, Friday evening. The names of these individuals will probably be posted with the hotel-keepers.

A member of the board in discussing its plans, Tuesday, stated that after the names had been posted and the owner of the name notified, that the board would keep strict watch to see that neither the hotel man nor the alleged drunkard violated the law. If any violations are noted complaint will be made immediately.

Mrs. Eva C. Laing, of Washington, left for home this afternoon, after a two weeks' visit at the home of her cousin, A. L. Force, 82 Duer street.

FORT GIVES HIS VIEWS TO THE GOVERNORS

The visiting Governors of States and Territories who are in Washington attending the conference of Governors, were entertained at dinner by President Taft in the White House last night. Many of them were accompanied by their wives.

Among the speakers at the conference yesterday was Governor Fort, of New Jersey, who spoke in favor of State control of public utilities. He said, in part:

"The common law doctrine of the police power which inheres in the sovereignty of each State irrespective of any constitutional provision in any State is broad enough to cover all the authority for supervision and regulation which is essential to the protection of the people of a State in the regulation of public serving corporations within the State. So long as the power exercised by the State is only to regulate and not to destroy or confiscate it is within the police power.

"The power of revision and review will answer every purpose. When no wrong exists no need for supervision can be found. Directors of public serving companies should be given a free hand to manage and direct their corporate affairs and business. Only when complaint is made of the fairness and justice of their acts is there either right or reason for State interference, even for regulative purposes. Let the statutes define with precision the powers and obligations of directors in administering their trust, and the administrative board of the State be given authority to meet and correct any inequalities or injustice which directors may permit or encourage."

IN WALKED SCHMITT, THOUGHT TO BE DEAD.

Camden, Jan. 20.—Having buried the body of a man identified as that of her husband, Mrs. Henry Schmitt, 302 North Twelfth street, fainted when Schmitt walked into the house Tuesday, after an absence of six months. For some reason which Mrs. Schmitt could not give she was not overly pleased at her husband's appearance, and he again left.

Schmitt disappeared last May. In June the body of a man found in the Delaware river was identified, not only by the wife, but by several of Schmitt's friends. Mrs. Schmitt paid for a large funeral and interment took place in the family burial plot.

Then Mrs. Schmitt began to collect insurance and lodge money, the Prudential company alone paying her $600. Henry Schward, as treasurer of several German societies, also paid death benefits to the supposed widow.

All would have been "well" had Schmitt not reappeared. He had been six months in Atlanta, Ga. Reaching his old home, he walked in without knocking. His wife did not see him until he stood back of her. Then she swooned.

Schmitt soon left, and then the insurance company and lodges began an investigation. They found the case to be one of mistaken identity. Mrs. Schmitt will pay back the money until Schmitt dies for keeps.

Who the man is whose body rests in the Schmitt burial lot is likely to remain a mystery. Mrs. Schmitt will not have the body disinterred.

GREAT MEDICAL SCHOOL PLANNED FOR COLUMBIA.

With a view to establishing in New York city the greatest medical school in the world and creating one of the world's centres of medical teaching and research, the trustees of Columbia University Tuesday made known their plans for the improvement of the College of Physicians and Surgeons. The entire plan as proposed will involve an expenditure of $3,000,000.

It provides for the complete reconstruction and removal of the College of Physicians and Surgeons from its present site in West Fifty-ninth street, near Tenth avenue, to Morningside Heights, where the other faculties of Columbia University are now situated.

William K. Vanderbilt, George J. Gould, Frank A. Munsey, and a fourth person, whose name is withheld, contributed jointly the amount necessary to acquire half of the block which measures 450 feet by 200 feet. The other half of the site is now owned by Mrs. Drexel, of Philadelphia, and the trustees expect in the near future to acquire this plot with money provided by gift.

A course of instruction in agriculture was inaugurated at Columbia University Tuesday, after a lapse of more than a hundred years. One hundred and thirty-five students enrolled in the first class.

Hold Hangman for Spitting.

The Board of Health of Newark yesterday began a crusade on persons who spit on the sidewalks, and twenty inspectors were kept busy making arrests in all parts of the city. James Van Hise, the official hangman of the State before the adoption of electricity for the execution of criminals, was one of the first to be arrested by the inspectors.

Charles Ficke, of Duer street, is very ill with an attack of Bright's disease.

MERCHANTS GATHERED FOR ANNUAL BANQUET

Job Hedges and J. N. Beach Chief Speakers Win Plaudit of Diners.

W. L. SAUNDERS TOASTMASTER.

250 Representative Men Attend the Successful Affair at Truell Hall — The Speeches.

Good speeches, an excellent dinner and plenty of music combined to make the annual banquet of the Plainfield Merchants' Association, held at Truell Hall, last night, a success. The committee had forgotten nothing in providing for the entertainment of the guests and all things considered it was the greatest achievement of the association. There were more than 250 people seated in the large dining hall, which was attractively decorated with American flags.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, was the excellent toastmaster, and those at the table were Job E. Hedges, John N. Beach, of New York; Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, of this city; Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield; Rev. B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church; Rev. George A. Warner, of the Church of the Holy Cross; Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, James E. Martine and A. E. Force, the last named president of the Plainfield Merchants' Association. All of the above-named persons spoke except Mssrs. Gilbert, Smalley and Force.

The speeches were full of wit, wisdom and gave everyone something to think about seriously regarding trade matters. There was a vein of common-sense running through the various remarks, which the merchants were quick to grasp.

Toastmaster's Remarks.

"An excellent definition of the simple life," said Mr. Saunders in starting the speechmaking, "has been given as an easy death. It is better to wear out than rust out. This association which is scarcely two years old, has wielded a wide influence for good, as is evidenced by the fact that since organized the cost of living has gone up twenty per cent. Like the aeroplane, new records are constantly being made. A few years ago one could purchase a pound of sausage for fifteen or eighteen cents, now you have to pay almost twenty-five cents and you are expected to pay cash."

Mr. Saunders commended the association for its action against advertising in all sorts of programs, adding that the members thereby have ceased to be the organ grinder, and the monkey for the idle poor. He said it was a good thing for the merchants to get together and he congratulated them upon their success as an association.

In introducing the first speaker, Mr. Saunders said that he succeeded Chauncey M. Depew as a director of the Equitable Life Insurance Company, at a critical time; that he had come up from the ranks and knew whereof he spoke. He then presented John N. Beach, who is vice-president of Teft-Weller & Co., of New York, who took for his subject, "Optimism vs. Pessimism." He defined the pessimist as one who in deciding between two evils chose both.

Mr. Beach's Address.

Referring to the combination of capital and the rapid rate at which the country is traveling, Mr. Beach said that it was enough to make people wonder. He said that while during the Revolution there was not a single millionarie, today there are said to be about 100,000 such persons. What will be the outcome?

"There is a vein of good common sense running through the people," continued Mr. Beach. "Never was there a greater demand for honest men, men of the highest integrity. What is our boast as a country? It is friendship, intelligence and brotherly love, which is a cure for the down trodden and oppressed. The eyes of the world are on us. We are making rapid progress.

"When we elect a President, Governor or Mayor, they are our President, Governor and Mayor and if need be we would lay down our lives in their defense. Let us remember our debt of gratitude to our fathers and emulate their good deeds in the fear of God."

The next speaker, said Mr. Saunders, is famous for many things. He

DIVORCED TO WED AGAIN

Decree Against Fair Estate Heir Who Will Marry Boston Man.

FIRST MARRIAGE UNHAPPY.

George Whitley Deserted, Filed Suit —His Bride a New Market Girl Ran Through Fortune Quickly.

Announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Mabel Leffler Whitley, formerly of New Market, and who received a snug little fortune as one of the beneficiaries of the noted Fair will case, to George Hayden Rounds, a Boston merchant, is creating more or less tea-table talk among Plainfielders, who were friends of Mr. and Mrs. Whitley during their residence here.

The announcement was made at a recent dinner party at Brookline, Mass., a fashionable suburb of Boston, where Mrs. Whitley is at present residing.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitley were married at New Market in September, 1904. About this time Mrs. Whitley, who was a niece of the late Mrs. Charles L. Fair, who with her husband was killed in a tragic automobile accident in France, received a share of the fortune which was bequeathed to members of the Nelson family.

For a couple of years the married life of the Whitleys was happy. Mrs. Whitley, however, tired of housekeeping and took to traveling. This finally resulted in the estrangement of the couple, which resulted in Mr. Whitley instituting a suit for absolute divorce in the Massachusett's courts. Mr. Whitley experienced little trouble in gaining his freedom, as the judge granted him a decree, after a hearing that lasted only fifteen minutes.

Whitley is well known to Plainfielders with whom he bears an excellent reputation. Before his marriage he won honors in the local baseball world as a pitcher of the Y. M. C. A. and New Market clubs. It was while twirling for the latter club that the couple became acquainted, the culmination of the diamond romance ending in the wedding.

Mrs. Whitley's alleged extravagant tastes after receiving her share of the Fair millions resulted, it is claimed, in the disappearance of her fortune and before leaving Plainfield to take up her residence in Boston with relatives she was employed in a New York department store for a time.

DUNELLEN SOLID FOR A BOARD OF TRADE

Dunellen merchants and citizens are solid for a Board of Trade, and at a meeting of those interested in the movement, last night, the way paved for organization next Thursday night. There was about fifty in attendance and the meeting was called to order by Mayor William A. Sanford. F. N. Wynckoop was selected of temporary chairman, and A. J. Hamley as secretary pro tem.

A committee, headed by former Councilman Todd, as chairman, was appointed to frame a constitution and bylaws. The committee held a session and prepared several recommendations which will be presented for adoption next Thursday night. Thirty-two enrolled as charter members.

The committee suggested that the association be known as the Dunellen Board of Trade and that the dues be placed at one dollar a year.

TO OFFER A REWARD FOR BEST ATTENDANCE.

The regular business meeting and social of the Young Men's Class of Monroe Avenue M. E. church was held last night. The attendance was large, but in order that it might still be better two of the members offered prizes to those who should have the best record for attendance, one for a period of one year at the business meetings the other for a period of time not more than two years, for the Sunday school sessions. The first prize will be a gold monogram stick pin, the other to be a fountain pen. Louis B. Mulford was elected treasurer to fill the vacancy left by George H. Fisher, Jr., who resigned. Harry Lude was appointed chairman of the good and welfare committee.

After the business meeting a social hour was held in which cake and cocoa played an important part.

At the Same Time Plainfield Trust Company Makes Him Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

No better evidence of the great influence of the Plainfield Trust Company could be given than the unanimous election this week of J. H. Case, the Trust company's able secretary, to the position of vice-president of the Franklin Trust Company, at Broadway and Liberty street, New York city. The selection of Mr. Case to this office is the result of negotiations between the two trust companies, and is with the advice and approval of the directors, and the majority stockholders of the Plainfield Trust Company.

At the meeting of the directors yesterday, Mr. Case was unanimously elected to the office of vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the local Trust company, which will be under his management as heretofore, but he will devote a portion of his time to the Franklin Trust Company, and the interests of The Plainfield Trust Company in New York city The arrangement augurs well for the future of all concerned.

It is evident that the steady growth of The Plainfield Trust Company is not merely a fact of local import. Those who are in a position to know say that the company and its efficient secretary have made a distinctly favorable impression in banking circles throughout this State and elsewhere; that the company has greatly widened its influence during these few years of its existence, and is now recognized in New York city and other centers as a strong, conservative financial institution.

AL. G. FIELD'S MINSTRELS ARE "IN OUR MIDST" AGAIN.

Cornell & Daugherty are with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels. The English champions are the acme of acrobatic absurdity. Ups and Downs is the title some one has bestowed on one of the best of all comedy pantomime creations. With a grace and finish few have equaled, a novel performance is presented by this talented pair. They make their first appearance in this country with the Al. G. Field Greater Minstrels, and have met with such success they will have no Ups and Downs in this country, except in their bumps on the stage as the public and managers vote them the best in their line. Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night.

THIS DESERVING CASE NEEDS YOUR ATTENTION.

It is a hard thing for a woman to be a father and a mother at the same time. If she is not strong, the day's work out added to the care of the home and family means a breakdown.

The Charity Organization Society wishes to help just such a woman to remain in her home. The income from the children's work will be sufficient for the family once she is started, but to get her started, the society asks for a double bed, a three-quarter bed, blankets, quilts, bedroom furniture and children's clothing any size of which won't be wrong. Telephone No. 103 to send wagon for any of these articles.

William Britton Dead.

William Britton, colored, son of Mrs. Ida Britton, 310 Arlington avenue, and a former resident of this city, died in Richmond, Virginia, on Monday. He was thirty years of age. The remains arrived here today and the funeral service was conducted at the home of the dead man's mother this afternoon. Rev. Mr. Bailey was in charge of the service and interment was made at Hillside.

GIRLS SERVED DINNER; MEN WASHED DISHES

Not to be outdone by the various men's clubs of the churches throughout the city, the Girls' Club, of the Congregational church, gave a "men's night" entertainment and supper for its friends of the sterner sex, last night, in the parlors of the church. The supper was all to be desired, as was shown by the way the good things disappeared. The members of the club showed conclusively their ability to cook and serve a good meal. Covers were laid for thirty.

During the evening informal speeches were made by Edward Kuenstler, Athel Newman, George Bentley, Harold Hudson and several others. After the dinner a social time was enjoyed. An unusual feature was the acceptance of the young women's suggestion that the young men wash and dry the dishes. The affair was such a success that another similar one is planned for the near future.

PLANS MADE FOR MEN'S MASS MEETING

Fifteen men representing the different evangelical churches of the city met at the Y. M. C. A. last evening and planned the details of the great men's mass meeting to be held in the First M. E. church on Friday night, January 28.

It was decided to make a vigorous effort to secure the attendance at this meeting of large delegations of men from the churches of this city, Bound Brook, Dunellen and Westfield. It was also decided that there should be no solicitation of funds whatever at the meeting.

The following committees were appointed: Program—James R. Joy, William D. Murray and C. B. La Rue; finance—Samuel Bingaman, F. R. Stevens, and J. H. Manning; publicity committee to consist of one representative from each church. Herbert E. Parker was appointed a committee of one on statistics.

It was announced that the speakers at next Friday evening's meeting would speak upon the following topics: Mr. McBee on "Men and Missions," and Mr. Colton on "Will America Evangelize her Share of the World?"

EL JAN THE HOME OF PRETTY ACTRESS

As one tangible result of her seven years of professional endeavor, Miss Elsie Janis has a beautiful little semi-country estate just outside of Columbus, Ohio, the city of her birth, and part of her vacation is spent at El'Jan, as she has named the place. The house at El'Jan is a rambling story and a half bungalow with wide roomy porches on three sides. It stands 200 years back from the road in a bower of old trees, with spreading green lawns diviersified with flowering shrubs and posey beds. There is a large garage with servants' quarters above; an excellent tennis court, upon which the youthful star of "The Fair Co-Ed" spends two or three hours of every day when she is at home. Miss Janis has devoted special attention to her music room, which contains a grand piano and a small pipe organ. In connection with the garage is stabling for two horses, although since she acquired her big Thomas car she keeps but one, a Kentucky saddler presented to her last year by a relative of her mother, who breeds horses on a large farm down in the blue grass district of Kentucky. During Miss Janis' annual stay at El'Jan the little place, which is quite close to the grounds of the University of Ohio, is the scene of much merriment on the part of the students and the young people of Columbus, among whom Miss Elsie grew up. Miss Janis is to appear at the Plainfield theatre January 24, in George Ade's newest college play, "The Fair Co-Ed."

Newark Couple Wed Here.

Miss Bessie H. Littlefield, of 24 Marshall street, Newark, and Hubert S. Hahn, of 856 South Twelfth street, Newark, were married last night by Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, at the parsonage on Park place. The witnesses were Miss Elvira D. Hoester and G. W. Davies, both of the borough.

Supper in Old Holland Style.

The young women of the Lutheran church, at Mercer avenue and Grove street, will give a supper in Holland style at the church on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, January 25 and 26. Supper will be served at 7 o'clock.

THREAT TO STEAL CHILD

Daniel Olsen Receives Warning That Kidnappers are After Daughter.

MISSIVE SIGNED "G. B. T."

Letter is Postmarked Plainfield and the Writer Intimates that He Is Friend of Father.

A warning letter telling them to be on the lookout for Jennie, their five-year-old daughter, as a band of kidnappers were awaiting an opportunity to steal her from home, received by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Olsen, of 68 Elm street, yesterday afternoon has placed the Olsen family in a high state of fear and alarm.

The letter is signed, "From a friend, G. B. T." and bears the postmark of the local office. It is printed and the writer tells Mr. Olsen that he is an ex-member of the band which has its headquarters in Jersey City. "Look out for your little girl as the Black Handers will show no mercy. They will steal her, in one, two or three weeks. As I am a friend I write this letter to warn you," is a portion of the message.

When a Daily Press reporter called at the Olsen home today he found Mrs. Olsen in a highly excited state of mind over the letter. She declared that her husband has no idea as to who "G. B. T." is. She is in constant dread that some one will enter the house and take her child and as a source of protection she is having Jennie kept upstairs.

The mysterious letter will be placed in the hands of the police for investigation.

MISS MURRAY A BRIDE

Charming Young Woman is the Bride of William Barlow, Jr.

REV. DR. ZELIE OFFICIATES.

Miss May Murray Maid-of-Honor, H. Maxwell Brakeley Best Man—A Reception Follows.

Miss Ethel Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., of West Fourth street, and William Barlow, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow, of Prospect place, North Plainfield, were married at 8 o'clock last night at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Sr., of Central avenue. The wedding was attended by about three hundred relatives and friends from New York, Brooklyn and this city. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss May Murray, as maid-of-honor, while her two cousins, the Misses Sadie Roome Sandford and Bertha Tilney, of this city, were the bridesmaids. The best man was H. Maxwell Brakeley, formerly of Dunellen, and the ushers were Henry Brower, of this city, and Harold Hegeman, of New York city.

The bride was gowned in white crepe meteor, with duchesse lace yoke and trimmings and she wore a point lace veil and carried a shower bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and bride roses. The maid-of-honor's gown was of yellow silk cashmere de soie, with crystal trimmings and she carried pink roses. The bridesmaids wore white lngerie gowns and carried pink flowers.

Austen's Orchestra, of New York, played the wedding march and furnished the music for the reception which followed. The bride was given in marriage by her father. After the ceremony congratulations were showered on the young couple and supper was served. The bride received a large collection of valuable gifts. Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Barlow left on a wedding trip. They will reside here upon their return.

The bride, as well as the groom have been popular in the younger society set of the city and borough; also attending many social functions at the Park club. Mr. Barlow holds a position with the New York banking house of Moffat & White.

NEGRO STOLE PURSE OF SHOEMAKER'S WIFE

Eugene Britton, colored, an old offender, was arrested on West Front street at 10:45 o'clock last night by Patrolman Charles Flynn, charged with stealing a pocketbook containing about seven dollars from Mrs. Ida Bender, early in the evening. Britton perpetrated the theft about 7 o'clock in a small shoe shop conducted by the Bender woman's husband on Madison avenue, near Front street.

When Britton was arrested he denied his guilt, but after a search at police headquarters, in which the purse and a part of the money was found by Captain Frederickson secreted in the inner band of his hat, he admitted guilt. In court this morning Judge Runyon held the prisoner in $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury.

Unless bail is furnished Britton will be taken to the conuty jail at Elizabeth today. A coincidence of the theft is that the body of William Britton, a brother of the prisoner, who died in Richmond on Monday, arrived here today for burial, the funeral service being conducted this afternoon.

Britton took the purse from a muff belonging to Mrs. Bender which was laying on the counter in the store. Britton entered the store while Mrs. Bender was attending to some customers, and when the former wasn't looking he appropriated the pocketbook. Britton left the store hurriedly and soon after Mrs. Bender discovered her loss.

Britton has a police record. In addition to serving two terms in the Rahway Reformatory he has been implicated in other disturbances.

Died After Short Illness.

PURCHASE PROPERTY FOR FEDERAL BUILDING

Postoffice to Be Located on Watchung Avenue and Second Street.

GOVERNMENT GETS TRACT.

The Mary L. Force Estate and the Society of Friends Make Agreements for Sale.

The Federal building will be located at Second street and Watchung avenue. This decision has been reached by the Government and the agreements have ben entered into by the U. S. authorities and the owners of the land necessary to be used for the purpose. Work will be begun as soon as Congress passes the measure introduced at this session for a supplemental appropriation of $15,000, which will bring the total appropriation up to $115,000.

The site of the new postoffice building will be the Mary L. Force property at Second street and Watchung avenue and a part of the large property to the south on Watchung avenue owned by the Society of Friends. The particular piece of this tract to be used is that now leased by Carl Peterson, the florist.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury C. L. Hillis acted for the Government, and A. L. Force, representing the heirs of the Mary L. Force estate, closed the negotiations for the major part of the site today. This tract, on which there is a double frame dwelling house at present, has a frontage of ninety-six and seven-tenths feet on Watchung avenue and a depth of 150 feet on East Second street. The section of the Society of Friends property adjoining, as purchased by the Government, measures about sixty-four feet on Watchung avenue and a depth of 150 feet. This will make the entire site for the Government's purpose 160 feet by 150 feet, which is considered amply sufficient.

Acting Secretary Hillis personally inspected the various locations suggested and decided that the one upon which he agreed was the best. The site is an ideal one, situated, as it is in the very heart of the city, within a thousand feet of the main station of the railroads and directly on all local as well as the through line trolley service.

Acting on the following information, Senator Kean has introduced a supplemental appropriation bill:

"Treasury Department,
"Office of the Secretary.
"Washington, Jan. 3, 1910.

"Sir — Referring to legislation which authorizes the purchase of a site and the erection of a building at Plainfield, N. J., at a cost of $100,000, and to the appropriation under the limit of $25,000, I have the honor to state that the department is negotiating for a site, the cost of which will exceed the amount already appropriated. In order that payment of the purchase money may be made as soon as the title is approved, I have earnestly to recommend that the following item be included in the urgent deficiency bill:

"Plainfield, New Jersey, postoffice: To permit of payment of purchase money for site, in addition to the amount heretofore appropriated for site and building, fifteen thousand dollars, within the total limit of cost heretofore fixed.

"Respectfully,
"CHARLES D. NORTON,
"Acting Secretary."

1910 Lingerie and Net Dresses

When you see these exquisite new creations you'll wonder how it is possible to sell them so reasonably. Why, for less than $20.00 a woman may have four or five distinctly different white dresses which her friends would be apt to believe cost her twice as much. We've never shown more exquisite styles; peep into the windows, they unfold a few; unconscious admiration will hold you spellbound until you fairly go into ecstacies over their daintiness, beauty and elegant needlework. The styles are effectively sweet and original. The conceptions of French genius, the creations of American fingers, note differences between the valuations and selling prices. These are savings you may effect:

GOLF.

The golf pot continues to boil, even though the disgruntled ones in the West have temporarily decided to defer radical action, amounting to secession, until some future date. This is shown by the full text of the resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association in Chicago last Saturday night.

The original amendments to the constitution of the Western body to change the name and remove all geographical lines were withdrawn, but in their place new resolutions were submitted and adopted which not only provide for a change of name, but go further by empowering the board of directors to institute a movement for the formation of an American or national association which, if organized, shall become the recognized golf governing body of North America, or such part thereof as may be mutually determined by its creators.

Whether or not this action on the part of the Western association can be construed as another slap at the United States Golf Association must, for the time being at least, remain largely a matter of opinion. Anyhow, it will furnish more food for thought and discussion. Possibly the Western action will be explained to the satisfaction of all concerned at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association to be held in New York tonight.

Several golfers who read the resolutions last night expressed the opinion that they were rather ambiguous and open to different interpretation. It was the feeling, however, that action on the same would never be taken if the national body showed an inclination at the meeting tonight to meet the West halfway and open the road to lasting peace.

HOTEL MEN ANGRY OVER HILLERY'S LAW

Trenton, Jan. 21.—Declaring that brief experience has shown the Hillery "jag law," as the Board of Protectors statute is called, to be the opera bouffe climax of last winter's legislation, the New Jersey Hotel Keepers' Association, in annual session here Wednesday, demanded the immediate repeal of the measure.

The association describes the Hillery act as dangerous and ridiculous "by jermitting irresponsible temperance zealots, who make up the boards, to accuse without charge and convict without trial" men who fall under its operation.

"The immediate repeal of so infamous an act is demanded by every instinct of justice and decency," declare the liquor dealers.

Another legislative proposition that aroused antagonism among the liquor dealers gathered here is the plan for the enactment of a jury commission law, which is declared to "foreshadow a serious menace to the interests of the industry to which hotel men, in common with all other citizens, should be keenly alive." The liquor dealers at Wednesday's session maintained that the present grand jury system relates the favor of excise laws to local habits and needs and local sentiment.

The Jury Commission, according to the liquor men, will permit the judge who tries to draw grand juries to indict or to draw petit juries to convict to put every man within his jurisdiction at his mercy. Denunciation of the proposed law was voted on the ground that the Governor, who names judges, having the liberty and property of people thus in their power, would be invested with autocratic authority.

The sentiment was almost unanimous among the delegates in attendance at the convention to the effect that the influence of organized liquor men should be pressed against legislation seeking to further regulate the traffic, and particularly so with Governor Fort's recommendation that a higher license fee be exacted and that saloons be limited to one to 500 inhabitants.

The chief speaker at Wednesday afternoon's session of the association was former Senator Robert S. Hudspeth, of Jersey City, who managed the Eastern campaign for the Democratic national committee in 1908. Mr. Hudspeth is an attorney for the association and discussed the legal aspects of the excise situation from the standpoint of the liquor dealers' interests. He will draw the form of the bill which the liquor dealers will seek to have introduced to repeal the Hillery "jag law."

It was decided to hold the State convention at the Hotel Sterling, this city, on February 3.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet Tuesday night when the officers-elect will be in charge. There will also be an attractive program for the entertainment of the veterans.

Miss Rose Gesswein, of West Front street, is recovering from a recent illness that detained her at home for a few days.

GRIP KILLS MAN WHO WAS BLINDED BY SHOT.

Trenton, Jan. 21.—Newbury S. Satterthwaite, who was shot and blinded following a quarrel with his wife a few years ago, died late Tuesday at St. Francis' Hospital after a short illness from the grip. It was never known positively who fired the shot that blinded Satterthwaite. The woman claimed that he shot himself in an attempt to end his life, while he swore that she shot him.

After an investigation had been made by the police, Mrs. Satterthwaite was placed under arrest. Later she was released, and the case was dropped. After Satterthwaite left the hospital he and his wife separated. Then the pastor of his church reunited the couple. A little later they had another quarrel, and when Mrs. Satterthwaite passed her husband in the room he grabbed her and beat her badly with a hammer. She was removed to a hospital. The woman is still living. After losing his sight, he made a living by selling brooms.

RED BANK MAN JAILED FOR VERY MEAN FRAUD.

New York, Jan. 21.—Charles B. Thompson, of Red Bank, N. J., whom Judge Malone Wednesday declared the "meanest real estate swindler ever," was sentenced to not less than four years and six months and not more than seven years in State prison for swindling William J. Schephard, of 14 East Twenty-third street, out of $1,000. Thompson sold the complaint a lot in Borough Park to which he had absolutely no title.

The complaint against Thompson asserted that on June 10, 1907, Schephard paid to the real estate dealer $1,000 as a deposit on the lot. Time passed and Thompson did not make any proper return for the money, and seemed unable to vouchsafe any explanation of the delay.

Thompson was indicted on December 30, 1907, but the trial was not reached until this week, after a delay of more than two years.

STATE'S CONTROL OF THE LIQUOR TAX

Defending the movement to levy an income tax, former Congressman Lafe Pence, of Colorado, in an address at the annual banquet of the Men's Club of Ampere, took occasion last night to administer a mild rebuke to Governor Hughes for opposing the proposed constitutional amendment. Governor Hughes' objection that the tax might seriously impair the value of State and municipal bonds, was refuted by the former Congressman, who insisted that the comparatively insignificant tax on such bonds was not worth consideration, as the benefits to be derived would far exceed the loss.

The dinner was served in the basement of the Church of the Disciples of Christ, East Orange, Edwin J. Gantz, vice-president of the club, acted as toastmaster, and the address of welcome was made by DeWitt C. Reynolds, the president. Short addresses were also made by Rev. L. N. D. Wells, pastor of the church, and Grant C. Tullar, of East Orange. Clifford J. Werner, Jr., of Orange, was in charge of the musical program and rendered several original songs.

Former Congressman Pence offered as his chief argument for the income tax the claim that the raising of such funds would eliminate the necessity of a federal whiskey tax. He contended that the liquor traffic could be much better managed by the individual States, and declared that State control would eventually mean a great reduction in the number of saloons. In refuting the objections advanced by the Governor of New York, the speaker submitted figures to show that an income tax on municipal and State bonds would be about one-tenth of one per cent. each year, or a little over $1,000,000. This loss would be more than offset, he claimed, by State control of the internal revenue tax, now received by the Federal Government.

Internal Revenue Tax to State.

At the beginning of his speech, Mr. Pence reviewed the history of the income tax movement in this country since its inception in 1883. He declared that the hopes of years were now about to be realized, as religious and other organizations were taking an active interest in the tax in the belief that it would mean that the administration of the Federal Government could be separated from the liquor traffic.

"It seems to me an inspiring thing," he continued, "because one organization after another has taken it up and echoed the right sentiments. This is quite evident that it will have some effect on the coming campaign. Mr. Taft, in his campaign, showed his personal interest in the problem. Last May he decided that the time had come to declare in favor of an amendment to the Constitution that would permit the passage of the necessary law.

"Not one voice was raised against the income tax until the Governor of New York raised the objection that a law could be so worded that it would impose a tax on State and municipal bonds.

"Now, I am not a non-partizan; that's the reason why I like Taft. He never disavowed partizanship. It's the real thing now for the Democrats to pay to hear La Follette and for the Republicans to pay to hear Bryan. 'I am a hidebound Illinois Democrat, but as a Democrat I approve of the unanimous action of Congress in voting $25,000 to give Taft the money to go west and South preaching his Republican doctrines. I have lived to see this limb that I tried to graft to the tree about to bear fruit.

"But Mr. Hughes has brought forth finally an objection just when it seemed that the country was unanimous. The difference between the parties is this—Mr. Taft said that Congress should have power to pass such a law, but I am advised that Mr. Taft has qualified his own support of the law by declaring that it should only be exercised in times of war and emergency. The Democratic party, on the other hand, is in favor of an annual tax in time of peace as well as of war. All was in accord until the disturbing element of Mr. Hughes suggestion that the value in the market of State and municipal bonds would be affected.

Hughes Argument "Rag Baby."

"It has to be treated seriously, not because of the worth of it, but because of the man. For his own clean and honest record it must be considered seriously, although he has hung up one of the cheapest rag babies or scarecrows that was ever presented to the nation.

"Abraham Lincoln saw the danger of the whisky tax. Four times since his day has an attempt been made to remedy the evil, and each time the attempt is stabbed in the back with a stiletto, the handle of which is stamped with the initials of the United States Government. Now a special fund is offered to take the place of that whisky tax. Under the State control the consumption would probably be reduced. Even if the consumption is reduced seventy-five percent. the revenue would be more than enough to offset the insignificant tax of one-tenth of one per cent. on State and municipal bonds.

"If three-fourths of the saloons are closed money will be saved for the wage-earners, and they will be the buyers of State and municipal bonds. And the bonds will be clipped by the same scissors that tonight are cutting out patches for old pants."

TAKES OATH AS JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT

Francis J. Swayze, whose term of office as a justice of the Supreme Court expired yesterday, was sworn in at noon as a Supreme Court Justice and judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals at Jersey City under the appointment confirmed by the Senate last Monday night. The oath of Supreme Court justice was administered by Chief Justice Gummere, and that as judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals by Chancellor Pitney. There were present only the members of the Court of Errors and Appeals, which adjourned from conference long enough to witness the administering of the oaths.

There had been some delay in making out the commission of Justice Swayze, and when he arrived this morning some of the members of the court questioned his right to participate in the conference, on the ground that he was no longer a member of the court. The question was not seriously urged, however, but it happened that up to the time that the commission arrived the conference considered only cases in which Justice Swayze had sat below. Therefore he spent his time in the outer courtroom.

TRENTON SEWER PLANT WOULD COST $500,000.

Trenton, Jan. 21.—The first step, following the report of the special committee, for the establishment of a sewage disposal plant in this city, was made by the Finance Committee last night. City Engineer Swan and Chief of Sewers Gregory met with the committee and upon their advice was decided to employ an expert to study the sewer system and to report his opinion as to the most effective and economical method of complying with the State's demand that no more sewage be emptied into the Delaware river. It is estimated that a sewage disposal plant for the city will cost $500,000.

It is estimated that a thorough investigation of conditions with a view to recommending the most desirable way of disposing of the sewage, could not be completed in less than three months. It would include study of the existing sewers, the quantity of sewage, its chemical composition, basteria, surface drainage, and many other details.

As the present sewers, or most of them, carry stream water, which is contrary to the ruling of the State Board of Health, many new drains may be necessary unless the State modifies its demand in this respect.

The city has been given until next January to devise plans and begin operation.

NEW JERSEY FARM FOR RAISING GAME

Five new game laws and two recommendations for the farmers came out in the discussion on the present game laws opened by Benedict C. Kuser, head of the State Fish and Game Commission, at the evening session of the State Board of Agriculture last night at Trenton.

Mr. Kuser's proposed laws provide for a reduction from $10 to $5 for the annual gunning license issued to non-resident gunners from States which make $5 their fee from non-resident gunners; a State farm for raising game stock the State; all State lands closed to gunning; squirrels not to be shot when the snow is on the ground and restriction of civil service as to wardens removed.

His recommendations were that farmers sow a little buckwheat which they should leave standing to feed birds, after the regular crops were harvested, the commission supplying the seed upon application; and a law against gunners shooting ducks from what are known as "air-holes," where the gunners cover themselves with white suits and give the ducks no chance for their lives. He said this, in his opinion, was not sport, but animal murder.

Mr. Kuser said that the State had imported 2,000 Hungarian partridges and 4,000 English pheasants during the year, and promised farmers to send them some if they wished the birds to be liberated on the farms. He said this importation had cost some $20,000. A State farm for raising such game would reduce the cost from $3.25 a bird to something like $1.23, he said.

Regarding fish, Mr. Kuser said said 120,000 brook trout had been liberated in streams in South Jersey during the year.

RISKS LIFE IN FIRE FOR BATTLE FLAG.

For the second time within six weeks fire yesterday morning broke out in the Dippolt Building, in the centre of the business section of Trenton, and before the blaze could be extinguished fire and water had done damage aggregating $14,500, the losers including the Rider, Moore & Stewart Business College, Aaron Wilkes Post, No. 23, G. A. R., and R. A. Donnelly, haberdashery, and H. M. Voorhees & Brother.

That death did not attend the fire seems little short of miraculous, as the firemen were caught in an unexpected trap. Assistant Chief Bennett fell through the burning floor, but saved himself by clinging to a charred joist. Captain William Stackhouse, of the Chemical Company, was burned about the face and his eyesight may be permanently damaged.

The orogin of the fire, as of the fire before, is unknown, but it is said that the blaze was started by a smoldering cigar or cigarette. Priceless war relics belonging to Wilkes Post were in danger from both fire and water, but were saved by veterans under the lead of Captain Joseph Durrell, who risked his life to save a cherished battle flag.

The Carleton Sisters make a hit with their clever clog dancing and catchy songs, while while Ward & Lansgar are clever in funny songs and classy skirt dancing. The pictures are better than ever.

THE MERCHANTS' BANQUET

has said that the true test of generosity is not how much we give, but how much we have left. He was secretary to Mayor Strong, of New York, and since then has been mentioned for the Mayoralty. This was brought to Tim Woodruff's attention, who said: "Why the people never take him seriously," whereupon our next speaker replied: "Why, I did not know that I had fallen so low that Tim Woodruff would not take me seriously." Job E. Hedges was then introduced and received a great ovation.

Job Hedges Witty.

After expressing his pleasure in being in Plainfield, adding that "he had heard of the place and right pleasantly," Mr. Hedges entertained the guests in one of the best after-dinner speeches heard in this city.

"I am glad to be flagged on the left and right by the clergy," continued Mr. Hedges. "I enjoyed Mr. Beach's remarks. There was some sound things among them—dangerously sound, and I wonder whether we are living up to them. Referring to the mayoralty question in New York—that old scandal—I want to say that I was mentioned. I had all the delegates but two—Parsons and Tim Woodruff. Woodruff put it in my mind and then forgot it. It is better to have been mentioned than not to be thought of at all.

"There is some excuse for my being here. I was born in Elizabeth, but didn't tarry long, for at the age of six weeks I went to New York and have never been able to get away from there. It is a pleasure to speak to New Yorkers who tarry here occasionally.

"When you leave anything to the public be sure of the public. There is a growing passion to speak on behalf of the public, whether it wants it or not. Every four years we save the public, and after everything is patched up the old thing goes on just the same. I am very glad that Mr. Martine and I agree, although I disagree with his chiefs. However, he has made the people sit up and take notice and settle many things that would not have been settled.

Praises Roosevelt.

"Many people differ with Roosevelt, but years later he will be credited while in office of making all the people think on the same subject at the same time. A man that can do that has no cause to fear of results. The reason reformers are not a success is that they prescribe before diagnosing the case.

"Publicity has destroyed more great men than anything else. There is nothing so devastating as the deadly headline. We don't need so many great men, anway. I would rather see a man with evil instincts, within bounds, than one so good that he never thinks. I would rather see a man build one story high than a basement three stories deep. A $250 or $500 consultation may do good, but dry feet will beat a physician to death.

"A man who don't vote has no right to any opinion. He has no right to cheer the American flag. He is worse than the man who fired the first shot on Fort Sumpter, for he had convictions. Among the reform movements I understand you have what is called the New Idea, an idea we were told about in 1789. There is nothing new since the Ten Commandents.

Country a Partnership.

"Some people think they are called when they are only chosen. A man may fool himself. I wonder what some men think when the lights are out. It is a wonder they don't laugh themselves to death. The argument in favor of prohibition loses its force with me when I can smell the argument. I did say that the true test of generosity is not what we give but what we have left, and I think that the true test of kindness is whether you inconvenience yourself. I would rather that a man give vaultingly than not at all, because it may do some poor pup good. The great man in this world is one whose principle of life is that of the nation. When we are all equal as construed by the Constitution, Gabriel will blow his trumpet. This country is a great partnership and every one is equally liable. It is in the individual walk of life that the future of the country lies. I have no fear for this country as to trouble with other countries. If it is a small nation, we buy it and if it is a big one we shut off their food supply. The only people who can whip Americans are Americans.

"Nothing happens when all is quiet and I think that the most enervating time will be when everyone is satisfied. Politics are handling people in the aggregate without brute force. The great question today in this country, whose wealth cannot be estimated in figures, is whether the people are decent. If they are, we are solvent, if not, we are insolvent. No man is bigger than the sphere he occupies."

At the close of Mr. Hedges' address, he was given three rousing cheers, and at the suggestion of James E. Martine, all drank to his health.

Mr. Fisk's Ideas.

Mayor Fisk, the next speaker, said in part:

"I feel the time has come when some action must be taken by the Legislature and a simple, comprehensive municipal code for the government of cities adopted to take the place of the many hundreds of laws now on the statute books. Recognizing the principal of home rule and giving all municipalities within certain proper limits, as already outlined, the power to regulate their own internal affairs.

"However, there are certain matters some of which are now in part under State supervision and part under local supervision that refer to all and should be regulated and under State control.

"The State should fix a debt limit for both county and municipality that cannot be exceeded. This limit (as recommended in the report of the commissioners) should be not over 2 per cent. of the assessed valuation for counties—not over 7 per cent. of assessed valuation in cities of the first or second class and not over 10 per cent. in the smaller municipalities.

"Another most important matter which should be under State control is—

"In order that everyone—individulas, railroads, banks, trust companies—all corporations and others—should only pay their equal and just proportion of taxes. All property must be valued on the same basis. If in a municipality the property is valued on a different basis in the respective taxing districts or any one party is favored by the assessors—others suffer in comparison and must bear more than their fair share of the burden. The same holds true in the county if the districts or municipalities differ. And in the State where the counties adopt a different basis or method. And in the end it all comes back to the individual tax payer.

Answers Governor.

"For years just this inequality and unjust method of taxation existed in this State, and it was to overcome this injustice and correct these methods that the County Board of Taxation—and the law known as the Hillery Maximum tax rate law, came into existence. Now Governor Fort in his annual message to the Legislature says:

"'The people of the State favor the abolition of the County Boards of Taxation. Their existence is without excuse and always has been. Their object and purpose was solely to secure an increase of taxable values so that the average tax rate upon railway property might be reduced. They have accomplished this purpose with a resultant loss to the public school funds for distribution by the State of not less than five hundred thousand dollars per year for each year since their creation.'

"I admit valuations have been raised, that the average tax rate has been lowered, that the railroads pay less taxes than they otherwise would, and therefor there has been a corresponding loss to the school fund—but I differ from Governor Fort in his statement that there is no reason for the existence of the county tax boards or the Maximum tax rate and never has been. Before the passage of these acts, all property was valued for the purposes of taxation in a happy-go-lucky, any old way at any old percentage of value—all the way from 15 per cent. to 60 or 70 per cent of its real value, without any regard being taken in the relation of one place to the other, or to equality of values and the assessors perjured themselves by stating under oath that they had assessed all property at its full fair value of what it would bring in the market at a fair sale. This not meaning a forced sale at auction or a fancy sale where the property was wanted for some particular purpose, but a fair sale of a willing seller to a willing buyer. The valuations were low, all based on different percentage of valuation, much less than a full value and the tax rate correspondingly high.

Must Go Forward.

"The property owners, or the district assessed at the higher percentage of value suffered in comparison with the other assessed at a low percentage. Under this old method, one place was continually robbing the other. The railroads claim that under such conditions if assessed at full value, and they continued to pay at the average rate, they would then be paying more than their fair and just share of the taxes, and there is no doubt that there is a great deal of justice in their contention. Let us be square and honest in our transactions; never mind what the cost.

"Surely Governor Fort, or any other man would not advise going back to this old method. There must be a maximum tax rate whatever the basis of assessed valuation, otherwise there would be no limit for the public officers and municipalities in regard to expenditures.

"All taxes must be levied on property valued as far as possible on a fair, just, equal basis, whether individual, railroad, corporation or others. If the County Tax Board is to be abolished there must be something better substituted, it will not do to go backward. I would go still further than Governor Fort and try and get at the very root of the evil—the local assessor. I would abolish not only the County Board of Taxation, but all local boards and assessors. And to take the place of these increase the powers of the State Board of Assessors, and have all property in the State, real and personal, valued under direction of this board—authorizing the board to appoint as many deputy or local assessors as might be required. All such deputy or local assessors to be appointed under Civil Service rules, after an examination in regard to their qualification. And would pay salaries sufficient to secure honest, competent men, fully qualified for the office.

To Meet the Expense.

"In order to cover the expense each taxing district could be assessed and pay to the State a certain amount in proportion to the assessed valuation of the property in the district.

"The present State Board for Equalization of Taxes could act as the Board of Appeal in case of dispute.

"The duplicate could be sent to the collectors in each taxing district and taxes collected as they are at present, by the local authorities.

In closing the Mayor said:

"Is there any reason why we should continue to drift along under these chaotic conditions simply for the need of proper laws and commonsense business legislature—absolutely none.

"The time has come when party leaders, members of the Legislature and all public officials must look the situation directly in the face and take immediate action to solve these various important questions in the interests and for the welfare of the people and taxpayers of the State. The men that have the courage and ability to do this will not need to build up any machine of their own to bring about their political advancement.

"My friends, to bring about good government it is up to just such associations as these—the Boards of Trade and Civic Societies and individual public spirited citizens, to get together and take an active interest in public affairs.

"Let us all, both men and women, do our best and use what influence we have to bring about in nation, State and city an upright, moral, fair, honest, progressive up to date businesslike and economic government."

Father Bogan's Remarks.

Father B. M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, who is always a welcome guests at these affairs, was given a cordial reception when introduced by the toastmaster. The priest said that he had not had an opportunity to prepare a speech such as the guests were entitled to, but expressed his pleasure in being present and having a chance to say a few words. He spoke of "Opportunities," those which come to everyone during life. Referring to the fact that Mr. Saunders had introduced him as an Irishman, he replied that while he was proud of the distinction he wanted to explain that he was born in the more poetic spot of Market street, Newark. In the opinion of Father Bogan there is no such word as fail, and he said that he hoped all would be blind to his faults. He concluded by saying that he in common with the rest is doing all that he can toward the upbuilding of the highest type of citizenship in Plainfield.

Rev. Mr. Warner Speaks.

"This is no place for a minister's son," was the greeting that Rev. George A. Warner brought to the gathering, but, added the rector, "this is a place for a minister every time. I am glad that I am here with the representative men of Plainfield and know that I am one of you. My text tonight is 'Grit.' It takes grit to speak to a body of men like this. Carlyle once said, 'The basis of virtue is a healthy sense of shame.' It is a case of fear as to what your neighbors may say. For goodness sake don't do anything to displease your neighbors and don't go wrong.

"It takes grit to be a minister. If you don't believe it I will turn my job over to you and let you try to please 500 people. It takes grit to be a merchant in Plainfield. When you see people going to New York to do their shopping it takes grit for you to stay on the job. When you can get just as good goods in Plainfield at the same or lower prices you should patronize home stores."

Mr. Martine Talks.

The speechmaking was concluded by James E. Martine, who aroused the guests to the greatest enuthsiasm by his earnest words of counsel. In introducing Mr. Martine, Mr. Saunders said that there was only one thing he had against the farmer orator and that was that he never voted anything but the Democratic ticket. In reply, Mr. Martine said that he was proud of the fact.

Commenting on the excellent speeches of Mr. Beach and Mr. Hedges, he said that he hoped both would soon cast their lot here in Plainfield which he thought was nearer Heaven than any spot he knew of. He said that he enjoyed such occasions because there was no religious dogma to bother anyone. There was Father Bogan on one side and, added Mr. Martine, I believe it is now "Father" Warner.

In commenting on the remarks of Mr. Hedges as to being mentioned for a nomination, Mr. Martine said that if he would only come over to the Democratic party he would get a nomination, that is as far as anyone gets. In conclusion Mr. Martine said that his aim was to benefit Plainfield all that is possible.

Throughout the evening the guests enjoyed the singing of popular songs led in spirited fashion by City Judge William N. Runyon and accompanied by Charles Suhr's Imperial orchestra, which was a feature.

WASHINGTON IS CUT OUT BY GOVERNORS

The conference of Governors ended yesterday at Washington without further action upon the resolution of Governor Eberhardt, of Minnesota, which provided that Federal courts should not take cognizance of cases against railroads where the State statutes provided a method by which the orders of the State Railroad Commission could be reviewed in State tribunals.

The committee on plan and scope of future conferences submitted a report which was adopted. It provides for annual conferences; that the next meeting shall be held between Thanksgiving and Christmas, 1910; that it shall be held in a State capital and not in Washington; that the committee on arrangements apportion the expenses of the next conference among the States, according to population, so that Governors may recommend to their legislatures the appropriations necessary. Governor Wilson, of Kentucky; Hadley, of Missouri, and Ansel, of South Carolina, were named on this committee.

A proposition by Governor Hughes, of New York, that all Governors elected next fall, but not inducted into office before the conference, be asked to attend was carried.

WIFE SEEKS SEPARATION.

Sues New Idea Leader for Divorce on Desertion Charge.

Mrs. Minnie A. Steffens, of Jersey City, has instituted divorce proceedings, alleging desertion, against Henry A. Steffens, a New Idea Republican, who was a tax commissioner and a fire commissioner under former Mayor Mark M. Fagan. In the bill of complaint Mrs. Steffens says her husband left her on January 15, 1908.

The couple were married on June 13, 1896, by the Rev. P. J. Komers, a minister, in Jersey City. They have one child, Henry B. Steffens, 12 years old.

Mrs. Steffens is a sister of Harry Blauvelt, the one time celebrated bicycle rider and first winner of the twenty-five mile Millburn road race.

Snowball Frightened Horse.

Snowballs thrown by small boys struck a horse belonging to Joseph Manhattan on Somerset street, yesterday. The animal took fright and ran into the yard of Dr. J. P. Zeglio before it was caught. The harness was considerably damaged. Chief Weiss is on the trail of the boys implicated in the act and they will be apprehended and appear in court tomorrow.

SMITHSON'S BEQUEST

Origin of the Famous Smithsonian Institution.

THE CONTROL OF ITS FUNDS.

Uncle Sam's Treasury Holds Its Money, Which Can Be Used Only on Appropriation by Congress—Its Peculiar Relation to the Government.

Although the name of the Smithsonian institution is a common household word in America and millions of persons have visited the great buildings in Washington where are stored the contributions of science which have been gathered under its auspices, few understand the real relation of the institution to the national government. Most persons believe that it is a part of the government.

The Smithsonian institution, says the Washington Times, occupies a peculiar relation to this government. It is a part of it, and yet it is not a part. Its moneys are in the United States treasury and can be used only on appropriation by congress, and yet this money does not belong to the government. It is to the government only as the money of a ward is to a guardian.

James Smithson, who contributed the bulk of the fund in the hands of the institution, was an Englishman, the son of a peer of the realm. He was a man who could trace his ancestry back to royal blood. He never visited in America and was never known to have any particular partiality for America until he wrote his will in 1826. He died at Genoa in 1829, and when they opened his will this is what they read:

"I bequeathed the whole of my property to the United States of America to found at Washington, under the name of the Smithsonian institution, an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

This property amounted to about $500,000, which was in that day a princely fortune. Six years after his death the United States legation at London was informed that there was about $500,000 in the possession of the adjutant general of the British court of chancery awaiting claimant.

Immediately there arose in America all kinds of opposition to the acceptance of the money. John C. Calhoun and William G. Preston urged with all the fire of their eloquence that it was beneath the dignity of this government to accept such a gift. But John Quincy Adams and others prevailed, and Richard Rush was sent to England to prosecute the claim of this government.

He was successful, and on Sept. 1, 1838, the money was delivered at the mint in Philadelphia in the shape of 104,960 gold sovereigns, which were minted into $508,318.46 in American money.

This sum by careful management and by additions from other charitably inclined persons has now become about $1,000,000, which the government keeps and pays interest upon for the maintenance of the institution.

For the first eight years the money lay in the treasury while plans were being formulated for the permanent establishment described by Smithson in his will. Thousands of letters were received, and there were schemes enough proposed to bankrupt several governments. Congressmen debated over this fund repeatedly, and hundreds of pages of the Congressional Globe were given up to it.

The institution has been worked out on such broad lines as to be one of the greatest forces in scientific research in the world.

The board of regents is composed of the vice president of the United States, the chief justice of the United States, three United States senators, three representatives and six citizens of the United States at large.

The National museum, the weather bureau, the zoological park at Washington, the fisheries bureau and the astrophysical observatory have been developed by the institution.

The objects of the institution, as described by its first secretary, Joseph Henry, have been adhered to through the years of its existence. They are to increase knowledge by original investigations and study either in science or literature and to diffuse knowledge not only through the United States, but everywhere, especially by promoting an interchange of thought among those prominent in learning in all nations. No restriction is made in favor of any one branch of knowledge.

The leading features of the plan of Professor Henry were, in his own words:

"To assist men of science in making original researches, to publish them in a series of volumes and to give a copy of them to every first class library in the world."

Books, laboratory accommodations and apparatus have been supplied to thousands of investigators throughout the United States.

Unprincipled Wretch.

"You simply cannot trust anybody!" declared the lady. "My maid, whom I had the utmost confidence in, left me suddenly yesterday and took with her my beautiful pearl brooch."

"That is too bad," sympathizes the friend. "Which one was it?"

"That very pretty one I smuggled through last year."—Life.

Excessive anger against human stupidity is itself one of the most provoking of all forms of stupidity.—Von Radowitz.

UNION CO. CONTRACTING CO.

On motion of Freeholder Gruener received and placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, New Jersey.

Gentlemen—I would appreciate an opportunity to bid upon the macadam repair work in this county during the year, together with what construction work you may contemplate, either in the macadam road line or in the construction of repairing of bridges and culverts.

The work I have done in this county in the past four years demonstrate both my ability and desire to do first-class work, and I have built not only as good but better roads than we have had in this county for some time past.

Yours truly,
JAMES C. PARK.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur received and placed on file.

TELEPHONING TO THE COUNTRY

THE City and the Country are bound together by the telephone line.

For the suburban and country resident, the telephone puts the city's friends and business houses at his call.

City people also find the rural telephone of great advantage. A traveler, from his room in the hotel, talks with the farm folk miles away. Unless they have a telephone he cannot reach them.

The farmer himself may travel far and still talk home over the Long Distance Lines of the Bell System.

Roselle Park to the foot of the hill near the Presbyterian church in Union Township, and Stuyvesant avenue from that point to Morris avenue in Union Township, as a State Aid Road and to have the same graded and improved as such.

We believe that the amount of travel over this road makes it entirely worthy of your consideration and that its improvement as a State Aid Road would prove of great benefit to the people of Union county.

Trusting that this matter may receive careful consideration and favor-action, I am,

Very truly yours,
HOBART L. BENEDICT,
Secretary.

On motion of Freeholder Doane received and referred to the Committee on County Roads.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—he undersigned would respectfully petition your honorable body to grant your petitioner the right and privilege to place underground water pipes in and along Springfield avenue, extending from the Union and Essex county line on the east to the junction of said avenue with Valley street on the west.

Said water pipes are to be used to convey and furnish water for the convenience of the people living along said Springfield avenue, in Union Township, in Union county, and will be laid between the curb on the south side of said avenue and the macadam of the roadway, which macadam will not be disturbed.

Respectfully submitted this fourth day of January, 1910.

A detailed report of the jail account and prison statistics as to the number of prisoners, crimes charged, fines, costs, etc., was submitted by Charles W. Dodd, warden.

On motion of Freeholder Doane received and placed onfile.

Gentlemen—Your committee and myself went over the West Grand street road work of 1908 some time during October and the character of the repairs was decided upon.

I then notified James C. Park, the contractor, what he was to do on or about November 1, 1909.

Nothing was done for six weeks or more and it was not until after the snow fell that Mr. Park reported to me that the work had been done.

I have had no opportunity to examine the work, as it has been covered with snow.

Yours respectfully,
JACOB L. BAUER.

On motion of Freeholder Randolph received and placed on file.

To the Board of Freeholders, Union County.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Drawbridges begs to call the attention of the board to the sunken schooner which has been sunk in the Elizabeth River for a number of years. The board's attention has been called to this matter several times, but no definite action taken. This scow is a menace and should a freshet occur it is likely to carry the vessel down stream, resulting in much damage to the bridges below. Your committee is informed that this board has proper legal authority for doing away with the scow, and we recommend that action be taken here today to have this scow moved without delay. As you will see by the signatures herewith, this report is concurred in by other members of the board besides your committee, making the required six as set forth in the law, authorizing the removal of such obstructions.

Respectfully,
CHARLES J. JENSEN,
THOMAS H. HAVILAND,
E. K. ADAMS,
JACOB MARTIN,
AARON D. CRANE,
JOSEPH PERRY.

On motion of Freeholder Wilbur received and referred to the Elizabeth Drawbridge Committee, with power, if work can be done without expense to the county.

To the Board of Freeholders, Union County.

Gentlemen—As chairman of the Committee on Drawbridges, I beg to report that during the summer of 1909 the Elizabethtown Water Company laid water pipes through the Elizabeth River close to the Summer street bridge. I learned this on one of my visits to the bridge and called the attention of the representative of the water company to the probable damage which might occur to the bridge because of the work under way. I immediately called this to the attention of the water company officials, and at their request wrote to their contractor, Frederick S. Wardwell, asking him to make the necessary repairs for the water company, but after several communications Mr. Wardwell has declined liability to the water company. Under their arrangement and representation made to me during my visit to the bridge, the Elizabethtown Water Company is responsible for the damage to the bulwark and this board should notify them accordingly.

CHARLES J. JENSEN.

Referred to the Elizabeth Drawbridge Committee and County Attorney.

By Committee on Collector's Bond.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

Gentlemen—Your Committee on Collector's Bond report that we have received the bond, which has been executed by County Collector N. R. Leavitt with the following named gentlemen as his sureties, namely, John Kean, Frank H. Smith and John W. Whelan. We consider the same in the proper legal form and that it has been executed with good and proper sureties and we therefore recommend that the same be accepted by the board and filed in the County Clerk's office according to law.

THE REAL QUESTION.

They say some men and dogs and things have found the frozen pole,
And made a record of their trip and put it in a hole;
They say they nailed the Stars and Stripes upon the icy mast,
And took possession of the spot for Uncle Sam at last;
But now that they are back again,
amid the world's applause,
I wonder if they'll tell us, did they meet with Santa Claus?

We like to hear about the route these daring seamen traced,
And all about the bears and other animals they chased;
We listen with enchanted ear to tales
explorers know,
Of Northern Lights and midnight sun
and fields of ice and snow;
But all these things are trifles, and for none of them we care,
Unless some one will tell us that old
Santa Claus is there.

We want to know about his house,
his reindeer and his elves,
And all the toys and Christmas joys
he keeps upon the shelves;
We want to know the things he does
to while the hours away,
When Christmas-time is over, thru the long, dull, Arctic day;
We'd like to hear about his cap and beard all white with snow—
There's just a lot—a lot—of things that we should like to know!

Of course, he must live somewhere,
and the stories always say,
His home is at the very pole, 'neath
Arctic twilight gray;
And I believe it must be true, and that's the reason why
Nobody ever found it in all the days gone by.
But now the secret has been solved,
explorers brave and bold
Have stood beneath the Polar Star and faced the Polar cold,
And so I think we'll write to Cook and Peary, double-quick;
"What news is there from Santa
Claus? How is our good St.
Nick?"

—St. Nicholas.

RULES FOR RIPE OLD AGE.

The amiable philosopher, Wu Ting Fang, has given eight rules to the system of living by which he believes a man might attain to 200 years. These rules nearly all relate to diet, and they provide for a smaller quantity of food daily, abstinence from all flesh food, and the thorough mastification of every mouthful before it is swallowed.

Luisi Carnaro, the Italian gentleman who found himself abandoned by the doctors at 40, lived as long as he liked, or until he was approaching his 100th year, on a diet of the most meagre, subsisting comfortably in his later years on one egg a day.

In Carnaro's time, which extended from about the middle of the fifteenth to the same period of the sixteenth century, dietarians of his kind were rare, but the philosopher Wu Ting Fang is only one of a very large and rapidly increasing number who seek to solve the problem of a long and healthful life through the wisest use of foods.

None Such.

Wife—Will you take me tonight to "What Every Woman Knows?"

Husband—My dear, if you could suggest a play called "What Not a Woman Knows," I would go in a minute.—Harvard Lampoon.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

"A Trip to Japan," "Inside the Earth" and "The Ballet of Jewels," the three big spectacles at the New York Hippodrome continue to attract crowded houses twice a day. A complete circus fills the earlier part of the bill in connection with "A Trip to Japan." In this part of the program also occurs the departure of the giant ocean liner from the dock—a remarkable stage set showing a big steamship pulling away from the pier and followed by an exquisite panorama of New York harbor by moonlight. The Feast of 10,000 Lanterns, which takes place in the Mikado's Garden in connection with the Fete of Giant Chrysanthemums, closes the first part of the show. The glittering "Ballet of Jewels" is the second offering in two beautiful scenes. First is shown a piazetta in Venice on the Grand Canal. A pantomime is begun and carried on to the second scene showing the Iridescent Cave of Gems, with the splendid march and ballet following. The last part of the program, but by no means the least, is the dramatic spectacle "Inside the Earth."

A comedy drama from the ever copious and ever romantic pen of Booth Tarkington, this time done in collaboration with Harry Leon Wilson, a play of stage life as well as for stage life, a kind of modern "Masks and Faces," is "Your Humble Servant," which Otis Skinner—almost the last of the romantics—is appearing in at the Garrick theatre supported by a capable cast of players. The meagerest memory of Mr. Skinner's Philippe Bridau in "The Honor of the Family;" of his Abbe' Daniel in "The Duel," or of his individual work in "The Harvesters," is ample assurance of the easy grace, refinement of diction and authoritative touch that will be characteristic of the actor's equally romantic, cloud-climbing, barn-storming "Lafe" Towers in "Your Humble Servant." Mr. Skinner is personally fond of the character that Booth Tarkington has fashioned for him. What actor of large experience and of many years' service to the stage would not feel the kindliness of an old friend for a character that is autobiographic of every actor who ever ran the gamut from Shakespeare to Shaw? The play is in for an indefinite season at the Garrick theatre.

One of the genuine treats of New York is "The Lottery Man," which enters upon its third month at the Bijou next week. This is the comedy which Alan Dale declared to be "the winner of the season," and it is a singular fact that every New York critic rendered a verdict equally as praiseworthy. The Shuberts, who are presenting this Rida Johnson Young comedy, have made no mistake in selecting Cyril Scott as the star. They are to be complimented also on having surrounded him with a cast of more than ordinary calibre. The main idea is that of a reporter on a New York newspaper offering himself as a prize in a human lottery. Jack Wright, the reporter who offers himself as the prize, has one of the dearest mothers imaginable. Now the mother of the proprietor of the paper which conducts the lottery goes in for face treatment and numerous exercises which she fondly hopes may ward off the approach of old age. She uses cosmetics and wears a wig to hide the gray hairs. The son of this woman at heart wishes that she might become as the others, and how the change is gradually worked out is a most unusual situation for a comedy. The fact that an old maid wins the lucky number which calls for the human prize may give one an idea as to the fun that follows the finish of the lottery scheme.

TROUSSEAU SETS.

Fortunate is the bride who may hope to possess herself of one or more of the wonderfully beautiful trousseau sets which are the climax of lingerie loveliness.

A bridal set of comparative simplicity, but of great attractiveness, has Van Dyke shaped valenciennes motifs from the round yoke of chemise and gown to which the skirt is attached with clustered pin tucks between each V. Van Dykes caught together with ribbon hold the chemise gown over the shoulders. Sleeves of the latter were finished with lace ruffles.

On skirt and drawers ruffles of the Van Dyke points are oddly upturning. Large crescents of cluny lace are the distinguishing features of a set with insertion scalloped edging of the same lace. Between the embroidery and lace of the deep skirt flounce soft ribbon is threaded in odd zig-zag fashion, emerging in the long looked for bow.

For the bride of unlimited means there are extremely handsome sets with trimming of costly Irish crochet and Venise lace. In these we see the quaint "Josephine" gown with square neck opening, drawn with three narrow ribbons. With the hipless figure still the mode "combination" is the watchword of the lingerie designers. Great is the ingenuity they display in the elimination of every superfluous gather or thickness of material.

A marvel of cleverness is the new three-piece combination of skirt, drawers and corset cover. One yoke is made to do the duty for both skirt and drawers and is faultlessly attached to the corset cover without gathers.

The Safe Deposit facilities of this Company are at the disposal of any one desiring to avail themselves of the very modern equipment that has been provided.

Boxes 5½ inches by 2 inches by 24 inches are $5.00 per year; larger ones at proportionately higher rates. May we send our descriptive booklet.

REV. DR. C. L. MEAD DECLINES THE CALL.

Ocean Grove, Jan. 21.—At the close of the Ocean Grove Association's meeting Wednesday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Charles L. Mead, pastor of the First Methodist church, Hoboken, announced that he had declined the call extended him by the First Congregational church, Jersey City. Strong inducements were made Dr. Mead to take the charge offered him, which carried with it a large salary. To accept the call Dr. Mead would have been obliged to sever his relation with the Newark Methodist Conference and also with the Ocean Grove Association, as the members of the latter body must be Methodists only. Dr. Mead has signified his intention of accepting leadership of the Ocean Grove young people's meetings for the month of July the coming summer. The leader of these services during August will be Rev. Dr. William H. Morgan, of Newark.

LOCAL ELKS TAKE THE ODD GAME FROM RAHWAY

Plainfield Elks recorded a triumph over Rahway in the Elks League last night when the locals captured the odd game in clever fashion from the Rahwegians. Plainfield displayed its best form in the first and second contests which they won by scores of 938 to 780 and 880 to 779. In the final game they encountered a streak of hard luck in which thirteen splits fell to the lot of the local boys. In that game Rahway won by a 806 to 792 score. The scores:

RED MEN BOWLERS DOWN THE RARITANS

The Red Men team last evening added another series to its long string of victories when it defeated the strong Raritan team, in the Fraternal Bowing tourney at Johnny Campbell's alleys, and by so doing once more placed themselves in the lead for the championship. With lingering memories of the overwhelming defeat forced upon them last week by the Knights of Columbus, and a resolution to even matters at the expense of the Somerset county boys, they met the visitors with their strongest team and practically quashed Raritan's hope for the championship.

The visitors were all good individual bowlers, but lacked the team work that was necessary for the success of a winning bowling team and were really no match for the carriers of the tomahawk, who got to the wood in great shape and turned in three good games. Louis Skelly, of the Indians, with an average of 215.2 was the big hitter of the evening and the principal factor of bringing the victory to the locals. The scores:

AMATEURS TO PRESENT THE PRIVATE SECRETARY

Embryonic stars are scintillating on the theatrical horizon; the youngsters are at it again, the third time—last for the season. Shakespeare, Materlick, Isen, what? "Not yet but soon." This time it is a staple product in the fun line—The Private Secretary. The coach says that Percy Watson is the real thing as the timorous scholastic—a little stiff in the joints and awkward but a perfect gentleman with a flawless English accent. Ray Hart as Col. Cattermale, with a peppery disposition and a bad liver, is so natural at times; 'tis said his landlady not only plays at being afraid but shrieks in real terror. "Be that as it may," we're inclined to think that the commuters who ride in with Ray on that early train will turn out en masse and give him the glad hand when he walks the theatrical boards.

"June" Roberts and Ike Vail and Skipper Bill Little will likewise open the eyes of their commuter friends. June says the part of a gay young man entering into the fun of a lark proposed by Skipper is a serious effort for a sober minded youth like him, and much better suited to Little, but "watch me and see what hidden depths of light hearted frivolity and mischief I can pump to the surface. Little says, "Huh! I don't have to pump—just give me a show to act natural!"

Miss Michwitz and Miss Hart find it easy to play the care free light hearted parts of teasing adorable youngsters with two so gallant young men to aid them.

Charles Kregar completely sinks a charming personality, so he says, in order to fit the part of a vulgar tailor with aspirations to soar Charlie is long on the amateur line and short on the commuting end, but bets the fellows of the 7:45 crowd will pass some flowers over the footlights after his stunt.

Miss Randall, of theosophical tendencies, dabbling in spiritualistic mediums and a devotee to the mysterious, has many admirers who will be on hand to see her as the proper aunt and much befuddled faddist.

There are others. The cast includes Miss Sinclair, Arthur Woodruff and Russell Vail. Their work will be of the best amateur stuff. "You bet," says Rus; "there's class here."

The play will be presented at the Park Club auditorium on Monday evening, February 7, at 8:15. It is the last of the series of amateur performances given by representatives of the two Bible classes of Holy Cross church. Tickets on sale at Randolph's and the Park Club, also by members of the class. The galleries will be reserved.

Canon Macnab to Preach.

A feature of especial interest at the 11 o'clock service at Grace church on Sunday morning next will be the sermon by the Rev. Alexander Macnab, of Toronto, Canada. Mr. Macnab is resident canon of St. Alban's Cathedral in the city of Toronto, and in that capacity was for many years closely associated with the late Archbishop of Ontario, Dr. Sweatman, who died just a year ago. Canon Macnab is visiting relatives in the city.

Mrs. Susan Case, of Madison avenue, who is ill with bronchitis and pneumonia, is reported today as being slightly improved.

HEAVY ITEM OF EXPENSE

Spring Training Trips of Ball Clubs to Dixie Costs $250,000.

PLAYERS ARE GETTING READY.

In a Few Weeks All the Big League Teams Will Be in Action in the Sunny Climes of the South.

A few weeks hence, more than half a thousand ball players will be packing their grips in preparation for the annual spring training trips to the sunny climes of Dixieland.

Few fans realize the enormous expense attached to these muscle softening excursions preparatory to the opening of the annual pennant fights in the National and American Leagues. It is one of the biggest items of the season and the aggregate outlay of the sixteen clubs in the two major organizations can be safely estimated at about one quarter million dollars, or about $15,000 or thereabouts for each club.

The latter figures do not apply to the impending trip of the Chicago White Sox, as that club instead of going south iths year, will make a trip across the continent to Los Angeles, Cal., which according to its owner, Charles Comiskey, will entail an expense of close to the $25,000 mark. Of course in planning for this long junket, the "Old Roman" figured in making up some of the expenditures by playing exhibitions in the large cities on the coast, and on the journey east. The trip of the White Sox will be the longest journey made by a ball club for training purposes in three years, or since the New York Giants made their memorable trip to the Pacific Coast.

While the White Sox will make the longest trip, the Washington club will make the shortest railroad journey of any of the major league clubs, as Manager Jimmy McAleer has decided to have his band of athletes condition themselves at Norfolk, Va., a distance of about 160 miles from the National Capitol.

Marlin Springs, Texas, will be the destination of the New York Giants, while Athens, Georgia, will be the postoffice address of the Highlanders instead of Macon, which was their training headquarters last spring; Hot Springs, Arkansas, will be the headquarters of four clubs, the Boston Red Sox, the Cincinnati Reds, the Brooklyns and the Pittsburg World's Champions; the Philadelphia Nationals will journey to Southern Pines, N. C., and the Philadelphia Athletics and Boston Nationals will establish their camp at Atlanta, Georgia; New Orleans will be the home of the Chicago Cubs; Cleveland has selected a far southern point in Alexandria; the St. Louis Nationals will pitch their training tents in Little Rock, Arkansas, while the American representatives from the Mound City will establish themselves at Houston, Texas.

In addition to the regular players who make the trips all of the clubs are equipped with first class trainers and a retinue of rubbers. The athletes while in the preliminary stage of the season are afforded all of the comforts of life in traveling and in hotel life. The clubowners attempt to spare no expense in this direction and only the highest priced hosterlies are good enough for the bands of pennant aspirants to stop at.

FIFTEEN BASEBALL GAMES SCHEDULED

Manager Runyon, of the P. H. S. baseball team, announced today that the schedule for next season would be published within two weeks. He already has fifteen games booked, among which are three with New York and Brook High Schools. Games have been arranged with several new teams and one is pending with the Eastern High School, which is rated as being a strong one in baseball.

The local boys have not yet secured a diamond, but it is hoped that the first game will be played on the new Parker field. Captain VanZandt will begin practice the middle of February in the gymnasium. There is plenty of good material in the school this year as the places left vacant by the graduating class have been filled by new comers, who look good.

RED CROSS STAMPS NETTED THEM $237.64.

The Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield announce receipts of $309.02 from the sale of Red Cross stamps here, thirty per cent. of which goes to the national society, allowing $216.31 for the local society, which with a donation of $21.33, makes a total of $237.64 for the local league.

The society wishes to thank all storekeepers, banks, educators, the postmaster and all individuals who helped in the sale of these stamps during the holiday season. The tuberculosis work here is progressing favorably.

SCRIBE ON A BEAR HUNT

Thomas M. Muir Takes Part in the Sport in Canadian Woods.

TO BRING HOME THE PROOF.

"Tommie" Says He Will Return With One of the Captured Cubs to Prove Story is No Fake.

A thrilling story of a double bear capture in the Canadian woods; twenty miles from Woodstock, Ontario, in which Thomas M. Muir, a former members of The Daily Press' reportorial staff, was one of the captors, reached this office this morning. The tale is narrated by Mr. Muir in a letter to a friend in this city.

The incident happened one day last week. Mr. Muir, in company with his cousin, William Muir, and two friends, hearing that bears had been seen in the woods twenty miles from the Muir farm, started out on a hunting expedition to capture the game.

The journey was made in a farm sled and when the edge of the woods was reached Tommy was given a shotgun to protect himself and the horses, while the other three members of the party entered the woods. After traveling three or four miles in the forest traces of bears were discovered.

A cave was sighted and it was only after a little bit of manouvering that the three hunters were made sure that it was the hiding place of the animals. A fire was built and in less than one hour the mother bear was "smoked out." The latter, after getting a few whiffs of fresh air displayed signs of fighting, but its battling spirit was quieted by a couple of bullets.

After this capture a scout of the party returned for Tommy and a few minutes after he appeared on the scene another bear made its appearance at the mouth of the cave. It required five bullets to stifle the growls of this bear.

With two dead bears on hand the party continued their hunt at the mouth of the cave and in a short time three cubs, about the size of small puppies, were easily captured. The cubs and two dead bear were taken to the farm. Tommy closed his narrative by stating that he expected to return to this city in about a month with one of the cubs as proof of his adventure.

According to Mr. Muir the sight of his left eye is getting better every day. In another month he expects to be able to operate a typewriter.

OPPOSE THE CLOSING OF GARWOOD STREETS.

From present indications the trouble between H. C. Lockwood and the New York Suburban Land Company interests at Garwood is to be adjusted outside the Garwood Borough Council. The land company has asked the Council to vacate every street to the south of the town, which, if done, will shut out the Lockwood property from entrance into Garwood. The Lockwood interests have engaged counsel to prevent such proceedings upon the part of the Town Council.

At a recent meeting of the Council Lawyer P. Q. Oliver, of Westfield, who represents the Lockwood interests, stated that Mr. Lockwood would open his streets to conform to the streets of the laid company ,if an agreement could be reached with E. R. Holden, of the land company. It is now understood that the land company has sold all of its lots in the streets, and is willing to allow the avenues to be opened to the former Ripley farm.

Dutch Arms Will Elect.

The annual election of the Dutch Arms, men's association, will be held at Trinity Reformed church, tonight. There will also be an address by Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick.

THE GUEST OF QUESNAY

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1908, by the McClure Company
Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Ridgway Company

At her request I inspected her work. I stepped back several yards to see it better, though I should have had to retire about a quarter of the length of a city block to see it quite from her own point of view.

She moved with me, both of us walking backward. I began:

"For a day like this, with all the color in the trees themselves and so very little in the air"—

There came an interruption, a voice of unpleasant and wiry nasality, speaking from behind us.

"Well, well!" it said. "So here we are again!"

I faced about and beheld, just emerged from a bypath, a fox faced young man whose light, well poised figure was jauntily clad in gray serge, with scarlet waistcoat and tie, white shoes upon his feet and a white hat gayly beribboned upon his head. A recollection of the dusky road and a group of people, about Pere Baudry's lamplit door flickered across my mind.

"The historical tourist!" I exclaimed. "The highly pedestrian tripper from Trouville!"

"You got me right, m'dear friend," he replied with condescension, "I rec'leck meetin' you perfect."

"And I was interested to learn," said I, carefully observing the effect of my words upon him, "that you had been to Les Trois Pigeons, after all. Perhaps I might put it, you had been through Les Trois Pigeons, for the maitre d'hotel informed me you had investigated every corner—that wasn't locked."

"Sure," he returned, with rather less embarrassment than a brazen Vishnu would have exhibited under the same circumstances. "He showed me what pitchers they was in your studio. I'll luk 'em over again fer ye one of these days. Some of 'em was right gud."

"You will be visiting near enough for me to avail myself of the opportunity?"

"Right in the Pigeon house, my friend. I've just come down t'put in a few days there," he responded coolly. "They's a young feller in this neighborhood I take a kind o' fam'ly interest in."

"Who is that?" I asked quickly.

For answer he produced the effect of a laugh by widening and lifting one side of his mouth, leaving the other meantime rigid.

"Don' lemme int'rup' the conv'sation with yer lady friend," he said winningly. "What they call 'talkin' high arts,' wasn't it? I'd like to hear some."

CHAPTER IX.

MISS ELLIOTT'S expression, when I turned to observe the effect of the intruder upon her, was found to be one of brilliant delight. With glowing eyes, her lips parted in a breathless ecstasy, she gazed upon the newcomer, evidently fearing to lose a syllable that fell from his lips. Moving closer to me, she whispered urgently:

"Keep him—oh, keep him!"

To detain him, for a time at least, was my intention, though my motive was not merely to afford her pleasure. The advent of the young man had produced a singularly disagreeable impression upon me, quite apart from any antagonism I might have felt toward him as a type. Strange suspicions leaped into my mind, formless—in the surprise of the moment—but rapidly groping toward definite outline, and following hard upon them crept a tingling apprehension.

"Now, about how much," he asked slowly, "would you expec' t' git f'r a pitcher that size?"

"It isn't mine," I informed him.

"You don't tell me it's the little lady's—what?" He bowed genially and favored Miss Elliott with a stare of warm admiration. "P'retty a thing as I ever see," he added.

"The name you'd see on 'em is Oil Policy."

"Oh," she cried, with an ardor that choked her slightly, "thank you!"

"Oh, I meant the pitcher!" he said hastily, evidently nonplused by a gratitude so fervent.

The incorrigible damsel cast down her eyes in modesty. "And I had hoped," she breathed, "something so different!"

I could not be certain whether or not he caught the whisper. I thought he did. At all events, the surface of his easy assurance appeared somewhat disarranged, and perhaps to restore it by performing the rites of etiquette he said:

"Well, I expec' the smart thing now is to pass the cards, but mine's in my grip, an' it ain't unpacked yet. The name you'd see on 'em is Oil Policy."

"Oil Policy," echoed Miss Elliott, turning to me in genuine astonishment.

"Mr. Earl Percy," I translated.

"Oh rapturous!" she cried, her face radiant. "And won't Mr. Percy give us his opinion of my art?"

He turned again to the easel, and as he examined the painting thereon at closer range amazement overspread his features. However, pulling himself together, he found himself able to reply and with great gallantry:

"Well, on'y t' think them little hands cud 'a' done all that rough work!"

I saved the girl's feelings by entering into the conversation with a question, which I put quickly:

"You intend pursuing your historical researches in the neighborhood?"

"Them fairy tales I handed you about ole Jeanne d'Arc an' William the Conker," he said, "say, they must 'a' made you sore afterwards!"

"On the contrary, I was much interested in everything pertaining to your too brief visit," I returned. "I am even more so now."

"Well, m' friend"—he shot me a sidelong, distrustful glance—"keep yer eyes open."

"That is just the point," I laughed, with intentional significance, for I meant to make Mr. Percy talk as much as I could. To this end, remembering that specimens of this kind are most indiscreet when carefully enraged, I added, stimulating his own manner:

"Eyes open and doors locked! What?"

"I guess they ain't much need o' lockin' your door," he retorted darkly; "not from what I saw when I was in your studio." He should have stopped there, for the hit was palpable and justified, but in his resentment he overdid it. "You needn't be scared of anybody's cartin' off them pitchers, young feller! Whoosh! An' f'm the luks of the clo'es I saw hangin' on the wall," he continued, growing more nettled as I smiled cheerfully upon him, "I don' believe you gut any worries comin' about them neither."

"I suppose our tastes are different," I said, letting my smile broaden. "There might be protection in that."

His stare at me was protracted to an unseemly length before the sting of this remark reached him. It penetrated finally, however.

"As I tell the little dame here," he said, pitching his voice higher and affecting the plaintiff, "I make no passes at a friend o' hers—not in front o' her, anyways. But when it comes to these here ole, ancient curiosities"—he cackled again loudly—"well, I guess them clo'es I see that day kin hand it out t' anything they got in the museums. 'Look here,' I says to the waiter, 'these must be'n left over f'm ole Jeanne d'Arc herself,' I says. 'Talk about yer relics,' I says. Woosh! I' like t' died!" He laughed violently and concluded by turning upon me with a contemptuous flourish of his stick. "You think I d'know what makes you so raw?"

The form of repartee necessary to augment his ill humor was, of course, a matter of simple mechanism for one who had not entirely forgotten his student days in the quarter, and I delivered it airily, though I shivered inwardly that Miss Elliott should hear.

"Everything will be all right if when you dine at the inn you'll sit with your back toward me."

To my shamed surprise this roustabout wit drew a nervous, silvery giggle from her, and that completed the work with Mr. Percy, whose face grew scarlet with anger.

"You're a hot one, you are!" he sneered, with shocking bitterness. "You're quite the teaser, ain't ye, s'long's yer lady friend is lukkin' on! I guess they'll be a few surprises comin' your way before long. P'raps I cudn't give ye one now 'f I had a mind to."

"Pshaw!" I laughed and, venturing at hazard, said, "I know all you know."

"Oh, you do!" he cried scornfully. "I reckon you might set up an' take a little notice, though, if you knowed 'at I know all you know!"

"Not a bit of it!"

"No? Maybe you think I don't know what makes you so raw with me; maybe you think I don't know who ye've got so thick with at this here Pigeon house; maybe you think I don't know who them people are!"

"No, you don't. You have learned," I said, trying to control my excitement, "nothing. Whoever hired you for a spy lost the money. You don't know anything."

"I don't!" And with that his voice went to a half shriek. "Maybe you think I'm down here f'r my health; maybe you think I come out f'r a pleasant walk in the woods right now; maybe you think I ain't seen no other lady friend o' yours besides this'n today, and maybe I didn't see who was with her—yes, an' maybe you think I d'know no other times he's be'n with her; maybe you think I ain't be'n layin' low over at Dives; maybe I don't know a few real names in this neighborhood! Oh, no, maybe not!"

"You know what the maitre d'hotel told you, nothing more."

"How about the name—Oliver Saffren?" he cried fiercely, and at that, though I had expected it, I uttered an involuntary exclamation.

"How about it?" he shouted, advancing toward me triumphantly, shaking his forefinger in my face. "Hey? That stings some, does it? Sounds kind o' like a false name, does it? Got ye where the hair is short that time, didn't I? Your side's where the trouble is. That's what's eatin' into you. An' I tell you flatfoot you're gittin' rough 'ith me and playin Charley the Show-off in front o' yer lady friends 'll all go down in the bill. These people ye've got so chummy with—they'll pay f'r it all right, don't you shed no tears over that!"

"You couldn't by any possibility," I said deliberately, with as much satire as I could command—"you couldn't possibly mean that any sum of mere money might be a salve for the injuries my unkind words have inflicted."

He seemed upon the point of destroying me physically, but, with a slight shudder, controlled himself. Stepping close to me, he thrust his head forward and measured the emphasis of his speech by his right forefinger upon my shoulder as he said:

"You paint this in yer pitchers, m'dear friend—they's jest as much law in this country as they is on the corner o' Twenty-thord street an' Fif' avenoo! You keep out of the way of it or you'll git runned over!"

Delivering a final tap on my shoulder as a last warning he wheeled deftly upon his heel, addressed Miss Elliott briefly, "Glad t' know you, lady," and, striking into the bypath by which he had approached us, was soon lost to sight.

The girl faced me excitedly. "What is it?" she cried. "It seemed to me you insulted him deliberately."

"I did."

"You wanted to make him angry?"

"Yes."

"Oh, I thought so!" she exclaimed breathlessly. "I knew there was something serious underneath. It's about Mr. Saffren."

"It is serious indeed, I fear," I said and, turning to my own easel, began to get my traps together.

"I want you to go to see Mrs. Harman at once and tell her not to leave Quesnay for at least two days. As for myself, I must go now to look up Keredec and Oliver Saffren."

The girl started painfully upon her journey. I stared after her for a moment or more, watching the pretty brown dress flashing in and out of shadow among the ragged greeneries. Then I picked up my own pack and set out for the inn.

As I went through the woods that day, breathless with haste and curious fears, my brain became suddenly, unaccountably busy with a dream I had had two nights before. I had not recalled this dream on waking; the recollection of it came to me now for the first time. Yet I had been thinking so constantly of Mrs. Harman that there was nothing extraordinary in her worthless ex-husband being part of it. But, and yet, looking back upon that last, hurried walk of mine through the forest, I see how strange it was that I could not quit remembering how in my dream I had gone motoring up Mount Pilatus with the man I had seen so pitiably demolished on the Versailles road two years before—Larrabee Harman.

CHAPTER X.

KEREDEC was alone in his salon, extended at ease upon a long chair, an ottoman and a stool, when I burst in upon him. A portentous volume was in his lap and a prolific pipe, smoking up from his great cloud of beard, gave the final reality to the likeness he thus presented of a range of hills ending in a volcano.

"I feel that you know me at least well enough," I began rather hesitatingly, "to be sure that I would not, for the world, make any effort to intrude in your affairs or Mr. Saffren's."

"You are our friend. We know it," he answered.

"Very well," I pursued; "then I speak with no fear of offending. When you first came to the inn I couldn't help seeing that you took a great many precautions for secrecy, and when you afterward explained these precautions to me—well, I could not help seeing that your explanation did not cover all the ground."

"It is true—it did not." He ran his huge hand through the heavy white waves of his hair and shook his head vigorously. "No; I knew it, my dear sir. This much I can say to you: We came here at a risk, but I thought that with great care it might be made little."

"It was in connection with the risk you have mentioned that I came to talk," I returned, with some emphasis, for I was convinced of the reality of Mr. Earl Percy. "I think it necessary that you should know"—

But the professor was launched. I might as well have swept the rising tide with a broom. He talked with magnificent vehemence for twenty minutes, his theme being some theory of his own that the individuality of a soul is immortal and that even in perfection the soul cannot possibly merge into any Nirvana.

"And so it is with my boy," he proclaimed, coming at last to the case in hand. "The spirit of him, the real Oliver Saffren, that has never change! The outside of him, those thing that belong to him, like his memory, they have change, but not himself, for himself is eternal and unchangeable. I have taught him, yes. I have helped him get the small things we can add to our possession—a little knowledge, maybe, a little power of judgment. But, my dear sir, I tell you that such things are only possessions of a man. They are not the man! So with Oliver. He had lived a little while, twenty-six years perhaps, when—pff!—like that, he became almost as a baby again. He could remember how to talk, but not much more. He had lost his belongings. They were gone from the lobe of the brain where he had store them, but he was not gone. No part of the real himself was lacking. Then presently they send him to me to make new his belongings, to restore his possessions. Ha, what a task—to take him with nothing in the world of his own and see that he get only good possessions, good knowledge, good experience! I took him to the mountains of the Tyrol two years, and there his body became strong and splendid while his brain was taking in the stores. It was quick, for his brain had retained some habits. It was not a baby's brain, and some small part of its old stores had not been lost. But if anything useless or bad remain we empty it out—I and those mountains with their pure air. Now, I say he is all good and the work was good. I am proud! But I wish to restore all that was good in his life. Your Keredec is something of a poet. You may put it much the old fool! And for that greatest restoration of all I have brought my boy back to France."

A half light had broken upon me as he talked, pacing the floor, thundering his paean of triumph. Only one explanation, incredible, but possible, sufficed. Anything was possible, I thought, with this dreamer.

"By the wildest chance," I gasped, "you don't mean that you wanted him to fall in love"—

"Ha, my dear sir," he laughed, "you have said it! But you knew it. You told him to come to me and tell me."

"But I mean that you—that you had selected the lady whom you know as Mme. d'Armand."

"Again," he shouted, "you have said it!"

"Professor Keredec," I returned, with asperity, "I have no idea how you came to conceive such a preposterous scheme, but I agree heartily that the word for it is madness. In the first place, I must tell you that her name is not even d'Armand."

"My dear sir, I know. It was the mistake of that absurd Amadee. She is Mrs. Harman."

"You knew it?" I cried, hopelessly confused. "But Oliver still speaks of her as Mme d'Armand."

"He does not know. She has not told him."

"In the meantime," I said sharply, "there is a keen faced young man who took a room in the inn the morning and who has come to spy upon you, I believe."

"What is it you say?"

He came to a sudden stop.

I had not meant to deliver my information quite so abruptly, but there was no help for it now, and I repeated the statement, giving him a terse account of my two encounters with the rattish youth and adding:

"He seemed to be certain that 'Oliver Saffren' is an assumed name, and he made a threatening reference to the laws of France."

The effect upon Keredec was a very distinct pallor.

"Do you think he came back to the inn? Is he here now?"

"I do not know."

"We must learn. I must know that at once!" And he went to the door.

"Let me go instead," I suggested.

I stepped out to the gallery, to discover Mme. Brossard emerging from a door on the opposite side of the courtyard.

"Mme. Brossard," said the professor, "you have a new client today."

"That monsieur who arrived this morning," I suggested.

"He was an American," said the hostess, knitting her dark brows, "but I do not think that he was exactly a monsieur."

"Is he at the inn now?"

"No, monsieur, but two friends for whom he engaged apartments have just arrived."

"Who are they?" asked Keredec quickly.

"It is a lady and a monsieur from Paris, but not married. They have taken separate apartments, and she has a domestic with her—a negress, Algerian."

"What are their names?"

"It is not ten minutes that they are installed. They have not given me their names."

"What is she?" demanded Keredec impatiently. "Is she blond? Is she brunette? Is she French, English, Spanish?"

"There is a keen faced young man who has come to spy on you."

RELIEVED HER MIND.

Mr. Terry Upheld His Better Half In the Umbrella Matter.

"Mercy me!" said Mrs. Terry. "Your father's left his umbrella! Here, Willie, run quick and catch him before his car comes!" She thrust an elegant gold handled umbrella into Willie's hands, and he raced out after his father, arriving at the car track barely in time to see his ponderous figure swing itself up the steps. And the car moved on.

As Willie stood there a man approached.

"What's the matter, son?" he inquired. Willie elucidated.

"Well," said the man, "that's easy. I'm going downtown on the next car, and I'll take it to him."

When Willie returned without the umbrella his mother rejoiced.

"You caught him, did you?" she smiled. Willie shook his head.

"But I did the next best thing, mother," he said. "I gave it to a man who was going downtown to give it to him." Mrs. Terry stared at him.

"Who was the man?" she asked. Willie looked foolish.

"I don't know," he said at last. "But he looked honest."

"That umbrella cost $12," said Mrs. Terry sternly. "Come here to me." And shortly thereafter people passing wondered who was being slain.

That evening Mr. Terry returned bearing the umbrella. Mrs. Terry gazed at it, fascinated.

"Where did you get it?" she asked.

"Why," said Mr. Terry, "our neighbor Mr. Wilkins brought it to me—said you sent it."

"And to think," said Mrs. Terry, "I whipped Willie for giving it to a strange man."

"Well," said Mr. Terry judicially, "I don't think it will hurt him. True, he gave it to the right man, but he didn't know that."

"That's right," said Mrs. Terry with relief.—Galveston News.

FLYING ANIMALS.

The Bodies of All of Them Are Comparatively Small.

When you increase greatly the size and the weight of any moving body, whether it be traveling on the ground, floating through the air or swimming under the water, you alter in a most serious way the proportionate effect on the moving body of what is called "friction."

It is a noteworthy fact that there are no large flying animals—large, that is to say, as animals go. It is true that there is a great range in the size of flying animals, from the minutest flies up to the condor vulture and the albatross. But the bodies of those birds are small, not larger than that of an ordinary dog, and the stretch of the wings is only about ten feet, while their weight in proportion to size is reduced by great internal air sacs, which extend even into the bones.

Even when we examine the records of "extinct monsters," among which are some huge creatures as big in body as the biggest elephants of today and longer by reason of their great lizard-like tails, we find no instances of very big flying creatures. The extinct group of the flying reptiles—called pterodactyles because the wing was supported by an enormously elongated finger—are mostly small creatures, not bigger than eagles and usually of less size. The largest known had an expanse of wing giving eighteen feet from the tip of one wing to the tip of the other, but its body was a little thing, not bigger than that of a swan. This is the largest pair of wings known, and we must remember that in these larger pterodactyles and birds the bones are thin walled, hollow cylinders filled with air, so that these creatures are not only small, but have a small specific gravity.—Sir Ray Lankester in London Telegraph.

The Kat Plant.

In parts of Abyssinia and Yemen the natives use a plant called kat (Catha edulis), the effects of which are similar to those of the Peruvian coca. The freshly cut leaves have a rather pleasant taste and produce a kind of intoxication of long duration, with none of the disagreeable features of ordinary inebriety. Messengers and soldiers are enabled by chewing the leaves to go without food for a number of days. Among those who abuse the habit the body tends to dry, the visage becomes emaciated, and nervous trouble follows, the most usual being a trembling of the limbs, but these cases are rare. At times a too copious absorption of kat produces a state of drunkenness, particularly when the large leaves are employed.—New York Post.

The Kind of Critter He Was.

It was at the Cliff Dwellers, Chicago's literary club, and one of the members had just made a terrible, irremediable break about another—made it in his presence and that of several other members.

"What ought I to do now?" asked the breakmaker, much embarrassed.

"If I were you," suggested Fred Richardson, the artist, who had heard the whole proceeding, "I should go out and wiggle my ears and eat another thistle."—Success Magazine.

The Humorous Nature.

"Haw, haw! I see that old Jones has been swindled out of £200."

"Anything funny about that?"

"Why, yes! Jones is an old friend of mine."—London Scraps.

Imperfect.

This is the Square Pot of the BOYNTON FURNACE that saves fuel and dollars and will heat the whole of a house. In every great engine and under every big boiler you'll find a square fire box. Ever noticed it? Well—we have adapted that principle to our furnaces. A square pot gives a clean, hot, clinkerless fire without waste of fuel. It requires the least attention and responds instantly. BOYNTON furnaces only have square fire-pots. It is our patent. There are other improvements. A square ash pit that improves the draft and makes removal of ashes easier. A pure air supply—for health's sake. A dust flue that saves the rooms above.

FAMOUS BEAUTIES NEVER GET FAT

Womankind wonders why famous beauties grow old, but do not grow fat. They live at silken ease, amid the porcelain flesh pots. The wine that puffs out obscure mortals, flows not illberally down their alabaster throats. Yet their lifelong loaf does not thicken their limbs nor double their chins. What is the secret of the long-lived gracefulness of the hautton?

One-half ounce Marmola, ½ oz. Fl. Ex. Cascara Aromatic, 3½ oz. Peppermint Water. This is the famous Marmola Prescription, long familiar to the fashionable pharmacists of the world and their clientele, but which has only recently penetrated to the knowledge of the hoi polloi of womankind. Since when, for convenience sake, it has been put into elegant pocket form, the Marmola Prescription Tablet, which can now be had of well nigh any druggist, fashionable and ordinary, or the Marmola Co., 988 Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich., in large cases for seventy-five cents.

With this tablet any woman can reduce, be losing a pound a day, in a few weeks, take off fat (where it shows most) on chin, abdomen, hips, etc., without need for exercising, table restraint, fear of wrinkles, or the slightest physical harm or uneasiness.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 23, 1910.

Topic.—Does religion pay?—I Cor. iii. 18-22. Comment by Rev. Sherman M. Doyle, D. D.

Does religion pay? This is a most practical question. It is also very important. Men are interested in what pays. Speak of anything almost and the first question asked will be, "Will it pay?" A millionaire was once asked to make a subscription to foreign missions. He wanted to know how much was spent on missions in a year and how many converts were made. Figuring out the cost of each convert, he asked, "Does it pay to convert the heathen at so much per head?" It was a heartless, cruel, cold blooded way of looking at the value of an immortal soul, and it need scarcely be added that the man who would estimate the soul's value in dollars and cents did not think it paid and therefore made no subscription to the mission fund. Opposed to such a conception we cannot but quote the words of Christ, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" I recently visited Christian parents who had just lost a son of remarkable talents and most loving disposition. They were naturally grief stricken, but in the course of the conversation the bereaved father said, "All the millions of the world could not comfort me today as my religion does." In these two illustrations we have summed up the opinions of men concerning the paying qualities of religion. The man who estimates the value of religion on a money basis is a fool and does not know what religion is. The man who has it and can apply it to his heart amid the trials and bereavements of life is the only man who can place a true estimate upon its value, and to him it is priceless and invaluable.

There are those who in deciding their attitude toward religion sit down and ask: Will it pay? Will it pay in business? Will it advance me socially? Will it lead to prominence? If they conclude that it will be of temporal advantage they profess religion, but do not possess it. If they see no temporal advantage in it they reject it. They consider themselves wise and clever men, but such "wisdom of this world is foolishness with God." But to the man "hungering and thirsting after righteousness," whose "soul longs for God" and whose heart craves peace with God through Jesus Christ and who obtains these spiritual blessings, religion is his most valuable possession. Pay? It pays better than any other investment he has ever made. It may cost a heavy price—self sacrifice, the impossibility of dishonestly attaining great wealth, the loss of earthly hopes and glories—yet it gives back infinitely greater joys and hopes and glories than it cost, for, reconciled to God in Christ, "all things are his," whether "the world or life or death or things present or things to come; all are his and he is Christ's and Christ is God's." "God," said Jane of Austria, "does not pay every Saturday night, but He pays." In spiritual joy, in comfort, in boundless hopes and assurances for time and eternity, religion gives to us the most priceless possessions possible in this life.

BIBLE READING.

Christian Endeavor Thoughts.

How vast a part of what is worst in modern society is due to lack of moral courage.

Where true love is kindled every faculty brightens.

Religion is to put heart and courage into us, both to work and to pray.

It's no use trying to irrigate a desert with tears.

Some piety aspires so much it cannot perspire.

The faith that can be hidden never stays healthy.

If you are a saint you will want to be something.

Habitual regret simply puts the headlight on the tail end.

The only way to keep faith sweet is to keep it in service.

They who go out to hit the high places land on the dump.

It's wise to be afraid of the spirituality that fears morality.

A Christian Endeavor Postal.

The following striking postal card was sent with a call to reorganize the Friends' Christian Endeavor society at Greensboro, N. C. It is safe to say that the invitation was read by all who received it. Consecrated ingenuity is a big asset in making a society "go."

Cordially invited to be with us in a Christian Endeavor rally to be held in the Friends' Meeting House

The New Forward Movement.

"Christian Endeavor, 1911," is the watchword all along the line. It means 10,000 new societies and 1,000,000 new members before the next international convention at Atlantic City in 1911. Massachusetts, New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Nebraska and California have already accepted their apportionment and are organizing for the campaign. In a few weeks practically every state will be in line. The idea has also spread to foreign lands, and a message from Japan reports the campaign as started there

N.P.H.S. IS VICTORIOUS

Borough School's Basketball Team Downs P. H. S. in Sensational Contest.

"RUSS" CONROY IS THE STAR.

Plainfield Athletes Rally in Final Half But N. P. H. S.'s Lead is to Big to Overcome.

Russ Conroy, the doughty little warrior of North Plainfield High's basketball team, loomed up as big as the Flatiron building to all N. P. H. S. students and rooters, who witnessed their team vanquish Plainfield High in a sensational Interscholastic League contest on the Y. M. C. A. court yesterday, in which the score was 25 to 18. It was conroy all the way, first and last, and it was due to his brilliant work that the borough schoolboys emerged triumphant.

The victory places N. P. H. S. in line to battle for the championship with Plainfield, as it now appears that the title hinges between these schools. Leals, the other contender, is not regarded seriously.

That a big amount of interest centered in the result of the game was apparent by the large crowd which watched the athletes battle for glory. The gallery was jammed to its fullest capacity by adherents of both teams. Not only where the boys out, but the girls were there too in scores, and they did a big share of the cheering for their respective teams.

The game was featured with an abundance of "rough house" tactics and numerous fouls resulted on both sides. So fierce was the play that the ranks of both teams suffered by losses of men.

Lidgate, the N. P. H. S star, injured his leg in the first half, but after a short delay he re-entered the fray. Between halves, however, he was taken ill, which necessitated his permanent retirement from the game. In the second half N. P. H. S. lost the services of Becker, who hurt his knee.

North Plainfield gained a big advantage by secureing a lead of 16 to 1 in the first half. The city athletes appeared a trifle nervous and the sensational work of Conroy baffled them all the more. The boroughites played a steady game and excelled in team work by a big margin. When Conroy shot the first goal after ten minutes of play there was a big outburst of enthusiasm by the N. P. H. S. contingent. P. H. S. scored its single point on a foul toward the end of the half.

Plainfield displayed a wonderful reversal of form and forced matters all the way until the whistle blew. Doane starred in this session, his fast work appearing to hypnotize the boroughites, who became demoralized and played in a reckless manner. The city athletes outclassed their opponents but the lead gained by them in the first half was too big to overcome. In this session Plainfield scored 17 points to N. P. H. S.'s 9. The lineup:

P. H. S.: Forwards—Clarke, Lidgate, Woodhull, Manley, Vail, Morris.

Centre—Morris, Lidgate.

Guards—Doane, Overton.

N. P. H. S.: Forwards—Stine, Conroy.

Center—C. Smith.

Guards—Dunning, H. Smith, Becker, Taylor, Conroy.

Goals from field—Stine, 3; Conroy, 3; C. Smith, 1; Dunning, 2; Lidgate, 2; Morris, 2; Overton, 2; Manley, 1. Goals on fouls—Conroy, 7; Doane, 3; Lidgate, 1.

Referee, Charles Line; umpire, Mr. Woodland; timekeepers, Paul Collier, P. Bailey; scorekeeper, E. G. Smith; time of halves—20 minutes.

HERE'S A NATURE STORY VIA HEDDEN'S WIRELESS

Frank Hedden's nature story bureau reports a gruelling battle between a goss hawk and an eagle which took place near Warrenville on Thursday during the storm. The birds were apparently angered by hunger when they clashed near the farm of Peter Wyckoff. The eagle instigated the war proceedings by attacking the hawk and a furious battle raged for two hours.

The eagle forced matters in the early part of the battle but as the fight continued the hawk gained in strength and finally pecked the eagle so much in the eyes that the "monarch of the mountains" gave up the fight and fell to the ground in a sightless condition.

Wyckoff then took a hand in the proceedings. He ended the fracas by putting the eagle out of misery and fifteen minutes later shooting the goss hawk. The latter bird is the largest of its specie captured in the vicinity of Warrenville in some years. Mr. Wyckoff will have both birds mounted.

OFFICERS INSTALLED AT COLUMBIA LODGE

Past Grand Master Workman V. W. Nash, Sr., of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., assisted by Past Master Workman Theodore Mason, of Central Lodge, as grand guide and Past Master Workman Edward Mosher, of Central Lodge, as past grand master workman, installed these officers of Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., last night:

Past Master Workman, J. W. A. Bauersachs; master workman, Joseph F. Sheppard; foreman, Norman D. Loughlin; recorder, Robert H. Loughlin; financier, Frank Putnam; receiver, Henry Leifke; guide, John Calder; inside watchman, Stephen Schleif; outside watchman, Michael Koller.

Interesting remarks were made by the installing and other officers, and a social time followed. There was progressive euchre and music by Theodore Mason. There was a large attendance in spite of the storm.

COURT PLAINFIELD'S FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Saengerbund Hall was filled to its capacity last night at the annual entertainment and dance of Court Plainfield, No. 1,144, Indepedent Order of Foresters. The star attraction in the entertainment line was the performance of a New York minstrel company which presented a program which bristled with fun and mirth.

Following the entertainment the hall was cleared for dancing and this feature of the celebration afforded pleasure for the guests until an early hour.

The committee of arrangements was Edward J. McCue, Louis J. Feiring, Henry Hansen, John R. Cline, James Patterson, Thomas Monsell, Joseph E. Kelley, M. O'Keefe, Charles J. McCarthy, Frederick Breem, Frank J. Winzenried and Patrick Harrington.

The floor manager was L. J. Feiring and his assistants were M. O'Keefe, Fred Breem, Thomas Monsell and Charles J. McCarthy.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED FOR M'INTYRE CONCERT.

The concert of old favorite songs arranged by Joseph McIntyre for Thursday evening next at the Plainfield High School, will comprise a program of great attractiveness to those who love these old songs and it is safe to assert everyone has such an affection, especially when presented by such artists as are to be heard on this occasion.

John Young will sing "Sally in Our Alley" and "Molly Carew;" Dr. Dufft will give the "Kerry Dance," "Simon the Cellarer," and other selections and Edith Champman Gool will sing "Kathleen Mavournee," "Twiskenham Ferry," all of which is enough to bring out a record crowd. An announcement of interest is the engagement of one of New York's prominent contralto soloists to sing in place of Miss Christine Miller, who finds it impossible to leave Pittsburg in time to reach Plainfield. Full details of the program will be announced on Monday.

Democrats to Be Sociable.

Members of the Plainfield Democratic Club will inaugurate pinochle and euchre tournaments at their clubroom in the Taylor building on Tuesday night. All Democrats are invited to be present.

EDISON'S WONDERFUL CAR

The Wizard Makes Initial Trip and is Gratified at Result.

STORAGE BATTERY POWER.

Only the Beginning, Says the Wizard—A Description of the Invention Which Means a Big Money Saver.

Thomas A. Edison realized one of the dreams of his life Thursday afternoon, when he rode on a street car propelled by his storage battries. After several tests it was demonstrated that the car, which has a seating capacity of twenty-six, can be successfully operated at a cost of about one cent per mile. Mr. Edison seemed to be the least enthusiastic of the passengers, who included prominent street railway men. He took the success of the experiment in his matter-of-fact way, even when those in the car declared that the battery will eventually effect a revolution in street railway traffic. Mr. Edison took his ride in the car late in the afternoon after the preliminary tests.

The new car more nearly resembles the type of vehicle used in the Hudson tunnels than the ordinary street car. There is no door separating the interior from the vestibules, and an iron rail placed sufficiently low takes the place of the usual strap hangers. These rails are so placed that they will not interfere with the hats of tall people. The car is controlled by a brake of special design, patented by Mr. Edison.

Closely associated with Mr. Edison in perfecting the first successful storage battery car has been Ralph H. Beach. To the latter belong the credit for constructing the car itself. Mr. Beach has made a study of the subject for years. He found that efforts to propel a street car by means of storage batteries failed largely because the cars themselves were too heavy. He therefore had a car built on designs, the patents on which are held by Mr. Edison.

Even greater changes are noted in the running gear. As the experimental car is a small one there is only one truck, all the parts of which are of chilled steel. To prevent the swaying motion which is so disagreeable to passengers on many trolley cars, Mr. Beach has invented what he calls a telescope spring. One of these springs has been placed directly over each of the wheels. Besides the headlights the car is equipped with eight ten candlepower incandescent lamps. The battery cells are placed under the seats.

Edison's latest battery, which has made the operation of the car possible, involves the use of an entirely new voltaic combination in an alkaline electrolyte, in place of the lead peroxide combination characteristic of other batteries. In the Edison battery the active materials are oxides of nickel or iron, respectively, in the positive and negative electrodes, the liquid in which these are immersed being a solution of caustic potash in water. The retaining cars are made of sheet steel. These cans are so weidd that it is claimed that leakage are breakage from severe vibration is impossible. This was demonstrated yesterday when the new car was hauled over the macadam roadbed of Lakeside avenue on its way to the trolley tracks.

Electricians who were present when the tests were made Thursday were interested to learn if there was any danger of the passengers in the cars coming in contact with the voltage of the high current. To prove that there was not Mr. Beach removed several of the cells and passed his hand over every part of them, demonstrating that the current could not injure the traveling public.

S. S. Teachers Change Name.

The members of the Plainfield Primary and Junior Sunday-school Association have changed the name of the organization to "The Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday-school Teachers." The meetings are held every Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. rooms. On Monday afternoon, Mrs. Winter will lead the devotional exercises, Miss Ricker will teach the lessons for beginners, Mrs. L. M. French will teach the lesson for the primary department and Mrs. Edward Baker, Jr., will teach the lesson for juniors.

Canon Macnab to Preach.

A feature of especial interest at the 11 o'clock service at Grace church tomorrow morning will be the sermon by the Rev. Alexander Macnab, of Toronto, Canada. Mr. Macnab is resident canon of St. Alban's Cathedral in the city of Toronto, and in that capacity was for many years closely associated with the late Archbishop of Ontario, Dr. Sweatman, who died just a year ago. Canon Macnab is visiting relatives in the city.

MYGATT IS GUARDIAN FOR THE ASTOR HEIRS

Councilman Frederick E. Mygatt, of West Eighth street, a lawyer, was appointed guardian ad litem of Douglas Robinson, Jr.; Helen Douglas Robinson and Elizabeth Mary Douglas Robinson yesterday by Judge Henrick in New York. The appointment was made to enable Mr. Mygatt to represent them in a suit brought by James Roosevelt Roosevelt, Robert H. Ferguson and Douglas Robinson, as trustees of the will of William Astor, against John Jacob Astor, Henry B. Ely and others, trustees of the will of Mrs. Caroline W. Astor, to obtain a settlement of the estate of William Astor.

Mr. Mygatt, who is attorney for the trustees of the will of Mr. Astor, said yesterday that the suit was a formal proceeding to enable a legal settlement of the affairs of the trust. At the time of Mr. Astor's death he left a number of trusts in which Mrs. Caroline Astor was the beneficiary. Through Mrs. James Roosevelt Roosevelt, who was Miss Caroline Astor, the minors for whom a guardian was appointed yesterday are possible heirs, and to enable a legal settlement to be made a guardian had to be appointed.

Mr. Mygatt declared, however, that their interest was a very small one and that John Jacob Astor was the principal heir under the will of his mother.

MARY HUNT ESTATE AMOUNTS TO $8,257

The final accounting of John D. Rue, trustee for and during the life of Margaret F. Stonaker, for the estate of the late Mary H. Hunt, of Dunellen, was approved and allowed by Judge Lyon in the Orphans' Court at New Brunswick yesterday.

The account shows that the original estate was worth $3,017, the income from which amounted to $5,240.50, making the total value of the estate $8,257.50. The expenses and disbursements have amounted to $5,471.54, leaving a balance in the hands of the trustee of $2,775.96. A new order of distribution will be applied for as the legatees under the terms of the old will are deceased.

MISS ELLA JARRETT GIVES A MASQUERADE

Miss Ella Jarrett, of 137 Crescent avenue, entertained friends at a masquerade party last night, which was a charming social affair. The decorations in the dining room were pink and green. The number of guests were twenty-three, the skidoo number, but the affair was very enjoyable. The guests and their costumes were as follows:

DUTCH ARMS' ELECTION

Annual Meeting of Trinity Reformed Church Men's Association.

ARRANGE FOR A DINNER.

F. S. Cutter Re-elected President—Rev. Dr. Johnson and Dr. Harrison Give Brief Talks.

The election of officers, yearly reports, together with an able address by Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, made the annual meeting of the Dutch Arms, men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, an interesting one last night, even if the attendance was small owing to the bad weather. Those present felt fully repaid for coming out and taking part in the proceedings.

The devotional services were conducted by Fred E. Smith, who read an appropriate Scripture lesson and offered prayer, after which F. S. Cutter, president of the association, took the chair. William F. Oliver, as treasurer, presented his report, showing receipts and balance from last year to be $132.03, expenditures of $129.42, with a present balance of $261.

Although Mr. Cutter did not want to assume the presidency another year, he was persuaded to do so, after remarks by Rev. John Y. Broek, James C. Field and Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, which afforded much encouragement to him as well as the association. The men promised to give Mr. Cutter their united support.

F. E. Smith and William A. Woodruff were chosen first and second vice-presidents; Frank Storr, secretary, and William F. Oliver, treasurer. During the business session, Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison and William Stryker were elected as members.

Pastor Broek suggseted that the men plan to give a banquet in the near future, a charge of fifty cents per plate to be made. In this way he felt sure that all the men of the church would attend. President Cutter appointed James C. Field, W. A. Woodruff and B. Frank Coriell a committee to arrange the details. It will be decided later whether to invite the women folks it being suggested as a good idea.

Reference was made of the recent death of Mrs. A. L. Force, and the secretary was instructed to send a letter of sympathy and condolence to the bereaved family.

President Cutter read a letter from George A. Warner, who explained in behalf of "Good Fellow" the disposition of the $5 contributed by the association for that object at Christmas time.

Dr. Harrison gave a brief and earnest talk to the men, in which he urged them to have the militant idea and to help assume the important work of Christ's Kingdom. Of course, he said, it was expected that women would do their share, in fact everyone would be disappointed if they didn't, but he felt that there was a work for the men and he hoped they would do it. He expressed the opinion that all should be in a fighting mood. He said that Plainfield might not need purification, but as long as the saloons are open there is a chance for something to be done. During a social session ice cream, cake and coffee were served.

ELECTED OFFICERS.

East End Church Completes Its Organization.

The members of the Netherwood Reformed church held a business meeting last night for the purpose of electing elders and deacons to complete the organization of the new church. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, presided at the meeting. The following persons were chosen to comprise the Consistory of the church:

Elders, James C. Hanson, Samuel O. Rush, William Carson; deacons, Enoch Berry, Gustav Frumerie and Charles Gonod.

The members of the Consistory will be installed on Friday evening, February 4, and preparatory services will folow, while the communion service will be held Sunday morning, February 6. Following the installation of the elders and deacons they will meet for the election of officers.

Artistic Calendar Design.

The Wood Brook Farms Dairy has issued an unusually attractive calendar this year. It was designed by William B. Gilbert, of Crescent avenue, and is a work of art. It shows a picture of the dairy, and a wide spacious driveway leading up to it from the street, on either side of which are large massive oaks with wide spreading branches. The calendar has attracted considerable attention.

CONFIRM ELECTION OF THEIR FIRE CHIEF

The election of Charles Meyers as chief of the Scotch Plains fire department was confirmed at a meeting of the township committee last night. Meyers' confirmation was delayed owing to the question as to the eligibility of Meyer to serve on account of non-residence.

The election was a close contest betwen Meyer and William Reynolds, the latter winning by a majority of two votes. Friends of Reynolds put up a claim to the township committee that Meyer could not serve as he was a resident of North Plainfield township.

The committeemen put the matter before Township Attorney Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., and the latter at the meeting last night informed the committee that Meyer was eligible to serve, thus settling the controversy between the rival factions of the department. Chief Meyer received official notification of his confirmation from Township Clerk Edward L. Hand today.

REPLEVIN PROCEEDINGS TO RECOVER AUTO BUS

The auto 'bus, owned by the Plainfield Auto 'Bus Company, is once more in operation after being locked up for a few days at Brokaw Brothers' garage on East Fourth street, the result of an apparent misunderstanding. On December 16 Brokaw Brothers rendered a bill to the company for repairs made to the 'bus from October 29 to December 1. Some of the items were considered as being an overcharge and not reasonable, and the bill was referred back for adjustment.

The company has been storing its car in the garage and Brokaw Brothers notified the company that it would hold the vehicle until the bill was paid, and accordingly, it is said, locked the car up.

On Thursday Judge William Newcorn, of counsel for the company, started a replevin suit in the Union County Circuit Court, and last night the car was restored to the company through legal proceedings.

In speaking of the matter today, Judge Newcorn said that Brokaw Brothers would now be compelled to prove every item of their claim. In the meantime the 'bus is doing business on regular schedule.

COUNSEL SUMMED UP HETFIELD WILL CASE

The Hetfield will case, trial of which in the Orphans Court before Judge Atwater was a record one because of the number of days it took and the number of witnesses examined, was summed up yesterday. Each side of the case was allowed two hours to present arguments. Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., with Judge William Newcorn, of Plainfield, represented the caveators.

Mr. Hetfield concluded his remarks by declaring that the evidence introduced by the caveators showed beyond a doubt that Corra Hetfield, the maker of the will, was insane and an imbecile for fifteen years before his death and that therefore the burden was shifted on the other side of the case to show that he was in his right mind when he drew his will favoring Joseph Gallagher, former proprietor of a roadhouse in Rahway avenue.

Mr. Hetfield stated that it had been shown by witnesses produced by the caveators that while Corra Hetfield paid his board while living at the Gallagher hotel, he was compelled to carry water for 800 or 900 yards, and that when he did not travel fast enough, Viola Redden, who lived at the hotel, followed him with a switch. It was also declared by counsel that witnesses had testified to seeing the man sitting in the road begging rum from people who passed.

He declared that it was also shown that Hetfield was tied in a room by Gallagher and that he had to be watched all the time. At one time, he claimed, it was shown that he had set fire to a hotel where he was staying when he was left home alone. Mr. Hetfield said that Dr. Fank Westcott has testified that he had considered Hetfield insane for a number of years.

Charles A. Trimble, attorney for Gallagher, then made an argument. His argument was that Hetfield was treated, according to witnesses, with the greatest respect by Gallagher and that he was perfectly sane when he named Gallagher his beneficiary and overlooked Scott Terry and other relatives, the caveators.

HOW MOVEMENT STARTED

Motive That Prompts Men's Mass Meeting Arranged for January 28.

CHURCHMEN ARE INTERESTED.

Secretary H. E. Parker of Y. M. C. A. is Working to Make Local Demonstration a Big Success.

Local religious interests are concentrating their efforts toward making the men's mass meeting to be held in the First Methodist church on Friday night, January 28, a big success. Secretary Herbert E. Parker of the Y. M. C. A., is boosting the affair with his usual vim and he is receiving the assistance of Y. M. C. A. workers and leading churchmen of the city and borough.

In order to have a better understanding of the spirit, aim, and achievements of the Laymen's missionary movement, under the auspices of which the men's meeting is to be held here, the following brief account of the movement is given.

The movement started with the meeting of a small company of laymen in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, on November 15, 1906, directly following the commemoration in the same church of the one hundredth anniversary of the Haystack Prayer Meeting. The purpose of this gathering was expressed in the preamble and resolutions which were adopted. These were:

Whereas, In the marvelous providence of God the one hundredth anniversary of the beginnings of the American Foreign Missionary Movement finds the doors of every nation open to the gospel message, and

Whereas, The machinery of the missionary boards, women's boards, student and young people's missionary movements is highly and efficiently organized, and

Whereas, The greatly increased participation of the present generation of responsible business and professional men is essential to the widest and most productive use of the existing missionary agencies, and is equally vital to the growth of the spiritual life at home, and

Whereas, In the management of large business and political responsibilities, such men have been greatly used and honored, and

Whereas, In but few of the denominations have aggressive movements to interest men in missions been undertaken;

Therefore, be it resolved,

1. To project a campaign of missionary education among laymen under the direction of the various board secretaries.

2. To devise a comprehensive plan looking toward the evangelization of the world in this generation, in conjunction with the said board secretaries.

It will thus be seen that the movement is not a missionary board to solicit funds or to administer them; it is not to raise up or send out missionaries; it is not to work among young people, students or women; but its work is chiefly among the mature men of the church. It is also evident that it is not an interdenominational movement which proposes to do its work outside of regular denominational lines or to make a new missionary brotherhood independent of those already established. Its sole purpose is to interest the men of this generation in the evangelization of the world in this generation.

Already the movement, under its great leader, J. Campbell White, has conducted successful campaigns in the great cities of Canada and in many of the great cities of this country. As an illustration of the manner in which the movement has influenced the attitude of men to missions, the experience of the evangelical churches of Toronto may be cited. Following the Toronto convention, in a single year, the contributions of the Presbyterian churches of that city to foreign missions were increased from $26,437 to $43,537; those of the Anglican churches from $14,500 to $25,250; those of the Methodist churches from $23,141 to $50,578; and those of the Baptist churches from $15,248 to $37,843.

But these astonishing financial results are the least important. In the words of a great laymen of Toronto: "There has come to the men of the churches where the movement has gripped them a new sense of both privilege and responsibility in Christian work; the privilege and responsibility in Christian work; the privilege and responsibility of being coworkers together with Christ in the work of world redemption; a new conception of stewardship that involves business talents as well as possessions; a new consciousness of personal relationship to Christ and a new sense of loyalty to him."

Hallet & Davis Player-Piano

The Hallet & Davis Piano

The discerning player-piano purchaser demands not only a piano of unquestioned superior tone quality, but of strong and durable construction, to withstand the greater use accorded a player-piano than an instrument without the player mechanism. The Hallet & Davis piano is constructed to meet the most severe requirements. The crown of the sounding board is supported by fifteen ribs, while the usual number is only eleven. The metal plate is square and very heavy, securing great rigidity. The piano action and hammers are designed for hard service, making an ideal instrument for the introduction of automatic player mechanism.

The Player Action

The salient features of the player action in the Hallet & Davis player-piano are:

A button softening the treble and another softening the bass.

A lever softening the whole piano and one operating the sustaining pedal of the piano.

The usual tempo and re-roll levers.

But most important of all, an automatic tracking device which is absolutely essential with the new standard 88-note music roll, as the holes are smaller and nearer together than on the old 65-note roll.

(The least swelling or shrinking of the paper causes the holes in the paper to be out of line with the holes in the tracker board, resulting in a discord unless equipped with a tracking device.)

Plays any standard 88-note music roll.

Daily demonstrations at our warerooms.

New Brunswick, Jan. 22.—To further the interest of Rutgers College, a graduates' committee has been formed, with headquarters in New York city. The special matter in hand is the raising of funds for the erection of additional buildings and the development of the Neilson campus, where the engineering building, erected in 1909, is located and where the new chemistry building is under construction. The further development of this property is necessitated by the growth of the college.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

After a lot of discussion over the eligibility of Fire Chief-elect Charles Meyer to serve at the head of the local department this year owing to the fact that he resides in North Plainfield township the question was settled in Meyer's favor at the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night. ## N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Mgr. Percy G. Williams will present the well known star of the legitimate, Miss Fannie Ward, to Harlemites next week at the Alhambra, by special arrangement with Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger. She will make her first vaudeville appearance uptown in a tabloid version of "Van Allen's wife" condensed from the play of the same name, and in which she is supported by the entire members of her company. "The Leading Lady," interpreted by Marguerite Haney and an excellent cast will entertain with this amusing playlet and Stuart Barnes. Tom Edwards, the English huntsman ventriloquist, will make his Harlem debut, and a very pretty dancing number will be presented by The Six American Dancers. The balance of the bill is made up of Spissell Bros. & Co., in "The Continental Waiter," The Village Choir and others.

A striking feature of the remarkable audiences which continue to fill Maxine Elliott's theatre, where Forbes-Robertson appears in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," eight times a week, is the fact that they contain a large proportion of those who have already seen Mr. Jerome's inspiring play and Mr. Robertson's beautiful portrayal of "The Passer-By" before. In fact, the famous actor-manager is beseiged by correspondents and callers who express their unqualified delight which has only been accentrated by their repeated visits, showing that the appreciation of a good play and fine acting is an acquired taste and does not dull the appetite or lose anything by repetition.

"The Chocolate Soldier" keeps on its uninterrupted way at the Casino, where it is making more friends every week, and the returns show that Mr. Whitney's beautiful production is the most popular play in town. The opera has already passed its one hundredth performance and there is every indication that it will run right through the season. "The Chocolate Soldier" is the hit of the season. In the cast are such well-known artists as Ida Brooks Hunt, Edith Bradford, Flavia Arcaro, Tom Richards, William Pruette, George Tallman and Francis J. Boyle. Matinees on Saturdays only.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

John Healy, in Al. G. Fields' Minstrels, at New Plainfield Theatre Today, Matinee, and Night.

The coming of Elsie Janis is always a source of infinite joy to the younger patrons of the theatre and particularly to the fluffy little army of matinee misses who divide their worship between the shrines of Miss Janis and Miss Barrymore. Little Miss Janis this year is announced as the starriest kind of a star in the most ambitious comedy effort of her career. George Ade wrote "The Fair Co-Ed" and the music was contributed by Gustav Luders. When it is remembered that George Ade also wrote "The College Widow" a certainty of some delicious foolery in the realms of undergraduate student life is assured. Miss Janis comes under the management of Mr. Dillingham, who promises to present "The Fair Co-Ed" at Plainfield theatre January 24, with the same capable cast and exquisite scenic investiture so much admired during the long run at the Knickerbocker and Criterion theatres in New York.

Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival to be at the Plainfield theatre on January 26, makes a more general and genuine appeal than possibly any other attraction before the American public. The new program possesses all the elements needed to please all temperaments. Those who delight in foreign travel will find resplendent scenes of a great Mohammedan religious ceremony in Delhi, India; of winter gayeties in St. Moritz, Switzerland; and of logging through the Italian Alps. Those who are truly patriotic will be stirred by the strenuous scenes of U. S. army life in camp and action at West Point, Annapolis, Fort Myer, etc. Those who crave excitement will find it in the spectacular impact of a huge projectile on armor plate, and dynamiting a bridge by the engineer corps, U. S. A. A violent eruption of the largest volcano in Java also provides a sensation in its own way. For lovers of the sea there are thrilling scenes of a ship's struggle through tremendous seas and a heavy gale at Blarritz. For nature lovers there are fascinating studies of birds of the Hebrides and Scotland in the colors of nature, and the effect of music on wild animals. In fact the range of the program is world-wide and is therefore sure to please all.

The Women's Relief Corps will hold a meeting Friday night, January 28, which will be of special interest. The officers-elect will be in charge.

A local council of the Senior O. U. A. M. will be instituted in Coward's Hall on Wednesday, January 26. A large delegation of State officers are expected, as well as the national councilor.

NEWS IN PLAINFIELD IN THE OLDEN DAYS

(From the Plainfield Union 1862.)

It becomes our painful duty to record the most melancholy casualty that has ever disturbed the quiet of our village, in the death of Mr. Henry F. Jennings, on Wednesday evening last.

Mr. Jennings, with a number of other young men, had resolved to fire a parting salute in honor of the departure of Captain Regur's recruiting party, who were about returning to the seat of war in Virginia. He had recently taken an active part in displays of this nature, and on the evening above referred to he was, as usual, among the foremost in the preparations for the salute.

As it was intended to fire but a couple of rounds, and as no cannon powder was to be procered in the village, it was decided to use rifle powder was to be procured in the were accordingly purchased and put up in two cartridges, the first containing two and three-quarters pounds, and the other three pounds. It was remarked by several at the first discharge, which took place at about quarter past eight, that there was an unusual and peculiar sound, and some who were at a distance supposed the gun had bursted then.

The second cartridge was rammed home very hard and heavily wadded, with the intention of having a stunning report.

As the train started amid the cheers of the multiture, Mr. Jennings stepped up to the gun, as before, and applied his lighted cigar to the priming. Then followed a sharp, quick explosion, a bright flash, and amid a cloud of smoke the young man, who but that instant had been the picture of youthful vigor, was thrown forty feet into the air, and fell a mangled corpse at a distance of one hundred feet from where the gun lay.

Theodore F. French and Edward P. Thorn stood behind the cannon, about twelve feet distant, and James Robison stood opposite Mr. Jennings and about five feet from the gun, but no one else was injured. One piece was thrown a distance of more than two hundred yards, striking and considerably injuring the house occupied by Capt. Kellog's family; and several other pieces were thrown lesser distances.

Before the cannon was sent to Plainfield from the Novelty Works in New York, it was subjected to the severest tests, having been charged with five pounds of rifle powder, and was thought to be too sound to be bursted.

It was a most fortunate circumstance that there were but few persons near the gun at the time of the explosion. Almost invariably there is a large crowd in the immediate vicinity, and had such been the case on Wednesday evening, it is impossible to tell how serious the consequences might have been.

Mr. Jennings at the time the gun was fired stood on the right side with his back toward the muzzle, and it is probable that a piece of the gun passed up his right arm, tearing and breaking it in its passage and striking him in the side of the head, entirely separating the top of the skull, and causing instant death, and together with the force of the explosion, carried him the distance we have mentioned.

It is impossible to describe the effect of this sudden calamity upon the people. The whole village seems to have been wrapped in sorrow and gloom. For two days the flags were flying at half-mast, the National Reading Room and the fire engine and house were draped in mourning, and every demonstration of respect was accorded to the unfortunate dead.

On Friday at 11 a. m., the funeral services were performed in the First Baptist church. Rev. S. J. Drake spoke from Hebrews, 11: 27, to the most crowded auditory that ever filled that church. The fire company turned out with full ranks, and as most of the members of the National Club belonged to the fire department, the remaining members by invitation appeared with the latter organization, and did not attend as a distinct body.

It is hardly necessary that we should say much of Mr. Jennings personally. We desire to weave no fulsome adulation around the memory of our dparted friend; but we do bear most willing testimony to the disinterested friendship, the generous qualities, and the genial sociality that were part and parcel of his being. Thrown into daily and most intimate companionship with the deceased, in the pleasant freedom of our own social gatherings, we had abundant opportunity to become acquainted with the natural excellence of his character, and we loved him.

Mr. Jennings was widely known and very generally esteemed; was doing a thriving business, and had every prospect of a long, prosperous and happy life, having almost completed his twenty-sixth year.

Rev. Theodore S. Brown will deliver a discourse having an especial reference to this sad event on next Sabbath afternoon, at half-past three, at the particular request of Mr. Jennings' young associates.

JUSTICES OF PEACE SEEK MORE POWERS

A permanent organization known as the New Jersey State Association of Justices of the Peace and Constables will be incorporated under the laws of New Jersey at a meeting to be held in Masonic Temple, Trenton, next Wednesday afternoon. The justices of the peace in Elizabeth favor the incorporation, it is said, and several are planning to attend the meeting.

Circular letters have been sent to each of 5,000 justices of the peace and constables in the State requesting support in the forming of a State association as well as in an effort to establish local associations in each of the twenty-one counties.

The circular letter says in part: "This movement has been going on since last June. We are numerous enough in this State to protect our rights and it is our duty to do so as holders of the titles of this ancient and highly honored office that arose at the dawn of civilization.

"In counties and cities where district courts are established we ask for jurisdiction in civil matters, such as tenant and landlord cases and writs of attachment up to $100, which would release the district courts and the poor man could get redress and protection at any hour of the day or night."

One of the principal objects of the proposed association is the enactment of laws which the justices of the peace and constables believe will give them powers which they do not have now.

FINDS PET PUSSY BAKED TO CRISP.

Bayonne, Jan. 22.—When Mrs. Moses Herman, of 84 West Twenty-fourth street, this city, opened the oven door of her kitchen range, yesterday morning, she found her pet cat, Mollie, baked to a crisp. She remembered she had heard the cat meow when she lighted the range, but said she had no idea that it was in the oven.

As was her nightly custom, Mollie climbed into the oven of Mrs. Herman's stove after the family had gone to bed. As the fire was always allowed to go out, the oven would get cooler and cooler, so by the time the Hermans awoke in the morning Mollie would jump out and wait for the fire to be remade, after which she would lie under the stove.

But yesterday morning Mollie didn't jump out of the oven when Mrs. Herman came downstairs and began rebuilding the fire. Mrs. Herman, thinking the cat had left her cozy chamber, closed the door without looking inside after the fire had started.

Two or three hours later Mrs. Herman detected a peculiar odor. It seemed to come from the kitchen range. She couldn't think what was making it, and investigating she opened the oven dior and found Mollie done to a turn.

GUARDIAN FOR RICHES OF AGED "SIMPLE TOM"

Application has been made in the Orphan's Court at Somerville by James L. Griggs, former prosecutor of pleas of Somerset County, for the appointment of a guardian for "Simple Tom" Schenck, half witted negro, seventy years of age, who was born of a former slave mother in Somerset county. He is about to receive from a brother whom he never knew an inheritance to keep him in his old age.

"Simple Tom," like "Topsy," says he never was born, but the evidence presented to the court by Mr. Griggs shows that Tom's mother was a slave once owned by the Ten Eyck family. She had twins, Tom and Sam. Sam fought in the Civil War. He died in the New Jersey Soldiers' Home a few months ago without knowing he ever had a brother. He left an estate valued at $600 and on old will in which he bequeathed all his earthly possessions to Colonel Arthur S. Ten Eyck. The will stated that the bequest was made to Colonel Ten Eyck by Sam "out of gratitude for bringing me up and caring for me through life."

Colonel Ten Eyck died before his grateful servant, and Sam's estate, according to law, went to his next of kin. When this became known the descendants of the old Schenck and Ten Eyck families made public the origin of "Simple Tom's" birth, but the authorities were confronted by another mystery when it was discovered that Sam enlisted in the Civil War and died in the Soldiers' Home under the name of Samuel St. John.

William C. Schenck, the present custodian of "Simple Tom," clears up this mystery in an affidavit before the court, in which he states that Sam, when a young man, was very religious. Unlike most of his race at that time, he failed to become a Methodist and joined St. Bernard's Catholic church of Raritan. This caused the other negroes to ridicule him and to call him "St. John." Sam was proud of this Christian name and enlisted under it in the Civil War and retained it until the time of his death. The court appointed former Justice Arthur P. Sutphen a trustee of the estate until a final disposition is made of it.

RAHWAY DEMOCRATS MUST RELINQUISH THEIR JOBS.

The State Civil Service Commission met yesterday in the Common Council chambers, Rahway, to classify city officers under the municipal civil service recently adopted by the outgoing Democratic Common Council. They decided that under the decision recently rendered by Justice Swayze that those whose terms of office expired January 1, 1910, were out of office, and that those employed since then or up to February 4 hold good.

Unless decision is reversed by the Court of Errors and Appeals, the officers placed by commissioners under unclassified heads are auditor and treasurer, receiver of taxes, city clerk, street commissioner, overseer of poor, city engineer, assessors, department of excise, chief of police, public schools, police justice, sealer of weights and measures.

Those classified are city physicians, chief of fire department, Board of Health and health officers, matron of almshouse, superintendent of almshouse, deputy tax collector, assistant in tax office, teamsters.

All the offices are held by Democrats. The Common Council on January 1 appointed Republicans to their places who will now succeed the Democrats.

PASTOR CAN'T GO HOBOKEN.

Says Place in Church was Crushing, and Seeks Happier Field.

The Rev. William Ten Eyck Adams, pastor of the First Reformed church of Hoboken, said yesterday that he had no further use for Hoboken and was going to get out of the city in two weeks' time. He said that he had tendered his resignation as pastor and would preach only two Sundays more in his present church.

"My greatest joy," said Mr. Adams "is that I am going to leave Hoboken. My place in the church was simply crushing. Hoboken is a difficult field in which to work, and I feel that any pastor who works in it has earned a place in Heaven. The conditions were such here that I could do no effective work, and I am going to try to find a field where I can be happier."

Mr. Adams and his congregation have been at odds for some time, it is said. There is no rectory connected with the church, and Mr. Adams has been living in a boarding house. He did not like to take his wife to a boarding house, and she has been living with her parents in Brooklyn during his three-year pastorate.

Funeral of Arthur W. Talmadge.

The funeral services of Arthur White Talmadge were held from the late home on Belvidere avenue, yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock, and wre largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted the services. The burial was at Hillside cemetery.

REV. DR. E. P. JOHNSON TALKS TO MEN'S CLUB

"What you men can do to make Trinity an ideal church," was the subject of an address given by Rev. Dr. E. P. Johnson, of New Brunswick, at the annual meeting of The Dutch Arms, the men's association, of Trinity Reformed church, last night. Dr. Johnson was acting pastor of this church for about two years, prior to the calling of Rev. John Y. Broek and during that time he endeared himself to the hearts of the members.

Dr. Johnson's talk last night was plain, practical and to the point. He said that he was glad that the men of the church are coming into their own in mission work. "The women have done nobly," said the speaker, "and God bless their dear hearts, but they have been getting along too much without the men. We men are beginning to open our eyes and wake up.

"It is a pleasure for me to speak to you tonight. I have known you for three years and I know what you are capable of doing. This church is near the ideal, but not quite. First of all it is desirable to feel that your church is the best in the city. There may be richer and bigger churches, but there are few better. Still your not perfect. There are ideals yet to be reached.

"We have got to have a high ideal. The man who lives a quiet indolent sort of life will bring up in the poorhouse, be dependent on others or his wife will eventually support him. You have an unlimited range of influence here and should do all that is possible to make your church an ideal one.

"It is important that there should be harmony and good fellowship. If your pastor was a St. Paul himself he could do but little without harmony. Good leadership depends on your pastor and he has ability and talents, but you must co-operate with him. Trouble and discord in a church will do more to hurt true friendship than anything else.

"But something more is needed. There must be hospitality. There is more of that in this church than in many other churches. The railroad station, the schoolhouse and the hospital are community institutions, but a church is to serve all interests in a community. That is what a church is for, by divine right and appointment.

"We should have a spirit of friendship for other churches, but not to the extent of proselyting. If there are heathen not looked after, it is your place to do this work. You should make people feel at home, and then there should be aggressive evangelism. The test of any laymen or preacher in relation to the Bible is the spirit of aggressive evangelism.

"The time is coming when the church will seek a larger and better equipment for its work both at home and abroad. You have two pastors, your own missionary, two chapels, Marconnier and the Netherwood Reformed church, but you are not doing all you can, and I know you will do more."

Dr. Johnson's remarks were listened to with great interest by the men and he was personally thanked for coming to Plainfield to address the association.

SWEET SIXTEEN NOW HAPPY.

Declaring that she was guilty of all the charges against her, that she was an orphan, that nobody cared for her, and that she stole because she wanted to be sent to some State institution, Mary Katolisch, sixteen years old, aroused the sympathy of Judge Scott in the Court of Special Sessions at Paterson yesterday. She had stolen sixteen times before she was caught, her loot consisting principally of wearing apparel.

Mary's method was to apply at a boarding house for board or work, and remain long enough to survey the surroundings. When arrested, a bunch of skeleton keys was found concealed in her hair. "I thought once of doing big jobs and making plenty of money to make me happy. That is why I have the skeleton keys," she told Judge Scott. The court sent her to the State Home for Girls. "That's the place for me. Now I am happy," she declared.

MURDERER TRIED TO KILL THREE PEOPLE.

Giovanni Maroni, a Mercer county murderer, early today wrecked the death house at the State prison at Trenton, assaulted two deputy keepers and tried to kill a Catholic priest. It took fifteen men to subdue him. Dallas Fogg and Frederick Douglas, the keepers, were both injured. Maroni is under sentence of death for killing a woman at Trenton who refused to give him employment.

AUTOMOBILE BANQUET TO BE GREAT AFFAIR

Automobile enthusiasts will gather at the New Auditorium, Newark, Monday night at the annual banquet of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club. It is expected the affair will be attended by 250 or more, and that it will eclipse previous affairs in interest.

A feature will be the arrangement of tables and the vaudeville acts between courses. Moving pictures of famous French auto races will be given. The speakers will be: Former Governor Edward C. Stokes, former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith, Commissioner of Banking and Insurance Vivian M. Lewis, Rufus L. Scott, Jr., George F. Reeve, president of the Board of Trade; Colonel Austen Colgate and President W. Clive Crosby, toastmaster. The committee in charge consists of H. D. Bowman, A. B. Le Massena and J. H. Wood. The dinner will be served by C. L. Schfeitzer, with music by Issler. The decorations will consist of streamers, flags and six dozen palms. The only Plainfield subscriber in the list of diners is C. J. Fisk.

BEEF TRUST UNDER FIRE FROM THE GOVERNMENT.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Right in line with the general movement against high prices of foodstuffs, especially meats, announcement was made officially yesterday that the Department of Justice is about to begin proceedings against the Beef Trust. The department, it was said, would proceed against Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Morris & Co. and the National Packing Company, all of Chicago.

According to information given out, the National Packing Company is controlled by the three other concerns named. The Federal Grand Jury will meet in Chicago next Monday, and at that time the government will begin the examination of witnesses in the case.

The action will be taken under the Sherman anti-trust law. It is the idea of the Deparement of Justice that there is a combination in restraint of trade between the three packing concerns through the National Packing Company, which is a New Jersey company with a capital of $15,000,000. It was organized in 1903 and took over the stock of a half dozen or more packing concerns.

Woman Dies in Automobile.

Mrs. Alice Abrams, of Paterson, died in an automobile Thursday night, while being taken to the home of her sister in Brooklyn. She was in Bergen county when she died and trouble with the authorities of that county may ensue, as the body was brought back to Passaic county without a permit having been obtained. The woman had a stroke of paralysis several months ago. Her relatives realized that she could not live much longer, and an automobile was engaged to take her to the home of a sister in Brooklyn.

MAYOR LIFTS BAN ON SALVATIONISTS.

Following a conference with Colonel William A. MacIntyre yesterday, Mayor Victor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, lifted the ban placed on the Salvation Army. The Mayor rescinded his order prohibiting Captain John Strain from holding open-air meetings in Broad street. The conference was held in the Mayor's office in the City Hall. It was also attended by Brigadier A. E. Kimball.

The Salvation Army officers explained to the Mayor that his order was a hardship on the local corps and that it interfered with its work. They said they are satisfied that the Mayor's order prohibiting the holding of street parades after 9 o'clock should remain in effect.

Mayor Mravlag's objection to the corps holding open-air meetings at Broad and East Jersey streets was that the meetings interfered with traffic, especially Saturday night, when it was almost impossible for a vehicle to get past the crowds gathered at the corner.

He claimed that a serious accident could not be averted in the event of a hurry call for an ambulance or an alarm being sounded for a fire in the immediate vicinity. Because of the congested condition at Broad and East Jersey streets a fatal accident was narrowly averted during Old Home week, when an ambulance ran into a crowd of persons, two of whom were seriously hurt.

EXPLORER R. E. PEARY VISITS TRENTON.

Trenton, Jan. 22.—Commander Robert E. Peary was the guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, held in Masonic Hall last night. Commander Peary received an ovation from the more than 200 representative business men at the dinner. His story of his experiences in the Polar region was listened to with much interest.

Congressman Joseph E. Ransdell, president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, was another guests and speaker. The Congressman spoke of the national importance of the deeper waterways movement.

Henry C. Moore, president of the chamber, presided at the dinner, and H. G. Stoddard acted as toastmaster. During his stay in Trenton Commander Peary was entertained at the apartments of Adjutant-General Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr.

GOOD "AGNOSTICS" IN CHURCH'S "ACQUARIUM."

Jersey City, Jan. 22.—The "agnostics" in St. John's Evangelical church on Summit avenue are good, according to Rev. E. A. Meury's latest story on the sexton's description of the handsome new edifice. The church was only recently completed and there are frequent visitors to inspect the building. Recently a party visited the church and the assistant sexton in escorting the party explained that the "aquarium," meaning the "auditorium," was the finest in the city and concluded in speaking of the acoustic proportions of the church proper by saying, "Undt der agnostics are goot in der church."

The story has made somewhat of a hit in the Hudson City section, and Rev. Meury, who loves a joke or story, tells it with glee.

SKYSCRAPER MAY RISE ON OLD LANDMARK SITE.

Elizabeth, Jan. 22.—One of the oldest landmarks in Board street here is about to be torn down to make room for the march of improvement. It is a two-and-a-half-story brick building at 122 Broad street, owned by the estate of the late Leonard Sauer, a pioneer in the shoe business in Elizabeth, which he personally conducted there more than half a century. Mr. Sauer was a founder of St. Michael's German Catholic church here. He died seven years ago, and now the estate is to be divided among his heirs, six boys and two girls.

Among them are City Comptroller John S. Sauer and Tax Assessor Leonard Sauer, of Elizabeth. Since his death the business has been carried on by his sons, Leonard and Charles Sauer. Senator Kean has purchased the property for $37,000, and it is reported will erect a modern skyscraper on its site. The closing out sale of the stock will wind up next week. When the estate is divided each heir will receive about $5,000.

JOHN FOLEY DIES.

Was One of the Oldest of the Singer Employes.

John Foley, for thirty-seven years with the Singer Manufacturing Company, died suddenly at the Singer gate, Elizabethport, late yesterday afternoon while on duty. Apoplexy is believed to be the cause of death.

Mr. Foley was 65 years old. He went to Elizabethport when the Singer company moved from New York and has been continually employed at the plant since. For some time past he had been employed as gardener at the factory yard in the summer and attended to the gate in the winter. He was in apparent good health up to the time of his death.

A wife, four daughters and one son survive him. He was a communicant of St. Patrick's church. The body was taken to the Foley home, 404 Magnolia avenue.

VOORHEES SOLD PAPERS WHEN A LITTLE BOY.

The slating of State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees, of Morristown, for another term in his present office, has brought out a review of his early life and the fact that he sold newspapers in Elizabeth as a boy. He advanced from a newsstand to a position in a hardware store, and in 1869 he moved to Morristown, where he became interested in politics and secured a place as clerk in the county clerk's office. In 1898 he became county clerk. He was reelected to that office, serving until his election as State treasurer. The State treasurer's office, carrying a $6,000 salary, was first occupied by "Uncle Dan" on February 19, 1907, when he was chosen to succeed Frank O. Briggs, who had resigned to become United States Senator.

HIGHER MAGAZINE P. O. RATES AND THE PRICE.

New York, Jan. 22.—Magazine owners in New York city, aroused over the effort of the postoffice department at Washington to bring about an increase in the postal rate for second class mail matter, have appointed a committee to take up their side of the matter. The committee declares that any advance in the postal rate will mean a general increase in the price of magazines to the purchaser. Periodicals which cannot for any reason increase their price will be compelled the committee says, to suspend publication.

The publishers say that they are prepared to show that the government is getting a fair postal rate for magazines at the present schedule.

STEVENS CLAIM PAYMENT URGED BY SENATOR KEAN.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The heirs of Durham White Stevens, for many years well known in diplomatic circles, and some time ago assassinated by a Korean fanatic, may eventually obtain a small claim for salary, which he tried in vain to collect for thirty years.

A bill to this end has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Kean, of New Jersey. It provides for payment to the Stevens heirs of $1,983.66. This sum was due Stevens for serving as charge d'affairs at Tokio from October 25, 1878, to May 21, 1879.

HAD HER HUSBAND ARRESTED.

Roselle Park, Jan. 22.—When arraigned before Justice of the Peace Noah Woodruff, Thursday night on a charge of non-support, William Munz, of Westfield avenue, said that he left his wife, who made the charge against him, because his place as the head of the family had been taken by a boarder, Joseph Matto. Munz said that he asked his wife why she did not send the children to Sunday-school and that she replied "none of your business." He also accused his wife of failing to provide a lunch for him and with locking him out when he attempted to return home after leaving home.

At the hearing Munz offered to live with his wife and support her, but she refused to take him back and left the courtroom in anger. It was decided that Munz support and provide for his children until Monday, when he is to report again to the court.

HIS OWN MEDICINE.

The Dose That Was Handed to the Persistent Agent.

He was a sewing machine agent of the most aggressive type. For twenty minutes the lady of the house had been awaiting an opportunity to say that she already possessed one.

At last he paused, only long enough, however, to thrust a card into the lady's hand.

The bit of pasteboard was certainly a novelty.

"My name is Sellem," it read, "of the firm of Blank & Co., sewing machine manufacturers, and I intend to prove to you that it is madness to defer purchasing one of our unequaled machines."

After a long description of the machine came the following:

"You may plead that you are unable to work a machine. I will remove that objection in fifteen minutes or in three lessons. Will call next Wednesday."

When the agent called again a six foot man opened the door and blandly remarked:

"You're the sewing machine man, I suppose?"

"Yes; I called last week, and"—

"Yes, I know," interrupted the big man. "You don't know me, I suppose. My name's Bury of Bury & Keepem, undertakers, and I intend to prove to you that it is madness to defer purchasing one of our unequaled coffins."

The agent began to edge away.

"You may plead that you are scarcely qualified for a coffin," the big man went on. "I will remove that objection in ten seconds."

But the agent simply tore from the house.—London Tit-Bits.

WHAT TO DO.

Hints on First Aid to Everybody on All Occasions.

When a man rushes into your office hurriedly and says:

"By jingo, Dawson, I hate to speak of it, but I need $500 like the very old dickens today!"

Answer.—"What a singular coincidence, Binks! I do too!"

When the lovely young maiden at the seaside to whom you have been paying court all summer shakes her head violently and says:

"No, Mr. Blithers; I cannot imagine any circumstances under which I could be induced to marry you."

Answer.—"Thanks, Miss Jones. This is a great relief. I was afraid you had misconstrued my attentions and, of course, desired to live up to my implied obligations."

When you run face to face with your tailor upon the street and he turns a cold, beady eye upon you and says:

"Excuse me, Mr. Bump, but what have you to say about my little bill?"

Answer.—"I don't think I have met your little Bill, Mr. Snipperton. Indeed, I didn't know you had any children at all."

While he is recovering from this jump into a taxi and proceed to break the speed laws.—Carlyle Smith in Harper's Weekly.

Relative Strength of Arms.

As a result of some very interesting experiments made at Washington with a view to determine the relative strength of right and left limbs it has been ascertained that over 50 per cent of the men examined had the right arm stronger than the left, 16.40 per cent had the arms of equal length and strength, and 32.70 per cent had the left arm stronger than the right. Of women 40.90 per cent had the right arm stronger than the left, and 24.50 per cent had the left stronger than the right. In order to arrive at the average length of limbs fifty skeletons were measured, twenty-five of each sex. Of these twenty-three had the right arm and left leg longer, six the left arm and right leg, while in seventeen cases all the members were more or less equal in length.—Exchange.

Disadvantages of Poverty.

"We're goin' to move again in a month or two," said the little girl on the back porch. "We move into a new house every year."

"We don't," said the little girl in the adjoining yard. "My papa owns this house."

"And you don't never move into any other one?"

"No."

"My, my! It must be awful to be as poor as that!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Reliable Plan.

"Whenever I don't like a man very well," remarked the cynical person, "I give him a tip on the races. I don't care how much it loses for him."

"But suppose it wins."

"Then he's unhappy because he didn't bet more."

"And if he doesn't bet at all?"

"I keep on giving tips until one does win, and then he feels as if he had missed the chance of his life."—Washington Star.

A Rialto View.

"Do you think a little Shakespeare would go as a vaudeville act?" inquired Hamlett Fatt.

"Why not?" responded Yorick Hafham. "Everybody feels that he has got to stand for it if it comes along. No man is going to admit that Shakespeare is over his head."—Washington Herald.

His Little Joke.

Percy—I—aw—wrestled foh an hour with me scarf this morning. Algernon—Which won the victory, deah boy, you or the scarf? Percy—Neither. Cawn't you see the match wesulted in a tie? Haw, haw!—Chicago News.

By Booth Tarkington

"I think," said Mme. Brossard—"I think one would call her Spanish, but she is very fat, not young, and with a great deal too much rouge."

She stopped with an audible intake of breath, staring at my friend's white face.

"M. Saffren and I leave at once," exclaimed Keredec. "I shall meet him on the road. He will not return to the inn. We go to—to Trouville. See that no one knows that we have gone until tomorrow, if possible. I shall leave fees for the servants with you. Go now, prepare your bill and bring it to me at once. I shall write you where to send our trunks. Quick! And you, my friend," he turned to me—"my friend, will you help us? For we need it!"

"Anything in the world!"

"Go to Pere Baudry. Have him put the least tired of his three horses to his lightest cart and wait in the road beyond the cottage. Stand in the road yourself while that is being done. Oliver will come that way. Detain him. I will join you there."

I strode to the door and out to the gallery. I was halfway down the steps before I saw that Oliver Saffren was already in the courtyard, coming toward me from the archway with a light and buoyant step.

He looked up, waving his hat to me, his face lighted with a happiness most remarkable and brighter even than the strong midsummer sunshine flaming over him. Dressed in white as he was and with the air of victory he wore, he might have been at that moment a

But entering from the road, upon the trail of Saffren and still in the shadow of the archway, I was startled to see the discordant fineries and hatchet face of the ex-pedestrian and tourist, my antagonist of the forest.

I had opened my mouth to call a warning.

"Hurry" was the word I would have said, but it stopped at "hur." The second syllable was never uttered.

There came a violent outcry, raucous and shrill as the wail of a captured hen, and out of the passage across the courtyard floundered a woman fantastically dressed in green and gold.

She was abundantly fat, double chinned, coarse, greasy, smeared with blue pencilings, carmine, enamel and rouge.

At the scream Saffren turned. She made straight at him, crying wildly:

"Enfin! Mon mari, mon mari—c'est moi! C'est ta femme, mon caeur!"

She threw herself upon him, her arms about his neck, with a tropical ferocity that was a very paroxysm of triumph.

"Embrasse moi, Larrabi! Embrasse moi!" she cried.

Horrified, outraged, his eyes blazing, he flung her off with a violence surpassing her own and with loathing unspeakable. She screamed that he was killing her, calling him "husband," and tried to fasten herself upon him again. But he leaped backward beyond the reach of her clutching hands and, turning, plunged to the steps and staggered up them, the woman following.

From above me leaned the stricken face of Keredec. He caught Saffren under the arm and half lifted him to the gallery, while she strove to hold him by the knees.

"O God!" gasped Saffren. "Is this the woman?"

The giant swung him across the gallery and into the open door with one great sweep of the arm, strode in after him and closed and bolted the door. The woman fell in a heap at the foot of the steps, uttering a cracked simulation of the cry of a broken heart.

"Name of a name of God!" she wailed. "After all these years! And my husband strikes me!"

Then it was that what had been in my mind as a monstrous suspicion became a certainty, for I recognized the woman. She was Mariana—la bella Mariana la Mursiana.

If I had ever known Larrabee Harman; if, instead of the two strange glimpses I had caught of him, I had been familiar with his gesture, walk, intonation; even perhaps if I had ever heard his voice, the truth might have come to me long ago.

Larrabee Harman!

"Oliver Saffren" was Larrabee Harman!

CHAPTER XI.

IF it were possible I would not speak of the agony of which I was a witness that night in the apartment of my friends at Mme. Brossard's. I went with reluctance, but there was no choice. Keredec had sent for me.

Keredec had told his tragic ward too little. The latter had understood but vaguely the nature of the catastrophe which overhung his return to France, and now that it was indeed concrete and definite the guardian was forced into fuller disclosures, every word making the anguish of the listener more intolerable. To him it seemed that he was being forced to suffer for the sins of another man.

"Do you think that you can make me believe I did this," he cried—"that I made life unbearable for her, drove her from me and took this hideous, painted old woman in her place? It's a lie! You can't make me believe such a monstrous lie as that! You can't! You can't!"

He threw himself violently upon the couch, face downward, shuddering from head to foot.

"My poor boy, it is the truth," said Keredec, kneeling beside him and putting a great arm across his shoulders. "It is what a thousand men are doing this night. Nothing is more common or more unexplainable—or more simple. Of all the nations it is the same, wherever life has become artificial and the poor foolish young men have too much money and nothing to do. You do not understand it, but our friend here, and I, we understand because we remember what we have been seeing all our lives. You say it is not you who did such crazy, horrible things, and you are right. When this poor woman who is so painted and greasy first caught you, when you began to give your money and your time and your life to her, when she got you into this horrible marriage with her, you were blind—you went staggering in a bad dream. Your soul hid away, far down inside you, with its hands over its face. If it could have once stood straight, if the eyes of your body could have once been clean for it to look through, if you could have once been as you are today or as you were when you were a little child, you would have cry out with horror both of her and of yourself, as you do now, and you would have run away from her and from everything you had put in your life. But in your suffering you must rejoice. The triumph is that your mind hates that old life as greatly as your soul hates it. You are as good as if you had never been the wild fellow—yes, the wicked fellow—that you were. For a man who shakes off his sin is clean. He stands as pure as if he had never sinned."

The desperate young man on the couch answered only with the sobbing of a broken hearted child.

I came back to my pavilion after midnight, but I did not sleep, though I lay upon my bed until dawn. Then I went for a long, hard walk, breakfasted at Dives and begged a ride back to Mme. Brossard's in a peasant's cart which was going that way.

I found George Ward waiting for me on the little veranda of the pavilion, looking handsomer and more prosperously distinguished and distinguishedly prosperous and generally well conditioned than ever, as I told him.

"I have some news for you," he said after the hearty greeting—"an announcement, in fact. Elizabeth's going to marry Cresson Ingle."

"That is the news—the announcement—you spoke of?"

"Yes, that is it."

To save my life I could not have told at that moment what else I had expected or feared that he might say, but I certainly took a deep breath of relief. "I am very glad," I said. "It should be a happy alliance."

"On the whole, I think it will be," he returned thoughtfully. "Ingle's done his share of hard living, and I once had a notion"—he glanced smilingly at me—"well, I dare say you know my notion. But it is a good match for Elizabeth and not without advantages on many counts. You see, it's time I married, myself. She feels that very strongly, and I think her decision to accept Ingle is partly due to her wish to make all clear for a new mistress of my household."

He laughed again, but I did not, and, noting my silence, he turned upon me a more scrutinizing look than he had yet given me and said:

"You look quite haggard. You haven't been ill?"

"No; I've had a bad night. That's all."

"Oh, I heard something of a riotous scene taking place over here," he said. "One of the gardeners was talking about it to Elizabeth."

"What was it you heard?" I asked quickly.

"He said that there was great excitement at Mme. Brossard's because a strange woman had turned up and claimed an insane young man for her husband."

"Damnation!" I started from my chair. "Did Mrs. Harman hear this story?"

"Not last night, I'm certain. But what difference could it possibly make whether she heard it or not? She doesn't know these people surely?"

"She knows the man."

"This insane"—

"He is not insane," I interrupted. "He has lost the memory of his earlier life—lost it through an accident. You and I saw the accident."

"That's impossible," said George, frowning. "I never saw but one accident that you"—

"That was the one. The man is Larrabee Harman."

George had struck a match to light a cigar, but the operation remained incomplete. He dropped the match upon the floor and set his foot upon it. "Well, tell me about it," he said.

"You haven't heard anything about him since the accident?"

"Only that he did eventually recover and was taken away from the hospital. I heard that his mind was impaired. Does Louise"—he began, stopped and cleared his throat. "Has Mrs. Harman heard that he is here?"

"Yes; she has seen him."

"Do you mean the scoundrel has been bothering her? Elizabeth didn't tell me of this."

"Your sister doesn't know," I said. "I think you ought to understand the whole case."

"Go ahead," he bade me.

"He's not at all what you think," I said. "There's an enormous difference, almost impossible to explain to you, but something you'd understand at once if you saw him."

"What is the change?" asked Ward, and his voice showed that he was greatly disquieted. "What is he like?"

"As well as I can tell you, he's like an odd but very engaging boy, with something pathetic about him; quite splendidly handsome"—

"Oh, he had good looks to spare when I first knew him," George said bitterly.

"No. When he came here he did not know of her existence except in the vaguest way. But, to go back to that, I'd better tell you first that the woman we saw with him one day on the boulevard and who was in the accident with him"—

"La Mursiana, the dancer; I know."

"She had got him to go through a marriage with her."

"What?" Ward's eyes flashed as he shouted the word.

"It seems inexplicable; but, as I understand it, he was never quite sober at that time. He had begun to use drugs and was often in a half stupefied condition. As a matter of fact, the woman did what she pleased with him. There's no doubt about the validity of the marriage."

George asked suddenly, "Did this marriage take place in France?"

"Yes; you'd better hear me through," I remonstrated. "When he was taken from the hospital he was placed in charge of a Professor Keredec, a madman of whom you've probably heard."

"Madman? Why, no; he's a member of the institute, a psychologist or metaphysician, isn't he? At any rate, of considerable celebrity."

"Nevertheless," I insisted grimly, "as misty a vaporer as I ever saw; a poetic, self contradicting and inconsistent orator. Harman's aunt put him in Keredec's charge, and he was taken up into the Tyrol and virtually hidden for two years, the idea being literally to give him something like an education. Keredec's phrase is, 'restore mind to his soul.' It was as vital to get him out of his horrible wife's clutches. But she picked up that rat in the garden out yonder—he'd been some sort of stable manager for Harman once—and set him on the track."

"She wants money, of course."

"Yes; more money. A fair allowance has always been sent to her. Keredec has interviewed her notary, and she wants a settlement, naming a sum actually larger than the whole estate amounts to. She refuses to budge until this impossible settlement is made. In the meantime Keredec's ward is in so dreadful a state of horror and grief I am afraid it is possible that his mind may really give way."

"When was it that Louise saw him?"

"Ah, that," I said, "is where Keredec has been a poet and a dreamer indeed. It was his plan that they should meet."

"You mean he brought this wreck of Harman, these husks and shreds of a man, down here for Louise to see?" Ward cried incredulously. "Oh, monstrous!"

"There is something behind all this that you don't know," he said slowly. "When did Keredec make you his confidant?"

"Last night. Most of what I learned was as much a revelation to his victim as it was to me. Harman did not know till then that the lady he had been meeting has been his wife or that he had ever seen her before he came here. He had mistaken her name, and she did not enlighten him."

"Meeting?" said Ward harshly.

"They have been meeting every day, George."

"I won't believe it."

"It's true. He spoke to her in the woods one day; I was there and saw it. I know now that she knew him at once, and she ran away, but not in anger. They've been together every day since then, and I'm afraid—miserably afraid, Ward—that her old feeling for him has been revived."

I have heard Ward use an oath only two or three times in my life, and this was one of them.

"Oh, by ——!" he cried, starting to his feet. "I should like to meet Professor Keredec."

"I am at your service, my dear sir," said a deep voice from the veranda. And, opening the door, the professor walked into the room.

CHAPTER XII.

I SAID cavalierly: "This is Mr. Ward, Professor Keredec. He is Mrs. Harman's cousin and close friend. We were speaking of your reasons for bringing Mr. Harman to this place. Frankly, we were questioning your motives."

"My motives? I have wished to restore to two young people the paradise which they had lost."

Ward uttered an exclamation none the less violent because it was half suppressed.

"We should be glad of an explanation," he said, resting his arms on my table and leaning across it toward Keredec.

"It is simple," began the professor. "I learned my poor boy's history well from those who could tell me, from his papers—yes, and from the bundles of old time letters which were given me. From all these I learned what a beautiful soul was that lady who loved him so much that she ran away from her home for his sake. Helas! He was already the slave of what was bad and foolish; he had gone too far from himself, was overlaid with the habit of evil, and she could not save him then. The spirit was dying in him, although it was there, and it was good"—

Ward's acrid laughter rang out in the room.

"The inconceivable selfishness, the devilish brutality of it!" Ward's face was scarlet. "You didn't care how you sacrificed her"—

"Sacrificed!" The professor suddenly released the huge volume of his voice. "Sacrificed!" he thundered. "If I could give him back to her as he is now it would be restoring to her all that she had loved in him, the real self of him! It would be the greatest gift in her life."

"Then, my dear Keredec," I answered, "either you are really insane or I am! You knew that this poor, unfortunate devil of a Harman was tied to that hyenic prowler yonder who means to fatten on him and will never release him; you knew that. Then why did you bring him down here to fall in love with a woman he can never have?"

"My dear fellow," interposed George quickly, "you underrate Professor Keredec's shrewdness. He knows that my cousin Louise never obtained a divorce from her husband."

"What?" I said, amazed.

"I say Mrs. Harman never obtained a divorce."

"I saw notices of it at the time," I gasped.

"No. What you saw was that she had made an application for divorce. Her family got her that far and then she revolted. The suit was dropped."

"It is true, indeed," said Keredec. "The poor boy was on the other side of the world, and he thought it was granted."

I turned upon him sharply. "You knew it?"

"It is a year that I have known it."

"Do you not understand?" George interposed, "that what Professor Keredec risked for his 'poor boy' in returning to France was a trial on the charge of bigamy?"

The professor recoiled from the definite brutality.

"I conceive it very likely to happen," said George, "unless you get him out of the country before the lady now installed here as his wife discovers the truth."

"But she must not!" Keredec lifted both hands toward Ward appealingly. They trembled. "She cannot! There is nothing that could make her suspect it!"

"One particular thing would be my telling her," said Ward quietly.

"Never!" cried the professor. "You would not do that!"

"I will, unless you get him out of the country, and quickly."

"George!" I exclaimed, coming forward between them. "This won't do at all! You can't!"—

DOING THEIR DUTY.

Scores of Plainfield Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.

When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.

Backache and many kidney ills follow;

Urinary trouble, diabetes.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all.

Plainfield people endorse our claim.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenu, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Though I have had no occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills in the past few years, I value them as highly as ever. My kidneys were weak for years and I suffered severely from backache. I was unable to sleep well and when I arose in the morning, my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Every cold I caught settled in my kidneys and aggravated my suffering. I doctored but the medicines I used did me no good. At yength I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procuring a supply at Randolph's Pharmacy, I began taking them. They went directly to the seat of my trouble, disposing of the pains and making me feel like a different person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agnts for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I Wish to Express My Thanks for the courteous and prompt settlement of the claim on my sister's life," writes a Brooklyn beneficiary. "Two years ago she neglected to pay the premium and the policy was cancelled. She destroyed the policy, thinking it no good. After her death I was informed that this policy was protected by the extended insurance for the full amount, and the same was paid to me."

SOMERVILLE ARMORY IS FORMALLY OPENED

The new armory of Company M was formally opened at Somerville last night with a brilliant reception and dance. Governor Fort was unable to attend. The guests were Senator Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county, and the members of the State Military Board. Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of the Second regiment, and his staff were present. Winkler's Second Regiment Band, of Trenton, gave a concert.

A dress drill by Company M. preceded the dance. It was the first public appearance of the company in the new drill hall. After the reception Colonel Dungan entertained at dinner the members of the Military Board and the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Somerset county.

Captain Albert E. Case and his company received their guests in the large drill room, which was used for a receiving hall and also for the dancing. This was lighted with four big electric lights. The committee having charge the reception for the company comprised Lieutentnt Joseph V. Woodruff, Sergeant John D. Brandt and Corporal Frank L. Brokaw.

TWO CONFERENCES ARE CALLED MY MAYOR FISK.

There are certain important questions to come before the Common Council which must be taken up at an early date, according to Mayor Fisk, who has sent out invitations to about one hundred of the largest taxpayers to meet him in conference on Wednesday night to discuss these questions.

The Mayor has promised to make the session a lively one. If it should be decided that it is for the best interest of the city to undertake these matters, which are not divulged at present, it will involve the expenditure of considerable money.

Mr. Fisk says he has also arranged for another conference to be held on Friday night, at the Council room also, of the representatives of the various public and private medical and charitable relief agencies of the city, to consider plans for co-operation, with a view to securing the maximum of general efficiency at the minimum of expense.

MILITIA ON ARMY BASIS; DICK LAW IS IN EFFECT

The famous "Dick law," which nationalizes, so to speak, the militia organizations of the various States by placing them upon the same footing as the regular army and making them a National military organization subsidiary to the regular army in case of war, went into effect today. This law, framed by United States Senator General Charles iDck, of Ohio, was originally passed by Congress in 1903 and was intended to become operative at once. It was readily seen, however, that the States could not change their systems so soon, and that much time would be needed for the reorganization. Then it was decided that the law should go into effect in 1908, but when the five years had elapsed it was found that even then several of the States, among them Pennsylvania and Delaware, were not quite ready for the change and the time was once more extended to January 21, 1910.

The law provides that the militia shall consist of every able-bodied male citizen of the respective States and territories and the District of Columbia, a nd every able-bodied male of foreign birth who has declared his intention to become a citizen, who is more than 18 and less than 45 years of age, and shall be divided into two classes, the organized militia and the reserve militia. The regularly enlisted, organized, and uniformed active militia in the several States and territories and the District of Columbia who have heretofore participated or shall hereafter participate in the apportionment of the annual appropriation, shall constitute the organized militia and shall, from now on, have the same organization, armament and discipline as that which is now or may hereafter be prescribed for the regular army of the United States, subject in time of peace to such general exceptions as may be authorized by the Secretary of War.

HE OWNS DONKEY, DIDN'T KNOW IT.

Supervising Principal Arthur L. Johnson, of the Cranford schools, is the proud owner of a donkey. The animal was presented to him last summer while he was touring Ireland in the interests of industrial education.

Principal Johnson forgot that he owned the donkey until yesterday, when he received a letter from his foreign friend telling him that the donkey is still in Ireland awaiting his orders. Principal Johnson is considering whether or not to have the donkey brought to his home at Cranford.

Assessor Swackhamer has threatened to assess the donkey dog tax when it arrives.

First Grand Ball.

The first grand ball of the Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, will be held in Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, January 28. The music will be furnished by Suhr's Imperial orchestra. The proceeds will go toward entertaining the typographical union convention here in the spring. The committee in charge compromises C. W. Francisco, M. A. Nichols and F. C. Putnam.

MELTING SNOW SWELLS THE BROOK STREAMS

Residents along the line of Greenbrook from Feltville to Dunellen are making preparations for a freshet which is bound to occur in the next few days. Owners of the Feltville mill yesterday took steps toward protection from damage from a possible overflow by cutting the ice in huge cakes and forcing it over the dam.

The moderated weather, accompanied by the rain of yesterday, had a tendency to wipe out the snow in this city and borough, but the mountain streams are expected to create considerable trouble within the next few days if the temperature remains as it has been for the last two days.

Pedestrians in this city experienced a lot of difficult in reaching their homes last night between the icy surface and submerged sidewalks and few escaped getting to their domiciles without getting wet feet.

The streams in Washington Valley, which are fed from the mountain rivulets are swollen, and the residents along Stony Brook are fearful of the results of the melting of the snow. Greenbrook, in this city, so far has displayed no tendency to overflow its banks, but considerable apprehension is felt among those who live in properties on the stream.

All danger of a flood or unusual high water at Bound Brook is now past and the residents of that place are greatly relieved. About 11:45 o'clock last night the immense quantity of ice stored up in the river near the town began to move slowly, and by an early hour this morning it was pretty well cleaned out.

With the gradual removal of the ice the water receded to its natural course and prevented the unexpected overflow into the town streets. Yesterday afternoon the situation was so grave that it was feared that dynamiting would have to be resorted to so that the ice could be started. Watchers were appointed to stay up last night to watch the conditions. When the ice began to move at 11:45 there was general rejoicing and the news spread rapidly throughout the town.

BOYCOTT BUTCHERS THROUGH THE COUNTRY

These are the States in which the boycott against meat because of the high prices is rapidly spreading: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Maryland, Delaware, Connecticut, Michigan, Massachusetts, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin.

Labor unions are taking the lead in most of the large cities in declaring a meat boycott.

In St. Louis forty-two doctors have advised workmen that it will be generally beneficial to refrain from eating meat for a time. In Connecticut workmen have included butter and eggs in the boycott pending reductions in prices. In Cleveland, where the boycott began, the first result has been obtained, dealers reducing the price of pork two cents a pound. New York has joined in the crusade.

Asbury Park is to join the boycott on high food prices. With a view to having the New Jersey Legislature pass resolutions calling upon the people to abstain from eating meat for a period of sixty days, resolutions are to be introduced in many of the lodges of the city urging the members to stop eating meat for sixty days and urging Senator Oliver H. Brown, of Spring Lake, to begin the crusade in the Senate.

The first of the resolutions was adopted last night by Asbury Council, Jr. O. U. A. M. Other organizations will soon follow suit, it is said.

SECOND CABINET SESSION IS HELD BY THE MAYOR.

The question of defining the banks of Green brook in the city was the principal topic for consideration at the meeting of Mayor Fisk and his cabinet at the weekly conference held yesterday afternoon. Certain improvements are desired, but until the exact lines are defined nothing can be done. The Mayor has tried to ascertain the facts, but has failed. It is understood that the property owners along the brook own to the middle of the stream, but just where the banks are located according to the law cannot be determined at this time.

The matter has been referred to Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh with a request for an opinion as to what to do and how to proceed. For sometime there has been a desire to make improvements along the brook in the city and borough. The Freeholders have disclaimed jurisdiction and the city and borough authorities have likewise shirked the responsibility not knowing their powers. Now it is hoped that definite information may be secured.

Gave a Sleighing Party.

DUNELLEN FIREMEN TURN OUT IN NEW UNIFORMS

Dunellen's volunteer firemen had a gala time in their new uniforms last night despite the inclement weather. In November the department placed an order for uniforms, the first in the history in the department, and last night was the date set for the "coming out" occasion. Arrangements had been made to make it a big affair and invitations were extended to all nearby firemen to participate in the festivities, but owing to the storm only a few representatives from out of town companies were present.

The rain kept Mayor W. A. Sanford at home, but nearly all of the living ex-Mayors and councilman of the borough were present. There was plenty doing in the line of speechmaking and one of the best addresses of the evening was made by former Mayor Harry Swackhammer. Mr. Swackhammer took the opportunity to congratulate the progress of the company and its efficient service rendered to the borough since its organization.

Chief C. M. Wyhuskey also gave an interesting talk in which he advocated the purchase and installation of a water pressure meter, with a daily dial, and telephone connections. The suggestion of Chief Wyhuskey was instigated by the conditions of water supply prevailing at the fire at the Hall Printing Press Works last Saturday, when the firemen were handicapped by a low pressure of water. Chief Wyhuskey's suggestion was favorably received and the company will ask the Council at its next meeting to purchase a water pressure meter.

Several members of the company also made speeches of a reminescent nature. Following the oratorical fireworks the firemen and their guests enjoyed a repast which was enjoyed by all. The committee in charge of the celebration consisted of Harry Shugar, Charles H. Dodwell, William Brokaw and Charles E. Vail.

EVERETT PECK WEDS MISS CORNELIA KAHLE

Miss Cornelia Kahle, daughter of Mrs. Marcell Kahle, of West New Brighton, S. I., and Everett Peck, son of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, were married at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at St. Luke's Episcopal church, New Brighton, only the relatives and few intimate friends being present. Rev. Dr. Frost, rector of the church, officiated. A reception followed at the home of the bride's mother.

This morning the couple left for Bermuda, where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will reside here. Mr. Peck is a patent lawyer with offices in New York city.

Boom in Local Real Estate.

The Home Real Estate Company yesterday purchased the residential property at Watchung avenue and East Second street, owned by Mrs. Mary Stevens; also the Baker estate on East Second street, nearly opposite fire headquarters. This boom in real estate in that vicinity is due to the announcement made in The Daily Press yesterday that the Government had purchased property on Watchung avenue for the new Federal building.

Dr. Francis L. Patton to Preach.

Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, will preach at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tomorrow morning and night.

Two big games are carded at the Y. M. C. A. tonight. Red Bank will play the first team and the Loeser Brothers team, of Elizabeth, will be the opponents of the second team.

CARS THAT HAVE MADE GOOD

Automobile buyers might be pardoned if they felt a little bit bewildered right now. There are so many new cars being announced and so many radical claims being made for them, that buyers are apt to be a little up in the air.

You can't make a mistake if you buy a car of established reputation. A car that has stamped upon it a big, successful reliable name. A car with a record. A car that the people have bought in quantities.

You might make a mistake buying some other kind of a car. A new car may be a good car, but no one knows that it is until it has been thoroughly tried out.

You take no risk when you buy a Chalmers-Detroit car. Our cars have made good for years.

In two seasons of Motor contests Chalmers-Detroit stock cars have won 89 firsts, 32 seconds and 21 thirds. "The Motor Age "Record" gives the Chalmers-Detroits title of the Champion cars of the year.

Orders for more than two-thirds of our entire allotment for 1910 have already been booked. We believe all remaining spring deliveries will be booked at the end of the Garden Show week.

BRIDGE WHIST TABOOED

But Mrs. Mary Wilkins Book Has Nothing to do With Reform.

ALL METUCHEN IS STIRRED.

Social Calendar Erased — Players Are "Conscious Stricken"— Hubby Will Save Money By the New Edict.

No more will there be bridge whist parties in Metuchen. No more will husbands be asked to draw checks for incidentals several times a week, and no more will women borrow small sums from one another. Bridge whist has been tabooed. In fact, it has been wiped off the social calendar as completely as if the game never existed.

Just what brought about this radical change, and whist, bridge whist, of course, used to be so popular, none of the women will state. They are emphatic, however, in denouncing as untrue that the book of Mrs. Mary Wilkins Freeman, who is a resident of Metuchen, has anything to do with their determination not to play bridge. Mrs. Freeman's book is "The Winning Lady," a satire on women who play bridge for prizes. She declares, it is stated by society women, that the book does not refer to the Metuchen women who play the game. It just generalizes bridge whist players, of course, so the club women say.

When the advance notices of Mrs. Freeman's book appeared several months ago, Metuchen was interested in learning that the chief story concerned a suburban bridge whist club in whichone woman went to desperate ends to win a cut glass punch bowl. Conscience stricken by her success, she went several days later to the hostess of the club and told her that there was something wrong about the prize. The hostess flushed up, Mrs. Freeman narrates, and finally confessed that the prize was not cut glass, but only the ordinary kind, cheap at $2.98. Both were culprits and the social felony was compounded no one being the wiser.

Neighboring places asked if Mrs. Freeman could be referring to Metuchen, and when the book was published copies were eagerly sought. To Metuchen's satisfaction it was found there were no local types and that the scene of action might have been in Plainfield, Scotch Plains, New Brunswick, or any of the places adjacent to Metuchen. The story might even have taken place in New England, where Mrs. Freeman resided when she was known only as Mary E. Wilkins, before she married Dr. Freeman, of Metuchen. That closed the incident, except for the disappointment expressed by some persons who thought that Mrs. Freeman would some day "show up" New Jersey scenes and characters.

Ever since Mrs. Freeman moved to New Jersey it has been expected that she would picture New Jersey types, but each volume has been impersonal and eager and minute searching of her writings has not revealed one jot of what Henry Mills Alden, also a resident of Metuchen's literary colony, has termed "focussed local color." Miss Carolyn Wells, who is another resident of the section, has stated that she has found no indication of it, either.

ELSIE JANIS TONIGHT.

Elsie Janis, the dainty little comedienne, who won all the favor critics had to bestow when she appeared here last in "The Hoyden," is coming to the Plainfield theatre tonight in "The Fair Co-Ed." This youngest of American stars has achieved the most brilliant career of any girl of her age before the public. Only twenty years old, Miss Janis has attained a position in her profession both as regards artistic prominence, and financial emolument, which is seldom reached by any actress before she is well along in the thirties. Of course, little Miss Janis' marvelous talent for impersonatoins gave her a good start toward almost any kind of a dramatic career she might essay to adopt.

Miss Borrup Surprised.

Miss Carrie Borrup was tendered a surprise party Saturday night at her home on Central street. The affair, which was arranged by her sister, Miss Helen Borrup, was a most successful one, Miss Borrup finding about thirty of her friends present to greet her upon her return from a trip downtown. She was equal to the occasion, however, and after the first shock was over was ready to welcome all and played the part of hostess to perfection. Games and music were the features of the evening's pleasures, after which refreshments were served.

HE ASKS ASSISTANCE FOR HEAVENLY REST

Prior to the preaching service at Grace church yesterday morning, the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, made an urgent appeal to his parishioners to assist the Church of the Heavenly Rest. He said that he had always felt that Grace church should be well represented in the western end of the city and in view of the excellent work being done there, he knew that his people would respond to his appeal.

Mr. Stevenson said that the total yearly receipts at the church in question last year were $1,200 from which amount the rector has to be paid. This he said was not sufficient in an expensive city like this. Then there is a possibility of $200 being cut off from the receipts this year, which he hoped would be met by his parishioners.

STATE LABOR MEN FIRE FIRST GUN IN BEEF WAR

Union men of New Jersey joined the ranks of their Western brethren in protest against the rise in prices of meat, butter and eggs yesterday when the executive board of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, representing 100,000 workmen, adopted resolutions calling upon organized labor in the State to use any practical plan to better present conditions.

The solution of the problem was left entirely to the various labor associations which comprise the federation yesterday, no definite method was outlined, but the Meat Trust was roundly scored as "an unrelenting union hater," and denounced as the principal factor in the present general suffering. Although no plan was outlined, it was made clear in the resolutions that the federation would approve of any practical plan of relieving consumers of the exactions now forced from them by the food trusts of the country.

APPEALS FOR HELP FOR ITS CHAPELS

The Session of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church at the services yesterday, distributed a statement of the financial condition as regards the support given to Hope, Warren and Bethel chapels during the past five years, in order that the members might know how much has been actually appropriated by the church for the chapels and the amounts contributed by the chapels toward their own support. The figures given below are for last year:

Contributed by Bethel chapel, $576.26; contributed by Crescent Avenue church, $1,120.07; contributed by Hope chapel, $2,519.29; contributed by Crescent Avenue church, $2,035.04; contributed by Warren chapel, $2,933.29; contributed by Crescent Avenue church, $2,120.99.

The total amount contributed in 1905 by the chapels, $4,234.26; by the Crescent Avenue church, $5,561.69; 1909, contributed by chapels, $6,028.84; by Crescent Avenue church, $5,276.10, making a grand total of $11,304.94.

The statement says that there is a continued deficiency in the chapel fund, extending over a period of years, which now aggregate about $2,500. An opportunity is given all members of the church and the chapels to subscribe toward this fund that the deficiency may be met and liquidated.

Mike Heffernan in Bad.

Michael Heffernan was arrested at the Plainfield depot on Saturday night for drunkenness. Heffernan resisted stoutly to being arrested and it took the combined efforts of Patrolmen Saffron and Anderson to land him in the lockup. This morning in court Judge Runyon gave Heffernan the choice of paying a twenty dollar fine or spending forty days in the county jail. Heffernan was arrested on a similar charge last October by Patrolman McDonald when sentence was suspended.

Negro Held for Theft.

Lynn, of the Iroquois Hotel, Thomas Johnson, colored, was arrested at his home in the rear of French's Mills on Saturday night by Detective Sergeant John Flynn. In court this morning Johnson was remanded for a further hearing tomorrow morning. Lynn charges that Johnson took the money early Saturday morning when the former returned to the hotel after closing up his pool room on West Front street.

CANON MACNAB'S SERMON

Canadian Clergyman Preaches at Grace Episcopal Church.

THE REAL CONQUERER CHRIST.

The Saviour Won the World—One Who Is Friend of the World Is an Enemy of Christ.

Rev. Alexander Macnab, resident canon of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, Canada, preached at Grace church yesterday instead of the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson. Canon Macnab was closely associated with the late Archbishop of Ontario, Dr. Sweatman, who died a year ago.

Canon Macnab took for the theme of his discourse the words, "Be of Good Cheer, I Have Overcome the World." He pictured Christ as the conqueror of the world, although so far as known he never had a sword in His hand. He referred to many so-called conquerors, including Napoleon Bonaparte, who sighed because there were no more worlds to conqueror, but with Christ the regimentals were supplanted by the Cross, and under the standard of the Cross, Christ conquered the world.

The preacher said that some people felt as though the world had overcome Christ, but this he said was not so. There were dark days when a person needs all the help and strength possible, and it is then that a Christian not boastfully, but hopefully should look to Christ to overcome the evil one. He said that many were familiar with the saying that every man has his price, but of course, they did not believe it. The world often praises men who have never been on their knees in prayer. The smiles of the world are dangerous. One who is a friend of the world is an enemy of God.

In conclusion the preacher urged his hearers to let their light shine, and to walk humbly before God at all times, unmindful of the charms of the world which only tend to lead one astray.

FRED IVAMY'S NEPHEW IS DEAD IN LONDON.

Fred Ivamy, of West Second street, has received information concerning the death in London, England, of his nephew, Harvey Greenaway, one of the best known sporting writers in London. He died about ten days ago at Guy's Hospital from inflamation of the brain.

Mr. Greenaway was for many ears the principal cricket reporter for the Exchange Telegraph Company, of London, and was not only a painstaking and accurate reporter, but his skill in telegraphy enabled him to transmit with great celerity over the Exchange Company wire a lengthy description, often reaching 3,000 words, of the particular event which engaged his attention. He was in the habit of carrying an autograph book with him during the summer months. This belonged to his little daughter, and the book was filled with signatures and comments of many well-known journalists and players. Mr. Greenaway was ill for three days.

Mrs. St. John was Miss Julia Shinn, for seven years a successful teacher in the Kemendine Girls' School, Burma, and later secretary of the Home Department of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Board at Boston.

She had become despondent over the protracted illness of her son Frederick, nineteen years old, and frequently said she would kill herself if he did not recover.

The banquet and installation of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of New Jersey, was held at the Hotel Navarre, Newark, last night. Samuel Rothberg, of this city, is the president-elect, and among the speakers was Judge William Newcorn, of this city. There were about seventy-five guests.

IMPORTANT MEETING ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

It is expected that there will be a hearty response to Mayor Fisk's public invitation for the larger taxpayers to meet him at the Common Council chamber on Wednesday night when there will be "something doing." The municipality's executive has several important matters to lay before the people at that time. Each of these will involve a large expenditure of money and consequently before anything is done he desires to feel the public pulse. Free expression of opinion is what the mayor desires and he will be guided, he says, entirely by that opinion. As the accommodations at the Councilmanic chamber are somewhat limited, his honor has sent out but one hundred invitations and these are to the largest taxpayers. But it should be understood, he states, that anyone is cordially welcome and will be given an opportunity to speak.

There is some mystery as yet as to what the important matters really are. It is known, however, that among them will be the proposition to abandon the present sewage disposal plant and to build one outside of the city's limits which will answer the needs now and for a long time in the future. Whether the question of public ownership of the water supply will be brought up at that time is not known. The commission's report has never been formally approved by the Common Council and it is still debatable whether the people should either buy the private concern's plant or build one.

From the Mayor's friends, it was learned today, that there is a far more important matter to be presented to the taxpayers at that time. The Mayor himself will not talk about the subject. "Come around on Wednesday night and you'll get a good story," is the way he dismissed the matter when talking with a reporter.

This will be the first of several such meetings to be called by Mr. Fisk, according to his own statement "I will go ahead with nothing that means expense to the people, unless I find that they first approve of it," he declared.

WILLIAM F. HALL DEAD

Former Assemblyman Passes Away at Cranford Yesterday.

ONCE A BIG POLITICIAN.

Member of Legislature in 1902—Prominent in Home Town—Aged Forty-three Years.

After an illness of several weeks, former Assemblyman William F. Hall died at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at his home at Cranford. His death was due to a complication of diseases. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

Mr. Hall was one of the most prominent politicians in Union county. He was a member of the Union County Republican Committee, and was a member of the county executive committee. In addition he was a member of the executive committee of Cranford, a position which he had held for many years. Mr. Hall was elected a member of the Assembly from Union in 1902. At that time he was chairman of the Cranford committee, but resigned because he would be compelled to spend some of his time in Trenton. He retained, however, his membership in the city committee.

Former Assemblyman Wm. F. Hall.

Former Assemblyman Hall was born in New York 43 years ago. He went to Cranford about twelve years ago, and immediately took an active interest in politics. He organized the Cranford Golf Club, which is now one of the most influential golf clubs in this section of the State. He was a member of the Cranford Casino and of the Elizabeth Lodge of Elks. Before coming to Cranford he was a member of the New York Athletic Club, and for three years held the title of championship boxer of the organization.

After being graduated from the public schools he entered the wholesale dry goods business. In a few years he became an expert in cotton goods. In addition to being an expert salesman he was also a well-versed seller. He rose rapidly, and several years ago formed the Metropolitan Dry Goods Company, with Samuel McShack, who died three years ago. He then formed a partnership with Emanuel Carago'. The latter died a year ago, and the firm was made a corporation, with Mr. Hall one of the heads.

Although he had been suffering for several months, it was not until two or three weeks ago that he was forced to give up his business. He was a son of John E. Hall, of New York. He leaves a widow and four children. Gladys, William F., Jr., Jeanette and Charles. He also leaves a brother, George Hall, a Philadelphia newspaper man, and a sister, Countess Edholm, of Sweden.

Services at Hope chapel.

Rev. L. R. Howard occupied his pulpit at Hope chapel yesterday morning, returning on Saturday from Atlanta, Ga., where he conducted evangelistic services at Atlanta University. Mr. Howard spoke briefly of his visit in the south. The evening service was in charge of G. R. Munroe, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League. Miss Bertha A. Jones was the organist at both services, in the absence of Mrs. L. R. Howard, who played at Warren chapel for Mrs. McKelvey.

MRS. CATHERINE ZELLER, AGED EIGHTY-NINE, DEAD

Mrs. Catharine Zeller died at her home on Center street, Dunellen, on Saturday, aged eighty-nine years. Mrs. Zeller was a native of Germany and had been a resident of Plainfield and vicinity for about forty years and was well known here. Five years ago she removed to Dunellen where she lived with a son, Theodore Zeller. Five other children survive her, Mrs. Josephine Burns, a daughter, of Brooklyn; and four other sons, John A., of this city; George, of Brooklyn, Joseph, of New York, and Frank, of Chicago.

The funeral services will be conducted tomorrow. A service will be held at her late home at 9:15 o'clock and a requiem mass will be celebrated at St. John's church by the recor, Rev. Edward Dunphy, at 10 o'clock. Interment will be made at St. Mary's cemetery in this city.

PRESBYTERIANS HEAR THE REV. F. L. PATTON

A large congregation greeted the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, president of Princeton Seminary, who occupied the pulpit at the Crescent Avenue church yesterday morning. Dr. Patton preached a powerful sermon, the text of his discourse being "Pressing forward to the mark of the high calling of Christ Jesus our Lord."

Dr. Patton dwelt at length on the life of St. Paul, after the apostle's conversion. He urged his hearers to do as St. Paul did, to forget their sins and forthcomings, and press forward to the high mark. In trying to emulate this example, Dr. Patton declared, it would offer encouragement to others in their efforts to lead Christian lives.

The course that St. Paul pursued, Dr. Patton declared, had resulted in the winning of thousands of souls over to the Master's cause. This grand work could be repeated in this age if the Christians would follow St. Paul's example.

C. W. M'CUTCHEN TO PRESIDE AT MEETING

HOPE CHAPEL JUNIORS DEFEAT THE FAIRVIEWS.

The Hope chapel juniors defeated the Fairview A. C. in an exciting basketball contest on Saturday night by the score of 27 to 26. At the end of the first half the score stood 14 to 10 in favor of the Fairviews, but in the final round, the Hope chapelites forced matters and finally squeezed over the line a winner with one point to the good. The lineup:

SCORES TRUST BARONS

Clergyman Says That Awakening of Social Righteousness is Sorely Needed.

MEN SELL THEIR CONSCIENCES.

Do as Corporations What They Would Scorn as Individuals—Result is High Cost of Living.

Having in mind the fabulously high cost of living, Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, delivered a special sermon last night on the rule of the trust barons, who monopolize the necessities of life and bring distress to the poor of the land. He did not specifically mention the beef trust, but from the tenor of his remarks it is evident that he had been prompted by its conduct to speak to his people as he did.

The clergyman said in part:

"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done in earth as it is done in heaven." You recognize this as part of the Lord's Prayer. You use it as your prayer and you teach it to your children. But think of all you pray for when you utter these words. The kingdom of God is the rule of God, in our heart and in society. The rule of God is not fully realized in the world as yet, but you pray that you may more and more recognize God as King. The purpose of the Gospel is not only to bring men to heaven but to bring heaven down to earth. In the Lord's Prayer, we pray that heavenly principles may govern our social, business and political life as well as our individual life.

Much of the business of the world, today, is in what Emerson called the "quadruped state." For the same principles which govern the lower animals when seeking for a living govern men in their business. There are men who "in private life are model citizens but who will do as members of a corporation what they would scorn to do as individuals; because they have sold out their conscience to a combine. We have had great religious awakenings in the past. We have hopes that the next great awakening will be as Josiah Strong says it will be, the awakening to social righteousness.

We are living in strange times. The cost of the necessaries of life are becoming fabulously high. Many reasons have been given for the present increased cost of living. Some have said that it is due to the increased supply of gold. Others have found a reason in our extravagance. Another thinks that he has found a reason in the tariff, etc. I wonder if much of it cannot be traced to the insatiable greed of men. Our protective laws are too frequently in the interests of the few, and opposed to the rights of the many. We have a tariff on wool that deprives the people of an adequate supply of clothing; for our winter clothing has deteriorated 33 1-3 per cent. in weight, and this is not due entirely to the increase in the price of the raw material.

It is possible today for great combines to get possession of the necessaries of life and store them for long periods until they can get their prices for them, thus extorting undue profits from the people. "It is by reason of modern warehousing facilities that corner in food stuffs is possible with the resulting exaggerated scale of prices such as is now in effect."

What is the radical solution of the difficulty?

Let me answer in the words of the great economic expert, Mr. Carroll D. Wright.

"After many years of investigation into the social, moral and industrial condition of the people, I came to the conclusion that in the adoption of the religion of Jesus Christ, as a practical creed for the conduct of business, there was to be found the surest solution of the difficulties that excite the minds of men and which lead many to think social, industrial and political revolution is at hand. I am still of the same opinion."

Men's Club Banquet.

The Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church will hold a banquet Monday night, February 21, at which time the speaker will be Rev. Dr. F. C. ### SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Fedock was buried yesterday at St. Stephen's church in Perth Amboy.

The local branch of the John Sobieski Society held a successful dance Saturday night in Washington hall.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reilley, of Newark, visited relatives here yesterday.

Michael Kaine, of New York, is spending a short time with relatives here.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The funeral of Mrs. William E. Davis, sixty-eight years old, will be held in the Reformed church at Lebanon this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. Lucas Boeve, the pastor, will conduct the services, assisted by Rev. William H. DeHart, pastor of the Third Reformed church in Raritan, and Rev. B. V. D. Wyckoff, of the Reformed church at Readington. Mrs. Davis was the wife of Rev. William E. Davis, pastor of the Reformed church at Marlboro, and with her husband was located at South Branch for four years and at Lebanon for twenty-two years. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sanford R. Ramsey, in New Market, Thursday. While on a visit there she fell and fractured one of her ribs. A complication of troubles resulted which ended in her death. Besides her husband she leaves three children, Mrs. Leander T. Stryker, of Lebanon; Mrs. Ramsey, of Dunellen, and William E. Davis, Jr., of Long Branch.

Mrs. William P. Dunn, aged 73, died Friday morning at her home at Stelton, where she and her husband had lived for close to fifty years. An attack of grip hastened the estimable old lady's end, for she had been in fairly good health. Mrs. Dunn was the mother of the two Dunn brothers who were killed at the Stelton crossing a few years ago. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Herbert Runyon, of New Durham, and Mrs. E. C. Potter, of Metuchen, wife of the Manager of the American Press. The funeral will take place from the home this afternoon, Rev. Dr. W. T. Dorward being in charge of the service. Interment will be in the Presbyterian cemetery, Metuchen.

H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the North Plainfield public school, will address teachers of the local schools tomorrow afternoon.

The New Market fire department at its next meeting will make arrangements to conduct a dance before the Lenten season.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hawkins had a party of friends and relatives of New Brunswick as their guests yesterday.

Constable Robert L. Reeve, who has been laid up with rheumatism for several weeks, is on the mend.

Mrs. James Wotton, of Plainfield, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. Frank Reynolds, for a few days.

Miss Ethel Garretson entertained friends from out of town over Sunday.

Miss Iva Dayton was in New York on Saturday afternoon.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The fight over the election of Charles Meyer as chief of the fire department did not help toward creating a good feeling among the members of the two fire companies as the B. & E. Co. members feel sore over Excelsior Company contesting his election.

A number from here and Plainfield tendered a surprise masquerade party Saturday night, to Miss Charlie Clark, of Union avenue. Music, games and dancing were enjoyed.

The fourth of the series of winter dances being held by the Bachelors' Club, will be held in the hall Tuesday night, February 1. Admission will be held strictly to invitation.

Not a gutter was opened in town after the heavy snow storm last week. The result was the sidewalks were running rivers during the rain storm Friday night.

A number from here attended a surprise party tendered to Miss Carrie Borrup Saturday night, at her home on Central street, Netherwood.

Mrs. Franklin K. Mathews led an interesting weekly meeting of the B. Y. P. U. held last night in the parlors of the Baptist church.

The weekly meeting of the Epworth League was held last night in the class room of the Methodist church.

Miss Lillian Frazee, of Newark, is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hull, of Westfield avenue.

Albert Meyer, of Front street, was the guest of friends in Newark yesterday.

CHIEF JUSTICE WILL SIT IN THE SNEAD CASE.

While no formal announcement has been made, it was learned Saturday morning that Chief Justice Gummere will preside at the trial of the three Wardlaw sisters, indicted for the alleged murder of Orey W. M. Snead, the East Orange bathtub victim. A date for the commencement of the trial will be set as soon as the defendants plead to the charges made against them.

When the pleas of the women will be entered will be determined after Prosecutor Mott, of Essex county, has conferred with Franklin W. Fort, counsel for Miss Virginia O. Wardlaw, one of the defendants, and Chandler W. Riker, who will appear in the case for Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, another of the prisoners. Counsel to defend Mrs. Mary W. Snead, the other sister, has not yet been selected.

Chief Justice Gummere agreed to appear at the trial after the importance of the case had been explained to him by both Mr. Mott and Mr. Fort.

Mr. Riker's entrance into the case as counsel for Mrs. Martin is a matter of recent occurrence. Since her arrest in New York, Mrs. Martin has had several lawyers representing her, all of them New Yorkers, but has acted on Mr. Fort's advice that a Newarker be retained to look after her interests. It is probable that Mr. Riker will also join with Mr. Fort in taking care of Mrs. Snead's defense, although this has not been decided as yet.

THEIF ROBS OFFICIAL.

Enters Home and Escapes with Many Valuables.

New Brunswick, Jan. 24.—While the family of William H. Van Sickle, a local tax assessor, were all out Saturday evening a thief gained an entrance into the house and ransacked three bedrooms, securing two $10 gold pieces, a gold watch, several stickpins and rings, including jewelry belonging to Walter D. Van Sickle, a local lawyer and former court clerk. When Mr. Van Sickle returned to his home at 11 o'clock all of the windows and doors were securely locked.

The police believe that the thief entered the front door with a skeleton key.

Last Week of the January Furniture Sale

Prices Thruout the Stock Reduced 10, 33⅓ & 50 Per Cent.

This great January Furniture Sale, which is about to enter upon its last week, has saved to the people of New Jersey many thousands of dollars, and will save thousands more this last and always big week of the sale. Those who have procrastinated or who have deferred buying for any reason, must act this week if they wish to buy furniture most economically.

Everything on this great furniture floor is reduced not less than 10 per cent.; many things may be had for one-third less than usual, and some of the prices are cut in two—it all depends upon how anxious we are to sell the furniture this month—and the best part of it for you is that the things most heavily reduced are just as likely to be exactly what you want as those reduced the least.

If we happen to have an odd chair or a chiffonier, a bed, a dining room table or a parlor suite that we do not expect to duplicate and of which we have only the sample left, we are likely to cut the price deeply to be sure of selling it before inventory, for we have not room for these odd pieces, especially for the discontinued patterns, tho they are just as useful to you as anything in the house.

We invite your particular attention to the magnificent display of Mahogany, Dining Room Furniture which we are making, all of which is cut in price thruout this month. We invite your attention, also, to the great display of Bed Room Furniture, which is now being offered at the lowest prices of the year—suites and single pieces in mahogany, walnut, oak and white enamel, reduced not less than ten per cent. and many metal bedsteads reduced 25 per cent.

If you would like to take advantage of the special prices now ruling do not hesitate because of lack of cash, for our Club Plan makes it easy for you to pay even a big furniture bill.

Mission Furniture

TO THE FORE

Mission Furniture is so distinctly American in its origin as to make it more or less a patriotic duty for every American to give it a place in his home or office or both.

What were practically the first manual training schools in the country produced the first of our Mission Furniture. These schools were the missions established every forty miles or so along the California coast by Junipero Serra, who wrought a miracle when he took savage Indians and made artisans of them—and they produced the originals of the types of Mission Furniture now so popular. It is more than a century since the founder of these missions ended his task, and, naturally, there have been many changes, modifications and improvements in the style and construction of mission pieces, but the basic principles of the original—simplicity and sturdiness—characterize the Mission Furniture of today.

The collection of Mission and Arts and Crafts Furniture from which we invite you to choose at prices reduced not less than 10 per cent. this month, is not surpassed by any store anywhere. There is practically everything here that might be wished for—pieces for dens, sitting-rooms, living rooms, dining-rooms, bedrooms, halls, offices—and all are fairly priced.

Signor Calefaty Victor will direct the band, as usual. In addition to the usual instrumentation there will be, this year, a saxophone quartet and a set of chime bells, both of which are used for solo purposes.

During the engagement, which will last about five weeks, there will be vocal, violin and piano solos to vary the program. Seats are free, and hundreds can be accommodated at each concert.

APPROVE A METHOD OF SHARING FIREMEN'S FUND.

Passaic, Jan. 24.—An act providing for a division of the insurance company's contributions to the firemen's benevolent fund on the basis of forty per cent. to the volunteers, and twenty per cent. to the firemen's home was approved by the meeting of exempt and volunteer firemen's associations of the Sixth Congressional District. The meeting was held here Friday night in the municipal building.

The State law provides that on all premiums for insurance written by foreign insurance companies in the State, a percentage shall be paid to the firemen's benevolent fund. In the beginning, when all the firemen of the State were volunteers, the control of the fund by the volunteers was accepted as a matter of course. With the growth of paid departments and the decrease of volunteer organizations there has been constant strife over the control of the principal and additions to the fund.

David B. Martin, of West Third street, is detained at home by illness.

THE FORUM.

POSTOFFICE SITE.

Editor, The Daily Press:

When New Brunswick obtained its postoffice from the United States government the most expensive, sightly and central corner lot was obtained for its site, that they could find, viz., at the south corner of Albany and George streets; when Elizabeth obtained her postoffice, the best that city could offer was deemed none too good, and the corner on Broad street occupied by the First National bank and the Woolworth store was taken, and a four story stone block was torn down to make room for it; Newark and Trenton both have their postoffices on their main business streets, where they can do the most good to the most people.

Why is not Plainfield entitled to the same consideration? Our postoffice should be placed at the corner of Somerset and West Front streets, where it will be central to all of our business interests and to North Plainfield.

The expense of obtaining such a corner should not enter into the question at all. What is good enough for New Brunswick and Elizabeth should be held also necessary and proper for Plainfield.

This building is not to be erected for a day. It will stand perhaps for a century.

I ask on behalf of at least nine-tenths of our citizens and business men, fair treatment in this matter.

The present lot at East Second street and Watchung avenue, now purchased by the Government, should be sold again as soon as possible, and a proper site obtained either by purchase or condemnation.

If we are to have a postoffice it should be placed where it will benefit the city at large and not a small section.

WM. M. STILLMAN.

THIS AUTO A WONDER.

Runs Equally as Well on Water as on Land.

Atlantic City, Jan. 24.—Captain George Bartlett, a retired skipper of Pleasantville, has invented a combination auto boat and automobile, which he claims, will run on either land or water. The vehicle is built like a boat, but mounted on wheels which are armed with paddles when the craft is launched overboard.

The inventor is now working on a plan to add further attachments which will make his odd vehicle into a flying machine.

CAMPAIGN ON FOR OPEN SUNDAY LAW

The third week of the Legislature beginning at Trenton this evening will be marked by the opening of a vigorous campaign in behalf of open Sunday legislations, especially for the benefit of Atlantic City.

Atlantic City citizens resent parts of the Governor's message as directed at them. They declare the hotel business on Sunday is warranted by the cosmopolitan character of the crowds which flock to the place. They contend that the right to cater to the desires of these pleasure seekers should not be curtailed. They insist that these practices be continued.

Senator Wilson and possibly Assemblyman Edge, the Republican leader in the House, will introduce open Sunday legislation, asking the enactment of a law which will give municipalities the right to vote to permit hotels and saloons to be open every day. The Atlantic City forces will make a determined effort to get such a bill through at this session of the Legislature and profess to believe that they have good chances of success in spite of the vigorous opposition that is sure to follow from the church and temperance forces of the State.

Senator Osborne, of Essex, will also seek to obtain the enactment of a Sunday selling law. He declares there is a great demand for such a measure in the larger cities of the State. Senator Osborne has already introduced a bill for this purpose.

In addition to these measures Assemblyman Olwel, of Hudson county, will make a hard fight for the passage of his bill to permit baseball games and other sports on Sundays.

NO DECISION ON CIVIL SERVICE ACT.

The Court of Errors and Appeals has made no announcement after its conferences. The much-looked-for decision on the civil service act is still on the scales of justice, with no decision in sight.

Attorney General Edmund Wilson and Assistant Attorney General Nelson B. Gaskill made an effort to present to the court an application looking toward a reargument of the proceedings instituted by eneral Edward A. Campbell, in which the Vredenburgh retirement law of last winter was declared unconstitutional. Next Thursday was set for the Attorney General to make his argument to the court, giving reasons why the case should be reargued.

Under the regular practice of the court the remittitur carrying back to the Supreme Court the mandate of the higher court setting aside the order under which General Campbell was retired may be returned at any time now.

Memorial Service at Brick Church.

A memorial service for the late Rev. Dr. William R. Richards will be held Sunday night, January 30, at the Brick church, New York, of which he was pastor for several years. The Session of the Brick church has invited the members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church to attend this service.

PROPER CARE OF MY LADY'S GLOVES.

Gloves are a necessary luxury these days. We have accepted the fact that they are indispensable to the well-dressed woman, and it behooves every one of us to give a thought to their care.

Nothing is more reprehensible than gloves that allow the outsider a peep at the fingertips—which is putting it mildly. In the matter of gloves, the old proverb of a stitch in time is particularly applicable. And let that be of cotton please. Silk cuts very easily and does not last long enough to repay you for your industry.

Match the color of your gloves and overcast each edge of the finger separately. Then, holding your finger in the glove, if you have no regular darner, sew the sides together, using a fine buttonhole stitch.

Black kid gloves frequently become worn or rubbed and show their age by white or gray marks. Mix black ink with a small quantity of olive oil and touch up the spots, using a small brush. The ink gives blackness and the oil supplies the lustre. Suede may be treated in the same way.

Speaking of suede, your white gloves of this undressed quality can be freshened up by an oatmeal bath. The finely powdered meal which sifts to the bottom of a box is the best. Dust this powder over the suede and take it off with a stiff brush.

Your white kid gloves can be effectually cleaned by any pure white soapsuds. Apply only the suds with a soft flannel cloth. It is not necessary to moisten anything but the surface, and they will soon dry on the hands.

Of course, there are many little precautions which the wise woman observes. She always shakes powdered soapstone into new gloves before trying them on. She observes a certain way of adjusting a new glove at any glove counter, and the removal of a glove is accomplished by turning the wrist over the fingers and "peeling" it off from the hand.

Gloves should be kept flat in a glove box. Tiny sachet bags, redolent of a characteristic perfume, should be placed in the holder. From the scented resting place they may be taken in all of the glory of good condition due to the care of their owner.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Florence Shepard, and son Alexander, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Hubbard, of West Fifth street, have returned to their home in Chicago.

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, goes to Carmel, N. Y., tomorrow night, where he will deliver an illustrated lecture for Rev. Dr. George P. Noble, at the Presbyterian church on "Palestine."

Reception to Pastor and Wife.

Under the auspices of the Pastor's Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church, a reception will be given at the church Thursday night, February 3, in honor of the first wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Herring.

FASHIONS AFTER BONAPARTE.

The military note is strong among the street costumes of Paris. The two and three cornered hats of Napoleon made their way first, and then followed all manner of garments carrying the insignia of battle, or at least of standing armies.

Soldier clothes are at their best in cloth, although the velvet costume has borrowed a gay trapping now and again. The court suit glitters with gold frogs and brass buttons, and the one-piece frock has a "one-sided" martial fastening. The fur coat has taken on regimental lines, and the military cape is found in evening materials for the opera and in cravenetted surface for stormy winter days.

Brass buttons abound, the loose leather belt hangs low, suggesting a place for the saber, and gold fringe may be found for the looking.

The so-called blouse of the Russians is a Cossack uniform, and it is not straining a point to decorate it with straps and buttons.

Dinner and opera gowns alone have escaped this touch of the soldierly, but its predominance at every other point in the costuming of women has made up for that one omission.

On the fur coat we are shown metallic buttons fastened up each side of the front, a braided belt, a straight collar, metal trimmed. This is equaled in correct outline by cloth street suits, the skirts of which are straight and plain (far more like trousers than a pleated skirt would be) and the coats of which resemble closely the best military cut. They are strapped across the chest with wide or narrow braids; they are fastened with regular army frogs or they are decorated with horizontal bands of narrow fur from button to button down the double-breasted centre panel.

Embroidery and curious cross-stitching in corse yarn are used to repeat the customary Cossack decoration on Russian belted-in frocks and coats, while the beloved one-piece frock, which even an army cannot wrest from us, still retains the moyen-age cuirass outline, although it is rendered military by a strange jumble of side fastening and brass buttons with its medieval hand-embroidery.

Children's clothes necessarily repeat the same lines, and much that is military is adaptable to the straight cut of childish garments. The Napoleon hat, a two-cornered, has been restored to favor and the well-dressed child, whether boy or girl, appears also in the tight Russian cap of fur.

Whether we rage in battle or roll peacefully over the asphalt in automobile or trolley car, military is the stamp that marks the modes.

A Midwinter Tea.

NEWARK MAN BUYS "THE FAIR" STOCK

The goods and fixtures of "The Fair," a store on West Front street, owned by a concern of which David Danziger, who committed suicide in New York several days ago, was the head, were sold on Saturday under bankruptcy proceedings, as a result of an order by the U. S. District Court. The sale was conducted by Sergeant-at-Arms Oliver Conlen, of Elizabeth, and the perchaser was a Newark jobber who took all the stock and fixtures at a bulk price The Newark parties also purchased the stock of the Elizabeth store.

Several jobbers from surrounding cities attended the sale and bid on the stock. Under the United States bankruptcy laws bids on individual articles had to be taken at first and then all the contents of the store were offered for sale in a lump. By selling the goods altogether, several hundred dollars more was realized than would have been had the goods been sold in separate lots. The man who purchased the goods represented most of the jobbers who were present and who bid on individual articles at first. They clubbed together and raised the purchase price.

TRENTON POLICE ARE AFTER FORGER TOO.

Trenton police are evidently looking for a fellow who forged the names of the Revs. B. M. Bogan, E. Vicars Stevenson, James C. Field and James R. Blair, to checks here a few weeks ago. In Trenton on Saturday it was reported to the police of that city that the names of two clergymen of that city for checks. The fellow made small purchases at two stores, got the change and disappeared, or the same manner in which the crook operated in this city. In each instance the man gave the name of C. Blake.

DEATH OF EZRA KENDALL.

Was Highest Priced Monologist on the Stage.

Ezra Kendall, the actor, died at his home at Cleveland, Ohio, yesterday. He was born in 1861 on a farm in Allegany County, N. Y. After a common school education he learned the trade of a printer Later he worked on a New York newspaper as a reporter.

His professional debut was made in Elizabeth, N. J., in 1880, in a farce called "Rascal Pat." He was with Lillian Cleves-Clark in "Only a Farmer's Daughter," at a salary of $4 a week and expenses. Before he died he became the highest salaried monologist on the American stage.

ICE YACHT HITS SKATERS.

Man Hurt Seriously and Young Woman Slightly on the Shrewsbury.

John Manning of Fair Haven and Miss Horrigan, of Red Bank, were skating opposite Paterson's Cove on the Middletown side of the Shrewsbury river near Red Bank on Saturday afternoon. The Silver Heels, an ice yacht, sailed by Reuben White, containing a party of women, was skimming up the river under full sail at a rapid rate. White did not see the skating couple and ran into them head-on. Manning was seriously bruised about the legs and body, and it is thought was injured internally. The young woman's head was cut, but she was not seriously hurt.

Elizabeth is Interested.

Elizabeth, Jan. 24.—An effort will be made through P. J. Donovan, president of the Central Labor union, at the meeting of that organization to be held Thursday night, to arouse interest among the members of the local labor organizations in the fight being made against the high price of meat in various States throughout the country, and if possible to get all the locals to unite and abstain from meat the same as laboring men and their families in Cleveland, Omaha and other cities are doing.

Found Valuables.

Track hands at work on the Central R. R. of New Jersey near Whitehouse have made their headquarters in an abandoned telegraph shanty. Yesterday while they were rummaging about they came upon a number of insurance papers, receipts and check books—part of the plunder taken from the store of S. M. Bonnell in Whitehouse several weeks ago. The thieves evidently threw thew away as valueless.

Proctor's New Bill.

The new bill at Proctor's theatre today is a pleasing one and is a varied one. Sully Guard & Co. will present a sketch "Mr. Reynolds," which has made a big hit. Barrett & Scanlon, who are real acrobats, do clever work. Rose Berry will appear in a clever and interesting pianologue, and there will be catchy and classy dances by the Clarks, together with the usual high-class films d'art.

A. M. Harris Made Superintendent.

Arthur M. Harris, of Central avenue, has been appointed superintendent of the junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday school, succeeding Miss Perry, who resigns because of ill health.

JOURNEYMEN TO ASK FOR HIGHER WAGES

A demand for an increase in wages will be made on the boss building contractors of this city and borough by the masons and carpenters on April 1. The carpenters, it is reported, will seek a raise of 50 cents per day, or from $3.50 to $4, while the masons will demand $5.20 as their daily rate, being an increase of 40 cents per day.

Official action has not yet been taken by the mason and carpenter union but the above named figures is the revised scale which they will suggest to the bosses.

The carpenters, last spring, made a demand for a $4 rate. The bosses offered to compromise at $3.80 for the the carpenters held out for "4 or nothing." As building operations took a slump at the time, the carpenters were not in position to force their demands.

Present indications point to a brisk period in all building lines when the spring season opens and it is not at all likely that the carpenters and masons will be alone in their efforts to force wages to a higher plane, as a well known union man intimated to a Daily Press reporter, that the move will be universay, and will also include the plumbers, tinsmiths and electricians.

SOUTH JERSEY PEOPLE FOLLOWING THE BOYCOTT.

Camden, Jan. 24.—Reports from all parts of South Jersey show that the movement to curtail the consumption of meat has taken a strong grip upon the people, and dealers in all sections report heavy declines in the sales. There has been no concerted action anywhere, so far as heard from, nor have any organizations taken steps to place their members on record in the movement, but the people generally seemed to have grasped the idea that there might be a solution of the high price problem.

Retail dealers in this city, for instance, stated yesterday that sales of meat products had fallen off by at least 50 per cent. and that poultry and game had also been hard hit. The heaviest onslaughts seem to have been made upon beef and beef products, but pork, which has reigned higher than for many years, is also attacked with energy. Most people are apparently in dead earnest in the movement, and local merchants fear that the result may be disastrous if kept up for very long while.

PLAINFIELDERS ATTEND THIS NUPTIAL CEREMONY.

Frank Buttensky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barnett Buttensky, of this city, and Miss Sadie Kosberg, of Elizabeth, were married at Hebrew Library Hall, on Court street, Elizabeth, last night. The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Rotman, of this city. There was a large number of guests from this city to witness the ceremony and attend the reception afterward.

Miss Rebecca Keizer was the maid-of-honor; the Misses Blanche and May Newman, of this city, the bridesmaids, and Miss Jennie Buttensky and Miss Fannie Moledezky, of this city, were flower girls. The best man was William Schwartz, of New York, and the ushers Maurice Friedman, Henry Fuchs, and Morris Margolias, of this city. The couple will live in this city after a honeymoon.

TO RE-ELECT "UNCLE DAN" AS THE STATE TREASURER.

The first of the Tuesday sessions of the Legislature will begin tomorrow, and will be marked by a joint meeting of the Senate and House for the election of a State Treasurer. It is certain that Daniel Voorhees, of Morristown, will be re-elected to the position for a second term of three years at a salary of $6,000 per annum. He will receive the unanimous vote of the forty-one Assemblymen and fifteen Senators of the majority side. His name will be officially presented by Senator Mills, of Morris county.

SEES HALLEY'S COMET.

Shore Guests Leave Suppers to Watch New Arrival.

Atlantic City, Jan. 24.—Halley's comet flashing across the Western sky just after sundown last night drew a crowd of thousands to the board walk. The comet was in sight less than a half hour before it fell below the horizon, but in the time residents and visitors left their dinners and rushed to streets and boardwalk to get a peep at the new arrival.

The comet was plainly visible, the tail showing strongly against the evening sky.

BOROUGHITE'S PATENT ON A USEFUL ARTICLE

David A. Teeter, of Grove street, the borough, has just been granted a patent on useful improvements in sash locks, and it promises to be in great demand. The object of the invention is to provide a simple and practical device of this character which will effectively lock the sahes in their closed position, which will hold the sashes against lateral vibration or movement, which will be self-locking when the window sashes assume their closed position and which will be easy to unlock and attractive in appearance.

With the above and other objects in view, the invention consists of the novel features of construction and the combination and arrangement of parts which fully meet the requirements and claims of the inventor.

The device is of such a character that it is attractive and not unsightly as others that have been on the market. By closing the window it locks automatically and then if one wishes to open the window it is done by simply placing the finger on a small button, which releases the fastening sufficiently to open the sash.

Mr. Teeter has been highly complimented upon the invention and builders and contractors claim great things for it. Mr. Teeter has had the device in use at his home for some time and it has never failed to work.

OUR SENSE OF SPACE.

Experiments With Infants to Show That It Is Innate.

There are many optical illusions which show that our perception of distance, height and space are acquired rather than instinctive, and in the domain of psychological physiology one of the standing controversies touches this point. The German school of Leipzig is inclined to affirm that all our perceptions of distance, area and solidity and our ability to distinguish between right and left, up and down, before and behind, are acquired as a result of long practice and experience.

A person blind from birth who has learned to distinguish triangles, squares, circles and objects of other forms by touch is not able immediately after the acquisition of sight to distinguish these familiar objects by sight alone. He or she is still compelled to rely on feeling. In the beginning all objects appear to such a person (and perhaps they do so in the case of babies) as shapeless, tremulous spots of color situated close to the eye.

In the course of the debate that raged in Germany some experiments were made with babies. It appeared that in babies what must be described for want of a better term as a sense of space seems to exist. The infant was held in the arms of the experimenters for about a minute, at the end of which interval the child was permitted to drop upon its bed. In every instance the child exhibited a dread or panic when it felt the arms of the persons holding it relax. The babe, even at the age of one month, seemed to understand that its support was departing. It held, or, rather, clutched, at anything it could reach, whether the arm, neck or collar of the person holding it.

From these experiments it has been inferred that there must exist a sense of space almost from infancy. What is the dread of falling but a manifestation of an innate sense of space?—London Post.

SLOW DEATH.

Disease Usually Takes a Long Time to Kill, Says a Scientist.

Few indeed are the men and women of full age, say twenty-five, who have not yet contracted the malady that will kill them, according to that distinguished scientist and physician Dr. Felix Regnault. Normally, as contemporary investigators are beginning to find out, it takes twenty years for a fatal malady to kill a patient. It may take thirty years. The popular impression is that a man may die suddenly or that he may require only a year to die in or six months. To be sure, a man may be killed or a child may die in a few months at the age of one year. But, ordinarily speaking, all deaths are very slow, indeed, and about 95 per cent of civilized adults are now stricken with fatal diseases. They do not know it. They may not suffer from them. In due time they will have their cases diagnosed as cancer or tuberculosis or diabetes, or what not. But so inveterate are current misconceptions of the nature of death that the origin of the fatal malady—in time—will be miscalculated by from ten to thirty years.

In the case of human beings death, barring accident, is nearly always caused by some specific malady. This malady is as likely as not to be cured—what is called cured. The cure, however, no matter how skillful the treatment or how slight the disease, has left a weakness behind it in some particular organ of the body. One of the organs is, if not prematurely worn out, at least so worn that its resisting powers are greatly diminished. All of us in this way when we have reached a certain age possess an organ that is much older than the rest of the physique. One day we shall die because of this organ. Even if we live to be very old, indeed, we shall not die of old age, but of weakness of the lungs or of the kidneys or of the liver or of the brain.—Current Literature.

A Ten Years' Penance.

It is happily seldom that the revenge of a disappointed husband takes quite such an extreme form as in the case of the man whose will ran thus: "When I remember that the only happy times I ever enjoyed were when my wife sulked with me, and when I remember that my married life might, for this reason, be considered to have been a fairly happy one because she was nearly always sulking, I am constrained to forget the repulsion the contemplation of her face inspired me with and leave her the sum of £60,000 on condition that she undertakes to pass two hours a day at my graveside for the ten years following my decease, in company with her sister, whom I have reason to know she loathes worse than she does myself."—London Tit-Bits.

Didn't Like the Walk.

A north country pitman went with his wife one Saturday night to do a little shopping. They visited a large drapery establishment, and the obsequious shopwalker, having ascertained their requirements, said to the couple politely, "Will you please walk this way?" But unfortunately he walked very lame.

"No, mistor," said the pitman, "Aa nivvor hev waaked that way, an' Aa'm not gannin' te try!"—London Scraps.

Not Deceived.

"Never in my life have I deceived my wife."

"Same here. Mine only pretends to believe the yarns I tell."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

'Tis the mind that makes the body rich.—Shakespeare.

Looking into the Future

A gentleman of property who was about to draw up his will determined upon an eventual division of his estate among four children—one of whom at that time was less than a year old.

Look over the list of your good, trustworthy business friends and see whom among them you would accept to fill the responsible office of executor or administrator and guardian under such a condition as the above, involving a period of perhaps twenty years or more in the future.

Even among friends who possess the requisite ability, integrity and experience, would it not be a great thing to ask? Would every such eligible friend feel at liberty to accept such a responsibility?

Fidelity Trust Co.

Newark, N. J.,

is here for this very purpose. It will fulfil all the duties of executor, administrator or guardian, giving the estate the advantage of the widest experience, best possible facilities, and complete and permanent responsibility for the future—no matter how long the period.

THE EAGLE'S EYE.

A Screen That Protects It Against a Too Brilliant Light.

The eagle that stares proudly at the sun has now been found to be no figment of tradition.

M. de Chardonnet, in a paper communicated to the French Physical society, has shown that the eagle's eye has a special apparatus adapted to this feat, though it seems probable that he is not the only bird with this useful possession.

The apparatus is not, however, the "nictitating membrane" which all of us have perceived in looking even at the barnyard fowl. That is a mechanism designed merely to wipe the eye and to keep it clear of dust.

M. de Chardonnet's discovery was made while he was studying the transparency of the central part of the eyes of animals. He had already noticed that the eyes of night birds, such as owls, were more transparent than any other for ultra violet rays, and he had tried to push the experiments further by ascertaining whether they would be affected by ultra violet rays alone.

These experiments failed because of the absence of responsiveness on the part of the birds, which did not appear to manifest any sensation in passing from darkness to light, whether this list was visible to human eyes or not. M. de Chardonnet's failure led him to inquire whether there was any organ of which he was ignorant in the bird's eye, such as would intervene in such circumstances.

While dissecting a bird's eye he was struck to find an organ to which French naturalists have given provisionally the name of the peigne or comb. A better idea of its function would be obtained by calling it a parasol.

This organ is formed of a very thin membrane, black-opaque and situated in the eye where the optic nerve penetrates it. The structure of this membrane is such that the retina is completely masked when the "parasol" is open. It is reasonable to suppose that the parasol is therefore a screen to protect the eye against a too brilliant light, whether the light is visible in the ordinary sense or whether it consists of ultra violet rays.

FINLAND SUMMERS.

Effect of the Famous "White Nights" Upon Vegetation.

The famous "white nights" of the north are a most surprising phenomenon to the visitor from southern climes. It is a weird experience, declares A. M. Scott in "Through Finland," to sit for the first time upon a veranda at midnight and read a newspaper or to walk home from a restaurant at 1 o'clock in the morning and to see people still gossiping at the street corners or strolling along the promenades under a bright, clear sky.

A spirit of rest and peace is over all the earth. The sky is bright, not with the fiery brilliancy of noon, but with a tender, gentle radiance. The colors of the landscape have become softened, but not blended. There are no shadows save for a week or two in June, when the bright northern sky at midnight projects faint, ghostlike shadows toward the south. The sun just dips below the horizon and no more. There is no division between the sunset and the dawn. The same rosy flush serves for both.

Summer in Finland is, in fact, one long day. Never a star is to be seen, and when the first faint star glimmers in the south it is a sign that the summer is past and that the autumn frosts have arrived.

The long light has a marvelous effect upon vegetation, forcing its growth at hothouse pace. The "white nights" account both for the suddenness of the burgeoning and for the intensity of the heat. Land and water have no time to cool. One cannot fail to be struck with the enormous size of the foliage upon the oak and hawthorn trees as compared to that to which we are accustomed. Botanists have explained this as being due to the larger supply of light. It has sometimes been suggested that we may hasten the harvests by the use of artificial lights. Nature herself does this for the Finnish farmer.

The Broadax.

A city man who went out into the Ozarks to learn to make railroad ties was asked by a native whether he was right or left handed.

"If you are left handed," he was told, "you will have to get a left handed broadax."

The city man replied: "I'm wise to this left handed monkey wrench business. I'm from the city, but I know there is no such thing as a left handed broadax." But he was wrong. A broadax is beveled on one side only. A left handed man must have an ax with the bevel on the left side.—Kansas City Times.

All Against Him.

A tailor who was defendant in a case tried in court seemed much cast down when brought up for trial.

"What's the trouble?" whispered his counsel, observing his client's distress as he surveyed the jurymen.

"It looks pretty bad for me," said the defendant, "unless some steps are taken to dismiss that jury and get in a new lot. There ain't a man among 'em but what owes me money for clothes."

"That's enough," he said, waving me back, and I saw that his hand was shaking, too, like Keredec's. His face had grown very white. "I know what you think," he went on, addressing me, "but you're wrong. It isn't for myself. When I sailed for New York I thought there was a chance that she would carry out the action she began four years ago and rid herself of him definitely—that is, I thought until today there was some hope for me. If she's seen him again and he's been anything except literally unbearable it's all over with me. From the first I never had a chance against him. He was a hard rival, even when he'd become only a cruel memory." His voice rose. "Heaven knows why it is. It isn't because of anything he's done or has—it's just because it's him, I suppose—but I know my chance is gone for good. That leaves me free to act for her. No one can accuse me of doing it for myself. And I swear she shan't go through that slough of despond again while I have breath in my body!"

"Sacrificed!" he thundered.

"George, for pity's sake!" I shouted, throwing my arm about his shoulders, for his voice had risen to a pitch of excitement and fury that I feared must bring the whole place upon us. Some one was already knocking for admission.

I crossed the room and opened the door. Miss Elizabeth stood there, red faced and flustered, and behind her stood Mr. Cresson Ingle, who looked dubiously amused.

Miss Elizabeth cut short a rather embarrassed handshake which her betrothed and I exchanged.

"This morning I learned the true situation over here, and I'm afraid Louise has heard. At least she's not at Quesnay. I got into a panic for fear she had come here; but, thank heaven, she does not seem to— Good gracious! What's that?"

It was the discordant voice of Mariana la Mursiana. My door was still open. I turned to look and saw her, hot faced, tousle haired, insufficiently wrapped, striving to ascend the gallery steps, but valiantly opposed by Mme. Brossard.

"But no, madame," insisted Mme. Brossard. "You cannot ascend. There is nothing on the upper floor except the apartment of Professor Keredec."

"Name of a dog!" shrilled the other. "It is my husband's apartment, I tell you. Il y a une femme avec lui!"

"It is Mme. Harman who is there," said Keredec hoarsely in my ear. "I came away and left them together."

"Come," I said, and, letting the others think what they would, sprang across the veranda, the professor beside me, and ran toward the two women, who were beginning to struggle with more than their tongues. I leaped by them and up the steps, but Keredec thrust himself between our hostess and her opponent, planting his great bulk on the lowest step. Glancing hurriedly over my shoulder, I saw the Spanish woman strike him furiously upon the breast with both hands, but I knew she would never pass him.

I entered the salon of the "grande suite" and closed the door quickly behind me.

Louise Harman was standing at the other end of the room. Her husband was kneeling beside her. He held one of her hands in both of his. Her other rested upon his head, and something in their attitudes made me know I had come in upon their leave taking. But from the face he lifted toward her all trace of his tragedy had passed. The wonder and worship written there left no room for anything else.

"Mrs. Harman," I began.

"Yes?" she said. "I am coming."

"But I don't want you to. I've come for fear you would, and you—you must not," I stammered. "You must wait. There is a scene"—

"I know," she said quietly. "That must be, of course."

Harman rose, and she took both his hands, holding them against her breast. "My dear," she said gently,

"He shall pay bitterly!"

"my dearest, you must stay. Will you promise not to pass that door even until you have word from me again?"

"Yes," he answered huskily, "if you'll promise it shall come—some day."

"It shall. Be sure of it."

She stepped out upon the gallery. I followed. Mme. Brossard and Keredec still held the foot of the steps, but la Mursiana had abandoned the siege and, accompanied by Mr. Percy and Rameau, the black bearded notary, who had joined her, was crossing the garden toward her own apartment. She glanced over her shoulder, sent forth a scream and, whirling about, ran viciously for the steps, where she was again blocked by the indomitable Keredec.

"Ah, you foolish woman, I know who you are!" she cried. "You want to get yourself into trouble! That man in the room up there has been my husband these two years and more."

"No, madame," said Louise Harman, "you are mistaken; he is my husband."

"But you divorced him," vociferated the other wildly. "You divorced him in America!"

"No; you are mistaken," the quiet voice replied. "The suit was withdrawn. He is still my husband."

I heard the professor's groan of despair, but it was drowned in the wild shriek of Mariana. "What? You tell me that? Ah, the miserable! If what you say is true he shall pay bitterly! He shall wish that he had died by fire! What? You think he can marry me, break my leg so that I cannot dance again, ruin my career and then go away with a pretty woman like you and be happy? Aha, there are prisons in France for people who marry two like that! He shall pay for it in suffering"—her voice rose to an incredible and unbearable shriek—"and you, you shall pay too! You can't come stealing honest women's husbands like that You shall pay!"

CHAPTER XIII.

It is impossible to say what Mariana would have done had there been no interference, for she had worked herself into one of those furies which women of her type can attain when they feel the occasion demands it. But Rameau threw his arms about her, Mr. Percy came to his assistance, and Ward and I sprang in between her and the too fearless lady she strove to reach. Even at that the finger nails of Mariana's right hand touched the pretty white hat, but only touched it and no more.

Rameau and the little spy managed to get their vociferating burden across the courtyard and into her own door.

"Professor Keredec!— Mrs. Harman began, resisting and turning to the professor appealingly.

"Oh, let him come, too!" said Miss Elizabeth desperately. "Nothing could be worse than this!"

She led the way back to the pavilion. "Not a soul at Quesnay," sobbed the mortified chatelaine—"not one but will know this before dinner! They'll hear the whole thing within two hours."

"There is nothing they shouldn't know," said Mrs. Harman.

George turned to her with a smile so bravely managed that I was proud of him. "Oh, yes, there is," he said. "We're going to get you out of all this."

"All this!" she repeated.

"All this mire!" he answered. "We're going to get you out of it. I don't know whether your revelation to the Spanish woman will make that easier or harder, but I do know that it makes the mire deeper."

Her anxious eyes grew wider. "How have I made it deeper for him? Wasn't it necessary that the poor woman should be told the truth?"

She turned to Keredec with a frightened gesture and an unintelligible word of appeal.

"It was because," he repeated, running a nervous hand through his beard—"because the knowledge would put us so utterly in this people's power. Already they demand more than we could give them; now they can do still more."

George intervened, and he spoke without sarcasm. "To put it roughly, these people have been asking more than the Harman estate is worth—that was on the strength of the woman's claim as a wife—but now they know she is not one her position is immensely strengthened, for she has only to go before the nearest commissaire de police."

"Oh, no!" Mrs. Harman cried passionately. "I haven't done that!"

"Never!" he answered. "There could not be a greater lie than to say you have done it. The responsibility is with the wretched and vicious boy who brought the catastrophe upon himself. But don't you see that you've got to keep out of it, that we've got to take you out of it?"

"You can't! I'm part of it. Better or worse, it's as much mine as his. My separation from my husband is over. I shall be with him now for"—

"I won't listen to you!" Miss Elizabeth lifted her wet face from George's shoulder, and there was a note of deep anger in her voice. "You haven't the faintest idea of what a hideous situation that creature has made for himself. Don't you know that that awful woman was right? You talk of being with him! Do you imagine they encourage family housekeeping in French prisons?"

"You're going much too far," Cresson Ingle said, touching his betrothed upon the arm. "My dear Elizabeth, there is no use exaggerating. The case is unpleasant enough just as it is."

"In what have I exaggerated?" she demanded.

"Why, I knew Larrabee Harman," he returned. "I knew him fairly well. I went as far as Honolulu with him, and I remember that papers were served on him in San Francisco. He was traveling continually, and I don't think he knew much of what was going on, even right around him, most of the time. He began with cognac and absinth in the morning, you know. For myself, I always supposed the suit had been carried through. So did people generally, I think. He'll probably have to stand trial, and of course he's technically guilty, but I don't believe he'd be convicted, though I must say it would have been a most devilish good thing for him if he could have been got out of France before la Mursiana heard the truth."

"Nothing is changed," Louise Harman said finally, her eyes still fixed gravely on Miss Elizabeth's.

At that the other's face flamed up, and she uttered a half choked exclamation. "Oh," she cried, "you've fallen in love with playing the martyr! It's self love! No one on earth could make me believe you're in love with this degraded imbecile. It's because you want to make a shining example of yourself. You want to get down on your knees and wash off the vileness from this befouled creature. You want"—

"Madame," Keredec interrupted tremulously, "you speak out of no knowledge! There is no vileness. No one who is clean remains befouled because of the things that are gone."

"They do not?" She laughed hysterically.

"The soul that stands clean and pure today is clean and pure," insisted the professor.

"But a soul with evil tendencies," Ward began impatiently.

"Ha, my dear sir, those evil tendencies would be in the soiling memories, and my boy is free from them."

"Surely you can't pretend he may not take that direction again?"

"That," returned the professor quickly, "is his to choose. If this lady can be with him now he will choose right."

"So!" cried Miss Elizabeth. "First she is to be his companion through a trial for bigamy and if he is acquitted his nurse, teacher and moral preceptor." She turned swiftly to her cousin. "That's your conception of a woman's mission?"

"I haven't any mission," Mrs. Harman answered quietly. "I only know I belong to him; that's all I ever thought about it. I don't pretend to explain it. And when I met him again here it was—it was—it was proved to me."

"Will you tell us?"

It was I who asked the question. I spoke involuntarily.

"Oh, when I first met him," she said tremulously, "I was frightened, but it was not he who frightened me. It was the rush of my own feeling. I did not know what I felt, but I thought I might die, and he was so like himself as I had first known him, but so changed too. There was something so wonderful about him, something that must make any stranger feel sorry for him, and yet it is beautiful." She stopped for a moment and wiped her eyes, then went on bravely: "And the next day he came and waited for me—I should have come here for him if he hadn't—and I fell in with the mistake he had made about my name. You see, he'd heard I was called Mme. d'Armand, and I wanted him to keep on thinking that, for I thought if he knew I was Mrs. Harman he might find out"—She paused, her lip beginning to tremble. "Oh, don't you see why I didn't want him to know? I didn't want him to suffer as he would—as he does now, poor child—but most of all I wanted—I wanted to see if he would fall in love with me again! I kept him from knowing because if he thought I was a stranger and the same thing happened again—his caring for me, I mean"—She had began to weep now, freely and openly, but not from grief. "Oh," she cried, "don't you see how it's all proved to me?"

Later I went into the garden to think over the perplexing situation of the Harmans.

I sank down again in a wicker chair and contemplated the stars. But the short reverie into which I then fell was interrupted by Mr. Percy, who, sauntering leisurely about the garden, paused to address me.

"You folks thinks you was all to the gud gittin' them trunks off, what?"

"You speak in mysterious numbers," I returned, having no comprehension of his meaning.

"I suppose you don' know nothin' about it," he laughed satirically. "You didn' go over to Lisieux 's aft'noon to ship 'em? Oh, no, not you!"

"I went for a long walk this afternoon, Mr. Percy. Naturally I couldn't have walked so far as Lisieux and back."

"Luk here, m' friend," he said sharply; "do you think you got any chaust t' git that feller off t' Paris?"

"Do you think it will rain tonight?" I inquired.

In simple dignity he turned his back upon me and strolled to the other end of the courtyard.

I observed him in the act of saluting, with a gracious nod, some one who was approaching from the road. Immediately after—and altogether with the air of a person merely "happening in"—a slight figure clad in a long coat, a short skirt and a broad brimmed veil bound brown hat came into full view in the light of the reflector.

I sprang to my feet and started toward her, uttering an exclamation.

"Good evening, Mr. Percy," she said cheerily. "It's the most exuberant night. You're quite hearty, I hope?"

"Takin' a walk, I see, little lady," he observed with genial patronage.

My visitor paused upon my veranda, humming "Quand l'Amour Meurt," while I went within and lit a lamp. "Shall I bring the light out there?" I asked, but, turning, found that she was already in the room.

"You weren't afraid to come through the woods alone?" I asked, uncomfortably conscious that her gayety met a dull response from me.

"No."

"But if Miss Ward finds that you're not at the chateau"—

"She won't. She thinks I'm asleep. She brought me up a sleeping powder herself."

"She thinks you took it?"

"She knows I did," said Miss Elliott. "I'm full of it! And that will be the reason—if you notice that I'm particularly nervous or excited."

"You seem all of that," I said, looking at her eyes, which were very wide and very brilliant. "However, I believe you always do."

"Ah," she smiled, "I knew you thought me atrocious from the first. You find myriads of objections to me, don't you?"

I had forgotten to look away from her eyes, and I kept on forgetting.

She gave a low cry of triumph.

"Dazzling" is a good old fashioned word for eyes like hers. At least it might define their effect on me.

"If I did manage to object to you," I said slowly, "it would be a good thing for me, wouldn't it?"

"Oh, I've won!" she cried.

"Won?" I echoed.

"Yes. I laid a wager with myself that I'd have a pretty speech from you before I went out of your life"—she checked a laugh and concluded thrillingly—"forever. I leave Quesnay tomorrow."

"Your father has returned from America?"

"Oh, dear, no," she murmured. "I'll be quite at the world's mercy. I must go up to Paris and retire from public life until he does come. I shall take the vows in some obscure but respectable pension."

She gazed at me thoughtfully and seriously for several moments. "I suppose you can imagine," she said in a tone that threatened to become tremulous, "what sort of an afternoon we've been having up there."

"Has it been"— I began.

"Oh, heartbreaking! Louise came to my room as soon as they got back from here this morning and told me the whole pitiful story. But they didn't let her stay there long, poor woman!"

"They?" I asked.

"Oh, Elizabeth and her brother. They've been at her all afternoon, on and on."

"To do what?"

"To 'save herself,' so they call it. They're insisting that she must not see her poor husband again. They're determined she shan't."

"But George wouldn't worry her."

"Oh, wouldn't he?" The girl laughed sadly. "I don't suppose he could help it, he's in such a state himself, but between him and Elizabeth it's hard to see how poor Mrs. Harman lived through the day."

"Well," I said slowly, "I don't see that they're not right. She ought to be kept out of all this as much as possible, especially if her husband has to go through a trial."

"Are you"— the girl began, then stopped for a moment, looking at me steadily. "Aren't you a little in love with Louise Harman?"

"Yes," I answered honestly. "Aren't you?"

"That's what I wanted to know," she said, and as she turned a page in the sketchbook for the benefit of Mr. Percy I saw that her hand had begun to tremble.

"Why?" I asked, leaning toward her across the table.

PLAINFIELD DEFEATS THE RED BANK FIVE

Red Bank's basketball five did not prove as strong as expected at the Y. M. C. A. gym on Saturday night and the locals had little trouble in winning by the score of 37 to 16. The locals put up a speedy performance in team work while the visitors were extremely weak in that department. Aalholm played a classy game for Plainfield. The line-up:

Plainfield—Miner, Fritts, Aalhom, forwards; Fritts, Foster, center; Foster, Miner, Gavett, guards. Red Bank—Clusey, Worthley, Ruessitte, forwards; Kellam, center; Monhan, McKellar, guards.

In the preliminary battle Loeser Brothers' five, of Elizabeth, trimmed the Y. M. C. A. "second" team by the score of 44 to 18. The county seaters excelled the locals in weight, and on this score, they held a big advantage. The line-up:

Plainfield "Seconds" — Templin, Vail, Manley, forwards; Ulmer, center; Hoagland, Naylor, guards. Losers—Chris, Ed, Charles, forwards; Bob, center; Billy, Harry guards.

RED MEN LEADERS IN BOWLING TOURNEY

With their schedule completed the Red Men are again on top in the Fraternal Tourney and their chances of remaining there are rosy. The Raritan team, which is in second place, can tie for first place, if they win all three games from the Ponies, whom they have yet to roll.

Johnny Campbell continues to lead the average race, with Matthews second and Blatz third. The team standing and averages follow:

Child Plays With Fire, Will Die.

Josephine Genaro, four years old, while alone for a few minutes yesterday at Paterson, played with the fire in her parent's home in that city and set herself and the room on fire. She was rescued from the blazing room, but is so badly burned that at the hospital it is said that her recovery is impossible.

William Townley, Jr., of the New Madison, is detained at home with a slight attack of the mumps.

SEEK REFORM IN CHILD LABOR LAWS

Employers of more than 50,000 men will gather at Trenton tomorrow from all parts of the State to form the Manufacturers' Association of New Jersey, the principal object of which will be to urge upon the Legislature some reformation of the labor laws, particularly those governing the employment of children.

T. H. Croft, of Camden, is president, and J. William Foster, of Trenton, is secretary of a temporary organization.

The child labor laws declare a child shall not work before he or she is fourteen years old.

MURDER TRIAL END OF BLAIRSTOWN ELOPEMENT.

Blairstown, Jan. 24.—Friends of Mrs. Marion, common law wife of George L. Marion, an actor, who eloped frim this place August 15 with James Brooks, a railroad laborer, the couple being married at Stroudsberg, Pa., have received word that the trial of Marion for slaying his wife in the Wilkesbarre, Pa., chief of police's office August 20, was begun Thursday.

According to the stories told by the police of Wilkesbarre, Marion went to Wilkesbarre, he said, intending to kill Brooks, but in a fit of passion, after remonstrating with the woman, he shot her. He said that he first met her seven years ago in Detroit, Mich., and that after accompanying him all over the country, she paid a visit to Blairstown to see her aunt, and there met Brooks. Marion came here to visit her, he said, and several days after he returned to New York she eloped.

100,000 TO CUT OUT MEAT IN PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Jan. 24.—Three thousand employes of the Carnegie Steel Company and the Howard Axle Company have signed pledges to abstain from eating meat for from thirty to sixty days or until the price is lowered. Ninety-five per cent. of the employees of the seamless tube plant of the National Tube Company at McKeesport, another Steel Corporation subsidiary, signed a similar agreement.

One thousand conductors and motormen of the Pittsburg street railways have agreed to abstain from eating meat for thirty days. It is predicted that before the close of next week fully 100,000 workmen in greater Pittsburg will have become non-meat eaters for a time.

CHARITIES TO MEET.

New Jersey Conference to Be Held in Camden.

What promises to be one of the most important gatherings Camden has had for some time will be that of the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Corrections, which will be held from February 13 to 15. Mayor Ellis, of that city, has a committee of prominent men who are working assiduously to make the occasion a success.

The executive committee has planned to have an opening massmeeting on Sunday afternoon, February 13, at 4 o'clock in the Temple building in that city. Governor Fort and persons prominently identified with the work are scheduled to make addresses. Another massmeeting will be held the following evening in the Catholic Lyceum, while the business sessions will be held Monday and Tuesday in the First M. E. church.

MILITARY MEN TO BANQUET.

Complimentary Dinner for General H. Heber Brientnall to Be Mammoth Affair.

What promises to be the largest social function of the kind ever given under the auspices of the officers of the National Guard will be the complimentary dinner to be held at the Hotel Windsor, Trenton, Tuesday evening, February 8, to General H. Heber Brientnall, formerly Adjutant General.

The affair is being arranged by many prominent men of the guard. Quartermaster General C. Edward Murray is chairman of the committee in charge.

Death Follows Paterson Explosion.

Charles Van Houden, injured in the explosion at the Edison electric light plant Friday night, died yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson. A coroner's inquest will be held to determine the cause of the explosion, which blew up four boilers.

DR. HARRISON AT TRINITY

Congregation's Missionary to Arabia Makes Addresses at Several Meetings.

HIS FAREWELL ON FRIDAY.

Week Here to Be a Busy One for Him—He Spoke Three Times Yesterday at Reformed Church.

Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, who will be the representative of Trinity Reformed church in the foreign missionary fields of Arabia, and who will sail for that country on Saturday, was the magnet that attracted large congregations at the services held in that church yesterday. He was accorded a hearty greeting at all of the services at which he appeared and when he departs for his missionary post in Arabia, he is sure to go with the feeling and belief that Trinity church, the members of its Sunday school, and all of the societies, will accord to him their loyal support during his absence.

It was a busy day for Dr. Harrison as at the morning service he delivered a missionary address and in the evening he preached a sermon. He also made addresses before the Sunday school and at the Christian Endeavor Society meeting. At all of the services the utmost interest prevailed.

During the present week, up to the time of his leave taking, Dr. Harrison will be busily engaged at the different services in the church which will present an opportunity to all members to see and hear him before sailing. On Wednesday afternoon he will address the Junior Christian Endeavor meeting, and on the same evening he will conduct the midweek prayer service. On Thursday night Dr Harrison will be given a reception by the Christian Endeavor Society.

At 8 o'clock, on Friday evening, a service of consecration and farewell will be held. Taking a part in this service will be the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, Dr. Albertus T. Broek, Dr. James I. Vance, of Newark, and Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer and B. J. Barney, of Arabia. The latter promises to be a memorable service in the history of the church. The service of laying on of hands and consecration will be most inspiring.

At the morning service yesterday Dr. Harrison held the undivided attention of his hearers in a discourse on the "characteristics of the Early Church." One of the important thoughts brought out in Dr. Harrison's address was the hospitable spirit employed by the early churches in reaching out after the "other fellow." He lauded the early church for its generosity and praised the missionary enterprise of its founders.

Dr. Harrison's remarks were made forcible by the use of a map in which he pointed out to the congregations the missionary fields in which the Reformed church is operating, which included Japan, China, India and Arabia, the destination of the speaker. He declared that the church of today is following the lines adopted by the early church, and this characteristic, he said, would surely bring success.

At the Sunday school service Dr. Harrison also gave an interesting talk in which he used a map. He related a number of anedotes of workers in foreign fields and gave his hearers much food for missionary thought. He told of a recent Christian Endeavor meeting in which the members of the society pledged themselves to read four missionary books a year and he offered the same suggestion to the members of the school.

SHARES KENNEL WITH DOG.

Runaway Boy Found Living in Animal's Quarters.

New Brunswick, Jan. 24.—John Decker, who was recently released from the State Home for Boys at Jamesburg, to work for a farmer near this city, was found sharing a doghouse with a dog in Throop avenue Saturday night by the police.

The boy had run away from the farmer and had been sleeping in the kennel and begging his meals in the neighborhood. He was returned to the school.

Thirteen Caught in Raid.

Elizabeth, Jan. 24.—Three women and ten men were arrested at midnight Saturday night in a raid on the house at 132 Niles street. The women were Kate McKenzie, Mary Stoule and Bella Currero. They were held in default of fines imposed by Judge O. P. Mahon. Joseph Forka and Rocco Juliette were held on charges made against them by the women, under heavy bail. Others were held for carrying concealed weapons, a score of knives, pistols and razors having been found in the rooms of the place raided. Besides those mentioned the following were locked up: Pasquale Labronia, James Gastoni, Oscar McCarry, Madrianna Paterna, Pasquale Ottriacco, Nicholas Vossali, James Marrapodi.

Bought Bound Brook Farm.

Clarence Eick, of Lincoln, last week, put through a deal in which he purchased the Smock farm at Bound Brook.

DUNELLEN REVIVAL MEETS WITH UNUSUAL SUCCESS

Religious circles in Dunellen and New Market are displaying a big interest in the union evangelistic services which were inaugurated two weeks ago. The service will continue another two weeks during which time they will be conducted in the First Baptist church at New Market. The first service which was held there last night was largely attended and four persons asked for prayers.

Rev. Ernest O. Brown, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Dunellen, occupied the pulpit and he will continue in charge of the meetings this week. Next week the Rev. W. A. Knox, pastor of the First Methodist church, of Dunellen, will assume the leadership. At the morning service yesterday Mr. Knox exchanged pulpits with the Rev. George H. Gardner, pastor of the First Baptist church.

CHRISTIAN FIELD

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet in the church parlors this afternoon for sewing.

The Epworth League of this city announces a rally of Plainfield Group, No. 4, to be held in the First M. E. church, Thursday night, February 3.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church will hold a missionary tea in the Epworth house tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mrs. A. W. Hayes, the district secretary, will be present and give a talk.

The fourth quarterly conference will be held at the First M. E. church Wednesday night at the close of the prayer meeting. Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent, will preside and reports will be given.

GUESTS AT RESORT TAKE SURE BATHS

Atlantic City, Jan. 24.—New Jerseymen and New Yorkers made up a big majority of the several thousand boardwalk promenaders who broke all resort records for the time of year in numbers. Trains from New York ran in two sections Saturday afternoon, and the first shortage of parlor cars for the year was reported.

Several bathers essayed surf dips yesterday, but were quickly conquered by the chill of the breakers. Hotel men report early reservations of quarters for Easter, which comes earlier than usual this year.

The new arrivals welcome the rolling chair war, which has resulted in chair barons cutting their former prices for the vehicles in half, and long rides followed the promenade with most of the visitors. The popularity of the chairs under the cut has been so pronounced that officials are considering a law that will limit the number of new vehicles placed in service to prevent congestion when the Easter crowd begins to arrive.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS IN PRISON FOR CRISPO.

Freehold, Jan. 24.—A sentence of twenty-five years in State prison was imposed by Justice Willard P. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, Saturday upon Cavino Crispo, forty-nine years old, who was convicted last week of murder in the second degree in the killing of Michael Villepiano, at Asbury Park, September 12 last. Villepiano was shot during a street quarrel about 9 o'clock at night. Immediately after the shooting a report was circulated that Villepiano was marked for death by certain Italians at Asbury Park, for evidence he was alleged to have given the police concerning a shooting affray at Crispo's house, the night of July 24.

No motive for the crime was shown during the trial. Prosecutor Applegate attempted to introduce evidence concerning the shooting at Crispo's home in July, but he was stopped by the objection of counsel for the defense.

TO LECTURE TO PRESS CLUB.

Princeton, Jan. 24.—A number of eminent men have been secured by the University Press Club to deliver informal addresses before the club and the undergraduates at large on subjects connected with the newspaper and magazine world. Already Jesse Lynch Williams, '92, the author of "Princeton Stories" and other books, and Samuel Hopkins Adams, have addressed the club. The list of speakers arranged for follows: February 10, Professor Henry Jones Ford, "The Editorial Page;" February 17, Hart Lyman, editor of the New York Tribune, "Some Hints on Journalism;" February 24, Professor W. M. Daniels, '88, "The Influence of the Newspaper;" March 3, Robert S. Yard, '83, of Moffatt & Yard, on "Book Publishing;" March 10, Robert Bridges, '79, of Scribner's, "The Magazine World;" March 15 or 16, George B. An effort is being made to secure also Will Irwin and David Graham Phillips, '87.

Hallet & Davis Player-Piano

The Hallet & Davis Piano

The discerning player-piano purchaser demands not only a piano of unquestioned superior tone quality, but of strong and durable construction, to withstand the greater use accorded a player-piano than an instrument without the player mechanism. The Hallet & Davis piano is constructed to meet the most severe requirements. The crown of the sounding board is supported by fifteen ribs, while the usual number is only eleven. The metal plate is square and very heavy, securing great rigidity. The piano action and hammers are designed for hard service, making an ideal instrument for the introduction of automatic player mechanism.

The Player Action

The salient features of the player action in the Hallet & Davis player-piano are:

A button softening the treble and another softening the bass.

A lever softening the whole piano and one operating the sustaining pedal of the piano.

The usual tempo and re-roll levers.

But most important of all, an automatic tracking device which is absolutely essential with the new standard 88-note music roll, as the holes are smaller and nearer together than on the old 65-note roll.

(The least swelling or shrinking of the paper causes the holes in the paper to be out of line with the holes in the tracker board, resulting in a discord unless equipped with a tracking device.)

Plays any standard 88-note music roll.

CARS THAT HAVE MADE GOOD

Automobile buyers might be pardoned if they felt a little bit bewildered right now. There are so many new cars being announced and so many radical claims being made for them, that buyers are apt to be a little up in the air.

You can't make a mistake if you buy a car of established reputation. A car that has stamped upon it a big, successful reliable name. A car with a record. A car that the people have bought in quantities.

You might make a mistake buying some other kind of a car. A new car may be a good car, but no one knows that it is until it has been thoroughly tried out.

You take no risk when you buy a Chalmers-Detroit car. Our cars have made good for years.

In two seasons of Motor contests Chalmers-Detroit stock cars have won 89 firsts, 32 seconds and 21 thirds. "The Motor Age "Record" gives the Chalmers-Detroits title of the Champion cars of the year.

Orders for more than two-thirds of our entire allotment for 1910 have already been booked. We believe all remaining spring deliveries will be booked at the end of the Garden Show week.

LOCAL ORDINANCE MAY BE STATE LAW

Emulating the action of Plainfield for many years in licensing barbers and providing for strict sanitary regulations, Assemblyman Ford, of Hudson, has offered a bill in the lower house of the Legislature, requiring the licensing of barbers through a commission of three examiners to be appointed by the Governor.

Sometime ago, following the outbreak of smallpox in this city, steps were taken at once to provide for a more strict regulation of the barber business. The matter was placed in control of the Board of Health, which now has jurisdiction over the "tonsorial artists" and their business. They are required to take out a license and their shops must conform strictly to the rules and regulations as provided in the health code of the city.

Among some of the more important provisions are a clean towel for every patron, the sterilizing of razors and all instruments which are used in shaving, etc., and barbers are prohibited from using alum sticks in stopping the flow of blood on the face, the rule insisting that powdered alum be used and applied with a clean cloth. The reason for this is that by the use of the alum stick, it is possible to transmit disease from one to another patron where the stick is applied to any number of faces.

Barbers are also required to keep their shops scrupulously clean and do all in their power to minimize the danger of transmitting disease. While at first the change worked a hardship in a few cases, the barbers now agree that the rules and regulations are not only for the best interests of patrons, but the business as well.

PROTESTS AGAINST WIDE-OPEN SUNDAY

Bills having been introduced in the State Legislature designed to legalize baseball and other games and the sale of liquor on the Sabbath, the Plainfield Christian Endeavor Union in conjunction with the State Union, the Lord's Day Alliance and other religious bodies, has called upon Sabbath observers to lend their aid to defeat such a proposition.

Upon the authority of the executive committee of the Plainfield Union, Clarence B. LaRue, its president, has sent letters to the Senators and Assemblymen of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties, in which the societies of the Union are located, urging action.

Dr. F. W. Johnson, president of the Lord's Day Alliance of New Jersey, and superintendent of the Sabbath Observance Department of the State C. E. Union, is sending out postals stating the facts with an idea of arousing a Statewide interest. They are aimed especially at the bill introduced by Senator Osborn, of Essex, permitting local option on Sunday liquor selling after 1 o'clock, a measure supported by Atlantic, Hudson and Essex counties.

Dr. Johnson calls upon the Christian churches of the State to protest vigorously to their representatives in the Legislature against any change being made in the Sunday law, and adds that if these bills are to be defeated within the next few days in the Assembly, protests by the hundreds must flood the Legislature halls and the Senators and Assemblymen must be shown that public sentiment remains with the Sabbath. He declares "that the Sunday law of New Jersey is in peril and if the State expects the church to protect the morals of the people, as it surely does when it appoints chaplains in the penal institutions, then it ought at least to allow the church one day in seven on which to do its work undisturbed by the saloon and the baseball game."

The authorized capital is $50,000, five hundred shares at the par value of $100 each. The incorporators are William J. Reid, of Brooklyn; Eva Ellinger and Claude Goodenough, of New York.

FAVOR ANTI-TREAT LAW

Bill in Legislature to Prevent the Purchase of Drinks for Others.

TO DISCOURAGE THE HABIT.

Cause of Much Drunkenness Is Due to the General Practise of "Blowing" Others at Saloon Bars.

The action of Assemblyman Heritage, of Gloucester county, in offering an anti-treat bill in the Assembly, last night, has thrown another big scare into the saloonkeepers and brewers of the State. The bill provides that the holder of any liquor license permitting customers to treat one another to drinks on his premises shall forfeit his license.

It is the opinion of a large number of people, who are acquainted with the situation that one of the greatest, if not the greatest evils of the liquor traffic, is the custom of treating. Men prominent in all walks of life maintain that if the treating habit is eliminated, the evils of the drink traffic would be reduced to a minimum. In fact in certain parts of the country there have been formed anti-treating clubs, the sole object of which are to discourage the habit.

Persons who frequent saloons or hotel bars know how prevalent the treating custom is. Invariably if a man walks up to a bar to get a drink, he will invite his friends present "to join him." This means, sometimes, several rounds of drinks, with the result that the man who started the evil by offering to treat, gets more liquor than is good for him and spends more money than perhaps he can afford. This may be true to those who are treated.

There are Plainfielders who remember the custom of a certain liquor dealer in business here some years ago. If a man walked up to his bar for a drink, the proprietor would invariably call up every man in the barroom to have a drink at the expense of his customer. There were instances when some would refuse a drink, but nine times out of ten all would respond to the invitation.

On the other hand, it is said, there are saloons and hotels where the treating habit is discouraged in every way possible, the proprietors realizing the evil effects from the custom.

ADE'S "FAIR CO-ED" IS A RATTLING GOOD SHOW

Representative Plainfield filled the theatre last night and enthusiastically applauded Miss Elsie Janis and her capable support in "The Fair Co-Ed." Like "The College Widow" the scenes of "The Fair Co-Ed" are laid about the ground and buildings of a little "fresh water" college in the middle West, and the characters mostly are those included in the academic and neighborhood life of the institution. Miss Janis creates the character of Cynthia Bright, the only girl student to matriculate during the first year of Bingham College's attempt to establish itself as a co-educational school.

The presence of one charming and lively girl among a bunch of two or three hundred impressionable undergraduates would seem to be fraught with possibilities, and in Miss Bright's case the possibilities are not confined to the undergraduate body. Even the stale old professor of psychology is one of those who ceases to "follow the light" of science in order that he might more persistently "follow her." Gustax Luders wrote the music to Mr. Ade's three act comedy and the tuneful memories of "The Prince of Pilsen" inclined most ears to thorough enjoyment of his latest score. Miss Janis has developed a good bit since she was last seen here in "The Hoyden" and now at twenty years she is said to be showing great promise along the lines of legitimate comedy. She doesn't do any "imitations" of famous actors in "The Fair Co-Ed," but in the third act she does show in her own inimitable style how some of America's favorite players might impersonate some characters entirely out of their metier if they tried.

Every seat in the house was sold before the performance began.

COST OF LIVING PROBE

Assembly Adopts Resolution to Investigate the Food Monopolies.

PAPERS SENT TO THE SENATE.

But Meyer's Proposition to Have Matter Placed Before Attorney General Goes to the Committee.

Republicans and Democrats in the House at Trenton last night enlisted in the crusade against high food prices. By unanimous vote this concurrent resolution, offered by Majority Leader Walter E. Edge, was adopted by the Assemblymen:

"Whereas, the greatly increased cost of meat and other food has become a matter of much seriousness to the citizens of this State, and the cause would seem to justify an earnest and searching investigation; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the House of Assembly (the Senate concurring) do heartily approve of the action of the administration at Washington in investigating any combination of food interests, and that we do heartily endorse any further action on the part of the Federal Government looking to a correction of the present condition."

The resolution went over to the Senate at once and will receive early consideration.

Assemblyman Charles A. Meyer, Democrat, of Sussex, offered a more sweeping resolution calling for investigation by Attorney-General Edmund Wilson. He tried in vain to push it through without reference to committee, but Speaker Harry P. Ward placed it in the care of the judiciary committee. The resolution follows:

"Whereas, The use of meat, butter, eggs and milk are necessities of life; and

Whereas, Any increase in the price thereof imposes a great hardship upon the community at large, and particularly upon the poor; and

"Whereas, There has recently been a very large increase in the price charged the consumers, amounting in some section to double the sum formerly charged; and

"Whereas, It has been reported in the public press and otherwise that there exists a combination or unlawful monopoly among the retail and wholesale dealers engaged in the sale of the above mentioned comodities to maintain the price thereof at an excessive figure; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the attorney-general of the State be and hereby is directed to institute an investigation for the purpose of ascertaining whether there be any unlawful monopoly or combination to enhance the price of meat, butter, eggs and milk in the handling, delivery or sale thereof by any person, firm or corporation in this State, and, if so, to take such proceedings as may be necessary and appropriate in the circumstances to enforce the law."

PIERCE INTRODUCES PUBLIC UTILITY BILL

Assemblyman Pierce, of Union, this morning, at the House in Trenton, introduced the fourth bill proposing to create a public utility commission. This bill plans a board to consist of three members, the present railroad commissioners to be the commissioners for the balance of their unexpired terms. Their successors are to be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Salaries are to remain as at present, $6,000 per year, and the expenses of the commission are limited to $35,000 as against $50,000, the cost of the present railroad commission, which is to be abolished.

In substance the bill includes the powers of the present railroad commission and extends the jurisdiction of the commission to all utility corporations within the State. The powers of rate making with a court review is added. There is also added a stock and bond issue clause requiring the submission of proposed issues to the commisison for approval, the approval to be given if the proposed issue is lawful.

RAINES LAW FOR JERSEY

Bill in Legislature Permits the Sale of Liquor on Sunday.

SANDWICH AS A DINNER.

Walter Edge as an Atlantic City Excuse Says It is a Glaring Necessity—He Makes a Plea.

Colonel Walter E. Edge introduced a bill in the House at Trenton to amend Atlantic City's charter to permit the sale of liquor on Sunday between 1 o'clock p. m. and midnight. The measure is on the lines of the New York Raines law, the sale of liquor to be limited to purchases of food and to hotels and restaurants.

Its passage would probably result in the importation of some Raines law sandwiches. To take advantage of the measure other cities would have to amend it to make the provisions general.

In explanation of the bill Colonel Edge, as House majority leader, said:

"I am introducing this bill with the sole object of relieving somewhat the very unsatisfactory conditions now existing in Atlantic City in relation to excise matters, and am doing so entirely as a representative in the Legislature of Atlantic City and county, and in nowise should this action be connected with the responsibilities of my position as the majority leader.

"In introducing this amendment to our charter it does not affect any other municipality in the State, inasmuch as no other city is operating under it, nor would many provisions of the act of April 3, 1902, known as the "Atlantic City Charter," be suitable for any other city in the State. We are therefore asking for legislation which a large majority of our people feel absolutely necessary for the proper and continuous development of our city.

"The bill is operative only by a majority vote of the people, which assures its fairness, and the fact that food must likewise be served absolutely prevents what is known as a wide-open Sunday, which Atlantic City is in nowise seeking.

"We do not feel that this is therefore in any way a political measure, nor can it fairly be warped into a political issue. It is simply the crying and glaring necessity of a large, popular and successful seaside resort, today entertaining the most discerning, the most moral and the most cosmopolitan contingent of people entertained by any resort, not only in America, but in the world."

DEMANDS INVESTIGATION OF PHONE CO.'S METHODS

Senator Gebhardt, of Hunterdon county, presented a resolution in the Senate at Trenton, last night, providing for an investigation by the Attorney General of the State into the monopoly and exhorbitant rates now being charged by the New York Telephone Company in the nothern part of the State. The resolution set forth that this company was charging a rate greatly in excess of that exacted by companies in other states and it asked that the Attorney General recommend a method for the correction of the abuse.

Senator Gebhardt asked immediate action on the resolution, but Senator Ackerman, the majority leader, moved that it be referred to the judiciary committee and this action was taken.

WORK STARTED ON NEW SCHOOLHOUSE

Building Inspector T. O. Doane, having issued the official building permit, for the erection of the new public school on Dunellen avenue, the contractors, the Ross-Bush Company, of New York, have started to rush the construction at a speedy clip which will permit the opening of the school next September.

Despite the weather conditions good headway has been made on the concrete foundations and the work is being pushed by a big gang of mechanics and in a few weeks the main body of the school will be visible.

Inspector Doane predicts a busy time for local contractors during the coming spring and summer months. Although January has been a comparatively quiet month numerous plans are underway. In addition to the permit issued to the Board of Education for the new school permits have been issued to the following during the present month:

C. B. Eddy, New York, two story dwelling, corner Grant avenue and West Eighth street.

H. Adelberg, removal of buildings, corner Richmond and East Second to rear of lot, also to erect dwelling on lot.

Estate of Fred W. Gray, 984 Hillside avenue, two story dwelling.

WANTS $500 FOR DAMAGES DONE AUTO IN CRASH

Damages to the amount of $500 as the result of a head-on automobile collision in Fanwood last November, is asked by John A. F. Simpson, of this city, who is suing Douglas L. Darby, a farmer, in the District Court before Judge Whittemore at Elizabeth today.

Simpson, according to his story, was driving his automobile in Fanwood on Martine street and was approaching Broad street when he saw Darby coming in his automobile from an opposite direction. Simpson says he signaled Darby to stop as he was going to turn into Broad street. He said that Darby failed to heed the signal and came straight ahead. Simpson declares that he turned his machine to the extreme right of the road and that at the same time Darby turned his machine sharply to the left, a collision resulting.

The plaintiff claims that his automobile was badly damaged and that it was made useless for several weeks. Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., appears for Darby.

POINTS OUT ERRORS IN HIS STATEMENT.

A subscriber to The Daily Press takes exception to some of the statements in yesterday's issue of The Press made by Wm. M. Stillman relative to a site for the Federal building. He says that Mr. Stillman is in error, when he states that the Government purchased the property on Broad street, Elizabeth, for its Federal building, the site occupied by the First National Bank and the Woolworth store.

This site, the subscriber says, was purchased by the Union County Trust Company for its handsome new building erected there, and that the Government secured a site out of the business section of the county seat for its postoffice building.

Regarding the site at Front and Somerset streets, a subscriber says that it would cost approximately $200,000, that he himself would be willing to give $150,000 for the property. This, it can be seen, is out of the question as the Government originally appropriated $100,000 for land and building and there is now a bill before Congress for $15,000 additional.

Steeple-Jack's Work.

A Steeple Jack from New York performed a daring feat yesterday when he cut four feet off the top of the steel smoke-stack at the electric light station. The steel had corroded at the top which will necessitate a new section of pipe being put on to take its place. During the past week the Steeple Jack completed painting the pipe which is about eighty feet high.

Attended Livery Sale.

Frank Hedden and Adam C. Blair attended a horse sale in Philadelphia yesterday at which Hedden purchased two handsome black mares.

WANT VOTES FOR WOMEN

Four Men Apply for Membership in the Equal Suffrage League.

MRS. I. L. MILLER'S ADDRESS.

Paper on "Rights and Obligations of Citizenship" Is Enjoyed at Meeting Held Yesterday Afternoon.

It was announced at the monthly meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, at the home of Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, of Watchung avenue, yesterday, that of seven persons about to join the organization, four are men. This is the first instance of men identifying themselves with this movement and it has been a source of great encouragement to the members.

Four new members were enrolled yesterday, Miss Russell Bateman, Mrs. V. R. Henry, Mrs. Francis De Lacey Hyde and Dr. Clara DeH. Krans. There was a large attendance at the meeting yesterday and promises to be larger in the future.

The paper of the afternoon was read by Mrs. Isaac L. Miller on the subject, "Rights and Obligations of Citizenship." Mrs. Miller said in part:

"It is obvious that the first right of a citizen is the right to good government, one that affords ample protection to life and property and facilitates the carrying on of legitimate industries." She pointed out that it is a part of the government to educate the masses so that ignorance be not the excuse for vice and yet the government must not interfere with the freedom of the individual in his private life. A great obligation comes with the vote—the obligation to acquaint oneself with the requirements of each office and see that it is properly filled."

Mrs. Miller spoke of attending the primaries as a primary duty, if one may jest in so serious a subject, and she made a strong plea for enforcing the law. General Grant used to say, "That the way to get a bad law repealed was to enforce it." The enforcing of a good law needs no defense. Mrs. Miller touched also on the duty of the State to the children. The future wealth of the nation is in the quality of these future citizens.

Finally, a good citizen must be law-abiding, but the laws must be changed when necessary. We must have new laws for new conditions. A lively discussion followed the paper, after which the meeting adjourned and tea was served.

MRS. CORYDON E. TYLER GOES TO HER REWARD.

Plainfield friends will learn with regret of the death of Mrs. Lucy Wells, wife of Corydon E. Tyler, formerly of this city, but recently of Brooklyn, which occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Clifford Kelsey, 455 Washington avenue, Brooklyn, on Sunday. She was seventy-two years of age. The funeral services will be held at her late residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Tyler will be especially well remembered by Plainfielders. He organized and was for many years the teacher of the Berean Bible class at Warren chapel. This class had an extensive reputation in this city and vicinity.

JUDGE RUNYON WILL LEAD THE SINGING.

Singing will be one of the big attractions of the men's mass meeting which will be held in the First Methodist church on Friday night. Secretary Lewis C. Parker, of the Y. M. C. A., today secured Judge William N. Runyon to act as leader.

A unique feature of the meeting is that no collection will be taken.

E. H. Cleveley Engaged.

Announcement was made today of the engagement of Miss Marguerite Summers, daughter of Mrs. Sally Summers, of Grove street, and E. H. Cleveley, of North avenue. Both Miss Summers and Mr. Cleveley have a host of friends here. The latter is the proprietor of the well known restaurant on North avenue, bearing his name. No date for the wedding has been announced.

Had Phonograph Sociable.

Members of Brightside Circle Kings Daughters, were entertained at the home of A. C. LaBoyteaux, on Fairview avenue, last night. Forty guests were present and an enjoyable time was had in listening to operatic airs rendered by Mr. LaBoyteaux's new phonograph. Miss Lillian Ritchie, who was expected to sing, was unable to be present on account of illness.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

If the same energy could be devoted to a town improvement society that was put into the fight against license, what a different town this would soon be. Even the Public Service Corporation ignores the town—the guide sign on the trolley cars don't even mention Scotch Plains.

The county officers have been investigating the robbery at Deegan's hotel Monday night of last week, but no clew has as yet been obtained of the ones who got away with the $18.

Michael Gillotti, who has been spending the week end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gillotti, of Forest avenue, has returned to his home at Orange.

Sleighing is a thing of the past, although Spruce Hill still remains in good condition for coasting.

Thompson; delegates to the division encampment, Allen B. Frazee, George D. Heath, delegates to the Death Benefit Association, P. Gehring and William Sherrill.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Woodbury storekeepers found a number of counterfeit nickels in their Saturday's receipts.

G. L. Carr, of Mays Landing, yesterday found fourteen of his fowls dead, and believes they were poisoned.

Atlantic county trappers have had a poor season thus far, owing to the extreme cold weather and so much ice.

Charged with soliciting funds for a supposed children's home, Mary Kugler was arrested in Gloucester Saturday night.

Rev. S. K. Moore, pastor of the Mays Landing M. E. church, will draw the plans for the $12,000 improvements to the High School building.

Magistrate Daniel E. Izard has been elected superintendent of the Mays Landing Presbyterian Sunday school for the forty-seventh consecutive term.

Teachers of Atlantic county will gather next Friday and Saturday in Pleasantville to attend a two days institute. Speakers of note have been secured by County Superintendent Cressman.

Gloucester has discovered that there is great waste in its water supply. Water Chief Carter has reported that it is necessary to pump 125,000 gallons more Sundays than week-days, and it has been suggested that saloons are closed Sundays now.

Plunging down a stairway at the Columbia Hotel, Third and Market streets, Camden, early Sunday morning, Thomas Bentcliff, thirty-five years old, of Moorestown, sustained a fracture of the skull and is in a serious condition at Cooper Hospital. The accident was due to Bentcliff's mistaking the cellar steps for those ascending to the upper story.

The Glouster County Freeholders' Stone Road Committee ran a four and one-half ton roller over the sample road between Westville and West Deptford Hotel Saturday, with the view of getting some testimony for the trial of the suit against the freeholders by the Imperial Company for the amount due, said to be about $9,000. The county will not accept the road.

Interesting services were held at the State Street M. E. church, Camden, Sunday, in connection with its triple anniversary, including the thirty-fourth of the Sunday-school, the twentieth of the church, and the sixth of the dedication of the present edifice. A feature of the occasion was the presentation by the Ushers' Union of a set of silver collection plates. About $2,500 was raised toward the church debt.

Rev. Eric Saul, pastor of the Lutheran church, Gloucester, delights in raising pigeons, but has suffered from the depredations of thieves, which he has reported to the police. Policeman Lyons Saturday night discovered John Toms, seventeen years old, with a bag of pigeons on his shoulder and placed him under arrest. The boy confessed that he and John Williams stole the dominie's birds. The boys will have a hearing today.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

As a peacemaker Leighton Calkins of Plainfield, entered the champion class at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association in New York last week. His new constitution, with few minor changes was adopted, and all warlike signs between the East and West vanished.

The chief difference in the new constitution from the old is that in future the voting clubs will be known as active members and subject to annual dues of $30, instead of the $50 tax that formerly applied to associate members. The allied clubs will pay $10 per year. Qualifications for active membership are no longer exacting, as clubs with either nine or eighteen hole courses will be eligible. It is expected that the U. S. G. A. ranks will be considerably increased during the next few months.

When the choice of championship courses came up G. H. Windeler moved that the amateur be played at the Country Club, Boston, and suggested the second week of July would suit the club best. On motion of S. Y. Hebbner, the tournament was voted to Brookline. There was no other bidder. The date was left to the executive committee. The Homewood Country Club, Flossmoor, Ill., through W. T. Beatty, asked for the women's championship, and W. A. Alexander seconded the application, the time to be left to the executive committee. There was a unanimous vote in favor of Homewood. The open championship was voted to the Philadelphia Cricket Club under similar conditions as to the dates.

On motion of Calkins, it was voted to hold the next annual meeting in Chicago in the month of January. The Deal Golf and Country Club filed an application for the amateur championship of 1911.

The balance on hand was reported as $1,202, and the receipts for the year from club dues were $4,580 and $1,369 from entry fees, in all $6,519. This included the interest on $10,000 the U. S. G. A. has invested in bonds of Greater New York. This nominating committee was elected to name the ticket for 1911:

John E. Borne, Garden City Golf Club; L. A. Ferguson, Glen View Club; H. M. Atkinson, Atlanta A. C.; H. W. Perrin, Philadelphia Cricket Club, and George A. Frost, Brae Burn Country Club.

OWEN FARRELLY AGAIN HEADS THE DEMOCRATS.

There was an enthusiastic and largely attended meeting of the Elizabeth Democratic city executive committee last night at headquarters, Lyceum Theatre. Councilman Owen Farrelly, of the Seventh Ward, was again chosen chairman. Mr. Farrelly had no opposition.

It was decided to hold a dollar dinner in the near future, and a committee was appointed to complete arrangements. The outing committee for the annual excursion to Witzel's Point View Grove, Long Island Sound, on August 17, was also selected.

The officers chosen for the year are: Chairman, Owen Farrelly; first vice-president, Robert H. McAdams; second vice-president, Edward M. Meek; secretary, Fred Zier; treasurer, John Kenah.

Alfred A. Stein was chairman of the temporary organization.

The dollar dinner committee consists of Alfred A. Stein, chairman; Robert H. McAdams, John F. Kenah, Richard Williamson and John Hock.

SUNDAY SELLING.

The final fate of a bill introduced in the Legislature last night to permit the sale of liquor on Sundays in Atlantic City will be most momentuous. If such a measure should be approved by the lawmakers, the consequences will be terrible It will effect the whole State and not solely the pleasure resort at the shore, for it will mean a reaction and nothing less disastrous than a prohibition law will be a natural result. As the late Bishop Potter said, "prohibition is a failure." Governor Fort in his annual message stated about the same thing and so did Mayor Fisk, the head of the State excise commission. The legal sanction for such a traffic on Sundays at the coast resort would afford an opportunity or excuse for other cities to apply for the same privilege. Before long we would have a condition similar to New York city, where the rotten Raines' law prevails. This would bring about such deplorable consequences that the excise legislation pendulum would swing to the other extreme and we would be found among those so-called "dry" (?) States. Thoughtful men we believe, are mostly agreed that in high license and strict regulation are to be found the best solution of the evil, but heaven help the country when we have a "wide-open" Sunday, and that we will have should the Atlantic City bill become a law.

TELEPHONE RATES.

Corporations are entitled to the same fair treatment accorded an individual and therefore the New York Telephone Company should welcome the adoption of the resolution presented in the Legislature calling for an investigation of its business methods. Senator Gebhardt, the sponser for the measure, declares that this public utility concern is a monopoly and that it is charging exorbitant rates in this section of the State. There are many who agree with him. Let us have an investigation and know the truth. The company has ever disclaimed such tactics and no harm will befall it by a thorough investigation, if honest in its public statements, but immeasurable good will come to it should proof be given that the methods employed are honorable and lawful.

S.S. TEAMS BATTLE IN BASKETBALL CONTESTS

A big crowd of Sunday School Athletic League rooters were on hand at the Y. M. C. A. last night where three contests were played. With the exception of the game between the First Presbyterians and the Hope Chapelites there was little interest as the other four teams failed to line up with a full quota of players.

In this contest First Presbyterian was victorious by a score of 38 to 9. The West Enders were handicapped by the loss of Clinton Firstbrook who was knocked out in a collision early in the game. The line-up:

First Presbyterian—P. Dunniag, Murphey, forwards; W. Dunning, center; Dunham, Bettman, guards Hope Chapel—Porter, H. Firstbrook, forwards; Snyder, center; C. Firstbrook, Belue, guards.

Scotch Plains and Congregational indulged in a one-sided contest which the former team won by a score of 34 to 17. Clarke, of Scotch Plains, was the star of the game with thirteen field goals to his credit. The line-up:

Congregational — Bingeman, E. Smith, W. Smith, Steiner. Scotch Plains — Beeken, Clarke, Todd, Knight.

Crescent Avenue and Trinity engaged in a close battle in which the Presbyterians emerged victorious by a margin of one pin, the score being 23 to 22. The line-up:

Crescent Avenue—Slocum, Fleming, Beers, Daniels. Trinity—Vail, Caleen, Woodhull, Van Zandt.

SPORTS ARE ACTIVE IN P. H. S. CIRCLES

The Freshman basketball team defeated the Senior five in a hot and close game yesterday afternoon with the score of 25 to 23. At the end of the first half the seniors had the freshmen with a score of 17 to 6. It surely looked as if the Freshies were doomed, but in the second half they braced up wonderfully and when time was called the score stood 23-23. They finally decided to play on until one side made a goal. This was accomplished by Bellows with a pretty shot, giving the game to the Freshmen. Tom Ricketts and J. Ricketts distinguished themselves all through the game. The line-up:

Seniors—Forwards, T. Ricketts, Loizeaux; centre, H. Runyon; guards, Miller, Earle.

Freshmen—Forwards, Bellows, J. Ricketts; centre, Murray; guards, Carty, Sharpe.

In the other class game the Sophomores beat the Juniors with a score of 66 to 33. All through the game the Sophomores had everything their own way. The line-up:

Juniors—Forwards, Thompson, H. Van Zandt; centre, Smith; guards, E. Van Zandt, Phillips.

Sophomores — Forwards, Todd, Carpenter; centre, Widowson; guards, E. Woodhull, Bristol.

The P. H. S. basketball team will play the Somerville High School five tomorrow afternoon in the High School gym.

Steps are being taken by the Athletic Association of the High School to arrange for the indoor meet that is held annually at the Y. M. C. A. between the local schools. As many entries are looked for as possible this year it will be held next month.

WHAT? THE P.S.C. HAS A CONSCIENCE (FUND)

Every officer of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey who became aware of the fact took notice yesterday of the receipt of a letter by its trolley division superintendent from an anonymous writer who inclosed seven two cent postage stamps and one penny stamp and just this line of explanation:

"I owe you this for carfare."

The letter was postmarked Elizabeth, but there was nothing to show who sent it.

A conscience fund will be created by the company.

Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow, Jr., who were married last week, are spending their honeymoon in Bermuda.

SCHWARTZ PRESENTS BILLS FOR ELIZABETH

Two important bills relating to the administration of municipal affairs in Elizabeth were presented to the House at Trenton, last night by Assemblyman Schwartz. The first one was an act prepared by the Legislative Committee of the Union County Bar Association, providing for the creation of the office of police recorder in Elizabeth. If the bill is passed it will have the effect of ousting Police Justice Mahon, for the reason that the proposed law requires that a police recorder be a councilor at law. It is provided that he shall be appointed for a term of two years at a salary of $2,000 per annum, the law to take effect January 1, 1911. Provision is also made for the appointment of a clerk to the recorder at a salary of $1,200 per year, this selection to be made by the recorder himself.

The long-discussed proposition of establishing a Board of Works in Elizabeth appeared in the form of a bill presented by Mr. Schwartz. It creates a bi-partisan commission consisting of four members who are to be appointed by the mayor for two-year terms each, with the terms of two of the commissioners expiring January first each year. The mayor is required to fill vacancies in the board within thirty days after they have occurred. If the bill is enacted it will give the board power over the streets, sewers and sanitary works of the city.

A third bill offered by Mr. Schwartz is an amendment to the law relating to the payment of salaries to employees in the Rahway Reformatory. The present law fixes $1,500 per year as the minimum salary for employees of the institution other than the superintendent. Mr. Schwartz bill will permit the payment of salaries in excess of $1,500 per year when such is approved by the Governor.

HERE AND THERE.

For several years a large flock of sparrows have made their home in a loft of a barn in the rear of the residence of Salmon C. Baker on West Fifth street. Yesterday, however, they were driven out in the cold and rendered homeless by a flock of starlings and blackbirds. A furious battle raged between the rival birds for several hours, which was watched by a score of residents of that section, and the starlings and blackbirds finally secured posession of the premises.

NEW MARKETITES HAVE THE BOROUGH IDEA

Home rule is the slogan of a number of progressive residents of New Market. It has recently leaked out that plans are under way whereby a bill will be introduced in the Senate by Senator Silzer to make the village a borough. A majority of the property owners, it is a known fact, are anxious to shake off the old fashioned township form of government, but there was never no concerted movement to accomplish the change, as no one cared to take the initiative. It was understood among a few who favor the plan that if Judge Von Minden was re-elected to the Assembly last November he would father the bill in the lower house, but when he was defeated the plans of the borough agitators were upset. It is now understood, however, that Senator Silzer is not adverse to introducing a measure for his constituents, but thus far he has failed to pledge himself to support the measure. Since the advocates for a borough in South Plainfield lost their fight a few years ago the agitation in New Market simmered down but since January 1 the movement has experienced a fair support among the property owners.

Stole Sixty Pigeons.

A thief entered the pigeon loft of Clarence Eick at Lincoln on Sunday night and stole sixty valuable pigeons.

DON'T WANT SANITARIUM FOR CONSUMPTIVES HERE

A bill aimed to prevent the establishment of institutions for the treatment of tuberculosis, which is the outcome of the fight made by Lakewood against the proposed preventatorium in that place, was presented in the House, at Trenton, last night by Assemblyman Crosby, of Ocean. The bill provides that it shall be unlawful to treat any person for tuberculosis in any hospital, sanitorium or preventatorium without consent of the State Board of Health, except that the law shall not apply to the treatment of afflicted persons by parents or relatives in private houses. The bill makes it necessary for the State Board of Health to conduct a hearing upon any application for a permit to establish an institution for the care of consumptives.

Assemblyman Moore, of Passaic, introduced a bill requiring the payment of fifty cents to members of the National Guard for attendance upon drills. He also offered a bill calling for the payment of half-pay to veterans of the Civil War who voluntarily retire from State and municipal work after twenty-five years' service.

FORMER SENATOR CORNISH, OF WARREN COUNTY, DEAD.

Joseph B. Cornish, former Senator from Warren county, and father of State Senator Johnson Cornish, of that county, died at the home in Washington, yesterday at an advanced age. He was president of the organ and piano company bearing his name; also the First National Bank, of Washington.

At the session of the Legislature, yesterday, Senator Price called the attention of the members to the death of Mr. Cornish. A resolution was adopted instructing the secretary to convey the condolence of the members to Senator Cornish. The late Mr. Cornish was at one time secretary of the Senate.

At Proctor's.

"Mr. Reynolds," one of the world's greatest detectives, is the title of a dramatic sketch presented by Sully, Guard & Co., at Proctor's theatre this week. The action is so real that it holds one's attention throughout and is presented in clever fashion. Barrett & Scanlon, comedy acrobats, are brimful of comedy and their work is marvelous. Rose Berry is a bright young entertainer, who make a piano talk. The Clarks are singing catchy songs and do some clever dancing. The films d'art continue to be par excellent.

Delicate Operation on a Dog.

A bull collie, belonging to Richard Biddle, of Liberty street, swallowed a hat pin about a week ago. The canine had been ailing for a few days and Mr. Biddle called in the services of Dr. Butler. An X-ray examination developed that a pin three inches long was in the stomach of the dog. Dr. Butler removed the pin in a successful operation and the dog displays signs of returning health and agility.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP TALK AT AUTO CLUB BANQUET

Good citizenship and the respect of the rights of others was the motif of the seventh annual banquet of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club at the New Auditorium at Newark, last evening. More than 300 members of the organization and their friends gathered to enjoy the festivities and hear speeches by a number of distinguished Jerseymen.

Those who responded to toasts were former Senator James Smith, Jr., former Governor Edward C. Stokes, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles J. B. R. Smith, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance Vivian M. Lewis, George F. Reeve, president of the Newark Board of Trade; Rufus L. Scott, Jr., and Colonel Austin Colgate. The toastmaster was W. Clive Crosby, president of the club.

Mr. Stokes was greeted as "the next United States Senator," and Mr. Lewis was hailed as the next Governor.

The hall was attractively dressed, the prevailing color scheme being the colors of the club, light blue, white and gold. From the central chandalier radiated streamers of blue and white, dotted with golden stars, and the walls of the auditorium were covered with festoons of the club colors and the national emblem.

MIX-UP OVER TAX MONEY.

Trenton Gets a Surprise Over $1,300,000 Payment.

Trenton, Jan. 25.—Serious complications may result from the discovery just made that the Trenton Board of Water Commissioners has, during the past six years, paid out more than $1,300,000 of the taxpayers' money in a manner that was contrary to the method prescribed by the act of 1904 regulating the receipt and disbursement of money in cities of this State.

This act provides that all money received from any source by municipal boards or departments shall be paid to the city treasurer, to be by him disbursed on warrants issued by such boards. This act also requires that all bills must be approved by the Mayor. It has been ascertained that notwithstanding this law, the local Water Board has continued to handle its own finances in the same manner that it did before the law was enacted, the amount of money passing through its hands in that time having been $1,387,608. The law was tested and sustained in a New Brunswick case, and three members of the New Brunswick Water Board were removed from office for disobeying the law in the same respect as has been disclosed in Trenton.

The U. S. A. War Game.

Not in years—not since the days when Stoddard successfully proved that a "travel show" was not necessarily a vehicle for tiresome description—have we had an entertainment as delightful, as satisfying, as artistic and as inspiring as Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival at the Plainfield theatre on January 26. Not in years have we been privileged to sit for two and a half hours, seeing wonder after wonder—one more charming than the other because of their great variety.

Woman's Property Rights.

In the State Senate last night Senator E. R. Ackerman introduced an amendment to section six of Senate bill No. 39, of the act relating to the property of married women by permitting the sale and transfer of any property right without the consent of a husband confined in an insane asylum or prison, provided said sale does not affect any of his rights.

I. P. Runyon Appointed Judge.

Governor J. Franklin Fort yesterday sent the name of Isaac P. Runyon, of North Plainfield, to the Senate for confirmation as judge of the District Court, of the First Judicial District of the County of Somerset. The appointment is for a full term.

Clothes Caught Fire.

While sitting near a stove in Frank Hedden's livery office this morning the trousers of Fred Smith caught fire. Ludlow Frazee, an attache of the stable, discovered Smith's plight and smothered the flames with a horse blanket.

Resolutions of Respect.

Just before the House adjourned last night Assemblyman Pierce introduced a resolution of regret over the death of former Assemblyman William F. Hall, of Cranford. The resolution was adopted by a rising vote.

Senator Ackerman Busy.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman introduced two bills in the Senate yesterday, both for the President. One bill supplement the borough act of 1897 and the other amends the act of April 13, 1909.

Transferred to Red Bank.

Plainfield in . . . . The Olden Days.

Re-printed from The Weekly Constitutionalist

Jhne 1, 1871.

A serious accident happened to a young son of Barney Coleman, in North Plainfield, last week. It seems that the lad, with another boy, was chopping wood on a block, each boy having an axe. Young Coleman stooped down to pick up a stick, when the axe of the other boy descended and cut off one of the fingers of Coleman's left hand, which was resting on the block at the time. Dr. Tomlinson dressed the stump, and the lad is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

Accidents—On Saturday last a son of Clark Mundy, about 4 years of age, while playing in the street, was struck by the wheel of a passing butcher's wagon and severely injured, having some of his teeth knocked out and being badly bruised generally. Dr. South was immediately called, and is now attending him with beneficial results.

June 8, 1871.

A pleasant reception was held at the residence of Rev. K. P. Ketcham on Friday evening last by the members of the congregation of the First Presbyterian church. Amid music, singing and pleasant conversation, a delightful evening was spent.

We learn that some party or parties entered the stables of Joseph Vail, Esq., on Broadway, last Wednesday evening, and stole a set of harness, valued at about $50.

Our esteemed friend, L. N. K. Smalley, Esq., has made some decided improvements in his residence near the depot at Fanwood. The "Squire" has an elegant residence, is a gentleman, and we wish him abundance of success in his business. His office is at Marsh's Hotel, Westfield, where he may be found each day.

June 15.

We learn it is the intention of Dr. C. H. Stillman to erect handsome store buildings on his lot on Front street, shortly. The dwelling house of Mrs. Mundy, next to Stevenson's bakery on Front street, is also to be raised and handsome stores built beneath it.

Mr. Samuel Terry having opened a Fruit and Confectionery Stand on Second Street, invites his friends and public in general to give him a call. Mr. Terry has been obliged to give up his business, that of painting, in consequence of ill-health and has therefore concluded to try his hand at the business above stated. We trust the public will give him their liberal patronage. His stand is two doors south of Dobbins' segar store.

Mr. E. M. Brown, of Scotch Plains, contemplates erecting a fine mansion on the corner of Front and Richmond streets shortly.

May 18, 1871.

Narrow Escape—On Saturday evening last, as Mr. Hardwick and wife were out riding, his horse, a very pretty black pony, took fright and ran away, despite the efforts of Mr. H. to restrain him, and continued running until meeting fith an obstruction that demolished one of the hind wheels, when he came to a halt, with no injurious results to the occupants of the vehicle, except a bad fright.

Our efficient and well known City Collector, D. Martin, has left us for a brief visit to the west. May he soon return, for his genial face is sadly missed and his absence a theme of conversation at his familiar places of resort.

The long needed pavement is being laid on the north side of Cherry street, cor. of Front, and we would respectfully inquire if the raising of the curb stones some three or four inches is beneficial to the wood pavement.

We heard the unmistakable son of a "brother Jonathan" in the mill pond the other evening. Let him beware of his head, or in the words of the poet:—

'Tis the voice of the bull-frog
I hear him complain;
I must hit him a rap
Or he'll beller again.

But few of our citizens have an idea of the magnitude of the work of drainage which is now being prosecuted on the lands of Mr. Charles Hyde, on Mountain avenue. By a thorough and expensive system of tile drainage, low, wet lands on the westerly side of the above avenue is now being made dry, and will eventually bring into the market valuable building lots.

Now that the long talked about property of Mrs. Spencer, at Seventh street and Cherry Street has been disposed of satisfactorily, we may soon expect to see Cherry street extension completed, and when that is done, it will be one of the finest avenues in the city.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. Garretson, the new station agent at the depot of this City, gives general satisfaction to all. Mr. G. is courteous to all, and faithfully discharges his duties.

We noticed our friend Gardner, the Grocer, on Front Street, has come out with a new wagon, with his name and business on the side.

A PRINCETON MEDICAL CLUB.

Princeton, Jan. 25.—Although there is no department of medicipe in Princeton University, the students who intend to follow that profession after their academic training here have organized a Medical Club.

A series of lectures will be given once a month for the rest of the college year by prominent surgeons and physicians on the general subject of diseases. These lectures will be open to all students, and are designed to be of general interest to undergraduates. The club has a membership of about twenty undergraduates. Meetings are held in a room given by the university in Guyot Hall, the new laboratory of natural science. The officers are: President, James S. Taylor, 1910; vice-president, E. C. Jessup, 1911; treasurer, R. M. Entwistle, 1910; secretary, J. J. Chisholm, 1911.

RED BANK POULTRY SHOW.

Red Bank, Jan. 25.—Newark fanciers will exhibit fowls at the second annual show of the Monmouth Poultry Club, which opens in the armory tomorrow and continues for four days. Among them are Uzal H. McCarter, William P. Harth and Kirschler & Campbell. Other exhibitors will include A. & E. Termeer, of Summit; S. F. Corrado and Irving Trimmer, of Bernardsville; C. P. Davis, of New Brunswick; Charles Jehl and William H. Taber, of Long Branch; F. E. Hamman, of Plainfield; W. D. Campbell, of Bloomfield, and William A. Smith, of Metuchen. There will be about one hundred exhibitors from Red Bank and neighboring towns. About one thousand six hundred birds will be shown. The awards will be made on the opening day.

Trenton's Fear of Freshet Wanes.

Trenton, Jan. 25.—The water in the Delaware River fell a foot yesterday, and there is no longer fear that a freshet will ensue. Men, women and children took all kinds of chances all day yesterday in pulling driftwood to the shore with various kinds of hooks and appliances. Some would even jump on a cake of ice close to shore to try and save a piece of firewood. Yesterday morning five rowboats came down the stream at various times. They were near the middle of the stream and no attempt was made to secure them.

Wants Cemetery to Become Park.

Paterson, Jan. 25.—Rev. J. Alfonso Belanger made a strong plea for the conversion of the Sandy Hill Cemetery into a public park at the evening services of the Auburn Street Congregational church Sunday. He argued that Paterson has good schools, good churches and good cemeteries, but said we owe it to that sacred memory which is due to our dead that this elimination of an old broken down tract be carried out as far as the beauty of the city is at need.

Courthouse Custodian Very Ill.

Elizabeth, Jan. 25.—James J. Carey, assistant custodian of the Union county courthouse, was taken yesterday to the Elizabeth General Hospital suffering from kidney and bladder trouble. He was attacked with a hemorrhage Saturday, and Dr. Wagner, who was called in, advised his removal to the hospital. The sick man is sixty-five years old and a widower.

Newarker on "Mission of Israel."

Bayonne, Jan. 25.—Dr. Solomon Foster, of Newark, lectured here Saturday night before the Alpha Theta fraternity of this city. His subject was the "Mission of Israel." The Hebrew population of this city turned out in large numbers to attend the lecture, and the National Auditorium, in West Twenty-third street, was crowded to the doors.

Lemon Ring.

One and a half pounds of flour, half a pound of butter, one pound of sugar, three lemons, four eggs, half a cupful of milk. Rub the butter into the flour. Mix in the sugar and the grated rind of the lemons. Beat up the eggs well and wet paste with them, adding the milk. Roll out thin and cut into rings with two cutters. Bake on a buttered baking tine in a moderate oven.

BIRDS' NECKS.

It's the Number of Bones In Them That Makes Them Flexible.

The flamingoes were looking their afternoon toilets in the big flying cage at the Bronx zoo the other afternoon, says a writer in a New York paper. A crowd of children and grown people were looking on and exclaiming with admiring wonder at the way these birds were twisting their long necks about into all sorts of corkscrews and curves when one of the ornithological experts came along and stopped to watch the performance.

"It's the larger number of bones in a bird's neck, not the length, that make it so flexible," he remarked. "There are twenty-three bones in the neck of a swan, for example, and a few more in that of the flamingo. It seems that the smaller the animal organism the larger the number of neck bones. The giraffe, for instance, has only seven bones in his long neck, which has a reach of nearly twenty feet from the ground. That little white throated sparrow over there is only three inches high, but he has fourteen bones in his neck and can almost scratch the back of his head with his bill. The swan has twenty-three neck bones and swings his head about with even greater freedom than a snake."

THE PLEBEIANS.

Their Secession From Rome and Their Rise to Power.

Plebeians were the commons of Rome, who were originally forbidden all political rights. They were for the most part poor and were not allowed to intermarry with the patricians. They served in the army without pay and were sold into slavery for debt and could even be cut into pieces for distribution among their creditors.

Finding their condition intolerable, the plebeians in 497 B. C. seceded to Mons Sacer, near Rome, where they resolved to build a new city. But this step so alarmed the privileged classes that they granted to the commons the right of annually choosing from their own numbers two magistrates, called tribunes, with power to protect them against the aggressions of the patricians.

After the lapse of about 200 years the disabilities of the plebeians were almost entirely removed, and between the years 356-300 B. C. they secured the dictatorship, the censorship and the praetorship as well as the right to be pontiff and augur. Thus the Roman republic, after two centuries of existence, finally secured a democratic form of government.—New York American.

Sweat and Perspire.

It is possible to tell almost exactly when the more elegant "perspire" drove out the vulgar "sweat." According to a writer in the London Gentleman's Magazine in 1751, "for some time past neither man, woman nor child in Great Britain and Ireland of any rank or fashion has been subject to the gross fluid of condition which was formerly known as 'sweat.' Now every mortal exudes, men only perspire." For close to forty years past the word "sweat" has been gradually becoming more and more rare.

Before 1770 or so "perspiration" commonly meant an invisible process, "sweating" the grosser variety thereof. In one of his sermons Wesley remarked that "during a night's sleep a healthy man perspires one part in four less when he sweats than when he does not." That would be a winning loss today.

Queer Sort of Borrowing.

[illegible] marble a s[illegible] "One of my best friends," he said, putting a fresh coin on the table, "gave me a dollar the other day to be held for him [illegible] and I'm asked quite often."

"What?" a listener exclaimed. "Keep a dollar from sentiment and go hungry and sleepless?"

"I didn't say so," the other replied. "I never went that far. You see, when I'm so hard pressed I use the coin as collateral. I borrow another dollar and give this one as security—to be held till called for. Queer sort of borrow, isn't it? But the coin's too good a friend to desert."—New York Globe.

Identified Her.

A story of every woman's ability to rise superior to those petty details which so often hamper, frustrate and nullify the operations of any man is told of a Harrison woman who tried to have a check cashed at a bank where she was not known, says the Newark Call. The usual remarks were made by the cashier concerning the need of identification, to which the woman immediately replied: "Oh, well, that's easy. I can always be identified by this mole on my cheek."

A Mistaken Cure.

"Yes, dear," called back the gentle wife.

"Why in thunder don't you keep that kid quiet? What ails it?"

"I can't think, dear. I'm giving it one of your pillboxes to the poor little darling."—Lippincott's.

A Potential Difference.

"Pa, what's the difference between idealism and realism?"

"Idealism, my son, is the contemplation of marriage; realism is being married."—Boston Transcript.

"Because if she were involved in some undertaking—something that, if it went wrong, would endanger her happiness and, I think, even her life, for it might actually kill her if she failed and brought on a worse catastrophe"—

"Yes?" I said anxiously as she paused again.

"You'd help her?" she said.

"I would, indeed," I assented earnestly. "I told her once I'd do anything in the world for her."

"Even if it involved something that George Ward might never forgive you for?"

"I said 'anything in the world,'" I returned, perhaps a little huskily.

She gave a low cry of triumph, but immediately checked it. Then she leaned far over the table. "I wasn't afraid to come through the woods alone," she said in a very low voice, "because I wasn't alone. Louise came with me."

"What?" I gasped. "Where is she?"

"At the Baudry cottage down the road. They won't miss her at the chateau until morning. I locked her door on the outside, and if they go to bother her again—though I don't think they will—they'll believe she's fastened it on the inside and is asleep. She managed to get a note to Keredec late this afternoon. It explained everything, and he had some trunks carried out the rear gate of the inn and carted over to Lisieux to be shipped to Paris from there. It is to be supposed—or hoped at least—that this woman and her people will believe that means Professor Keredec and Mr. Harman will try to get to Paris in the same way."

"So," I said, "that's what Percy meant about the trunks. I didn't understand."

"He's on watch, you see," she continued. "Mr. Percy!" She laughed nervously. "That's why it's almost necessary for us to have you."

"If you have me for what?" I asked.

"I'll help you"—and as she looked up her eyes, now very close to mine, were dazzling indeed—"I'll adore you forever and ever! Oh, much longer than you'd like me to!"

"You mean she's going to"—

"I mean that she's going to run away with him again," she whispered.

CHAPTER XIV.

At midnight there was no mistaking the palpable uneasiness with which Mr. Percy, faithful sentry, regarded the behavior of Miss Elliott and myself as we sat conversing upon the veranda of the pavilion. The lights of the inn were all set. The Spanish woman and M. Rameau had made their appearance for a moment, half an hour earlier, to exchange a word with their fellow vigilant, and soon after the extinguishing of the lamps in their respective apartments denoted their retirement for the night. In the "grande suite" all had been dark and silent for an hour.

I kept going over and over the details of Louise Harman's plan as the girl beside me had outlined it, bending above the smudgy sketchbook. "To make them think the flight is for Paris," she had urged—"to Paris by way of Lisieux. To make that man yonder believe that it is toward Lisieux while they turn at the crossroads and drive across the country to Trouville for the morning boat to Havre."

It was simple. That was its great virtue. If they were well started they were safe, and well started meant only that Larrabee Harman should leave the inn without an alarm. With two hours' start and the pursuit spending most of its energy in the wrong direction—that is, toward Lisieux and Paris—they would be on the deck of the French-Canadian liner tomorrow noon, sailing out of the harbor of Le Havre with nothing but the Atlantic ocean between them and the St. Lawrence.

Suddenly I saw a light shine from Keredec's window.

I remarked, "Now, if you will permit me, I'll offer you my escort back to Quesnay," I said to Miss Elliott.

I went into my room, put on my cap, lit a lantern and returned with it to the veranda. We crossed the garden as far as the steps. Mr. Percy signified his approval. "Gunna see the little lady home, are you?" he said graciously. "I was thinkin' it was about time m'self."

The salon door of the "grande suite" opened above me, and at the sound the youth started, springing back to see what it portended, but I ran quickly up the steps. Keredec stood in the doorway bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves. In one hand he held a traveling bag, which he immediately gave me.

He went back into the room, closing the door, and I descended the steps as rapidly as I had run up them. Without pausing I started for the rear of the courtyard, Miss Elliott accompanying me.

The sentry had watched these proceedings open mouthed, more mystified than alarmed. "Luk here," he said, "I want t' know what this means."

"Anything you choose to think it means," I laughed, beginning to walk a little more rapidly. He glanced up at the windows of the "grande suite," which were again dark, and began to follow us slowly. "Whut you gut in that grip?" he asked.

"You don't think we're carrying off Mr. Harman?"

"I reckon he's in his room all right," said the youth grimly, "unless he's flew out."

We emerged at the foot of a lane behind the inn. It was long and narrow, bordered by stone walls and at the other end debouched upon a road which passed the rear of the Baudry cottage.

"You long legged devil!" he yelled.

Miss Elliott took my arm, and we entered the lane.

Mr. Percy paused undecidedly. "I want t' know whut you think y're doin'," he repeated angrily, calling after us.

"It's very simple," I called in turn. "I think you may as well go back. We're not going far enough to need a guard."

Mr. Percy allowed an oath to escape him, and we heard him muttering to himself. Then his footsteps sounded behind us.

"He's coming!" Miss Elliott whispered, with nervous exultation, looking over her shoulder. "He's going to follow."

We trudged briskly on, followed at some fifty paces by the perturbed watchman. We were embarked upon a singular adventure, not unattended by a certain danger. We were tingling with a hundred apprehensions, occupied with the vital necessity of drawing the little spy after us—and that was a strange moment for a man (and an elderly painter man of no mark at that) to hear himself called what I was called then in a tremulous whisper close to my ear. Of course she has denied it since. Nevertheless she said it—twice, for I pretended not to hear her the first time. I made no answer, for something in the word she called me and in her seeming to mean it made me choke up so that I could not even whisper. But I made up my mind that after that if this girl saw Mr. Earl Percy on his way back to the inn before she wished him to go it would be because he had killed me

We were near the end of the lane when the neigh of a horse sounded sonorously from the road beyond.

Mr. Percy came running up swiftly and darted by us.

"Who's that?" he called loudly. "Who's that in the cart yonder?"

I set my lantern down close to the wall, and a horse and cart drew up on the road. It was Pere Baudry's best horse, a stout gray, that would easily make Trouville by daylight. A woman's figure and a man's (the latter that of Pere Baudry himself) could be made out dimly on the cart seat.

"Who is it, I say?" shouted our excited friend. "What kind of a game d'ye think y're puttin' up on me here?" A glance at the occupants satisfied him. "Mrs. Harman!" he yelled. "Mrs. Harman! I knowed I was a fool to come away without wakin' up Rameau. But you haven't beat us yet."

He drove back into the lane, but just inside its entrance I met him.

"Where are you going?" I asked

"Back to the Pigeon house in a burry. There's devilment here. I want Rameau!"

"You're not going back," said I.

"The h— I ain't!" said Mr. Percy. "I give ye two seconds t' git out o' my—Take yer hands offa me!"

I made sure of my grip, not upon the refulgent overcoat, for I feared he might slip out of that, but upon the collars of his coat and waistcoat.

"You long legged devil!" he yelled, and I instantly received a series of concussions upon the face and head which put me in supreme doubt of my surroundings, for I seemed to have plunged eyes foremost into the Milky Way. I was conscious of some one screaming, and it seemed a consoling part of my delirium that the cheek of Miss Anne Elliott should be jammed tight against mine through one phase of the explosion. I hung to him, as Pere Baudry testifies, for a minute and a half, which seems no inconsiderable lapse of time to a person undergoing such experiences as were then afflicting me.

It appeared to me that we were revolving in enormous circles in the ether and I had long since given my last gasp when there came a great roaring wind in my ears and a range of mountains toppled upon us both. We went to earth beneath it.

"Ha! You must create violence, then!" roared the avalanche.

The voice was the voice of Keredec.

Some one pulled me from underneath my struggling antagonist, and, the power of sight in a hazy, zigzagging fashion coming back to me, I perceived the figure of Miss Anne Elliott recumbent beside me, her arms about Mr. Percy's prostrate body. The extraordinary girl had fastened upon him, too, though I had not known it, and she had gone to ground with us, but it is to be said for Mr. Earl Percy that no blow of his touched her, and she was not hurt. Even in the final extremities of temper he had carefully discriminated in my favor.

Mrs. Harman was bending over her and as the girl sprang up lightly threw her arms about her. For my part, I rose more slowly, section by section, wondering why I did not fall apart, lips, nose and cheeks bleeding, and I had a fear that I should need to be led like a blind man through my eyelids swelling shut. That was something I earnestly desired should not happen; but, whether it did or did not or if the heavens fell, I meant to walk back to Quesnay with Anne Elliott that night, and, mangled, broken or half dead, presenting whatever appearance of the prize ring or the abattoir that I might, I intended to take the same train for Paris on the morrow that she did.

For our days together were not at an end, nor was it hers nor my desire that they should be.

It was Oliver Saffren—as I like to think of him—who helped me to my feet and wiped my face with his handkerchief and when that one was ruined brought others from his bag and stanched the wounds gladly received in the service of his wife.

"I will remember"— he said, and his voice broke. "These are the memories which Keredec says make a man good. I pray they will help to redeem me." And for the last time I heard the child in him speaking: "I ought to be redeemed. I must be, don't you think, for her sake?"

"Lose no time!" shouted Keredec. "You must be gone if you will reach that certain town for the 5 o'clock train of the morning." This was for the spy's benefit. It indicated Lisieux and the train to Paris. Mr. Percy struggled. The professor knelt over him, pinioning his wrists in one great hand and holding him easily to earth.

"Ha, my friend"—he addressed his captive—"you shall not have cause to say we do you any harm. There shall be no law, for you are not hurt, and you are not going to be. But here you shall stay quiet for a little while—till I say you can go." As he spoke he bound the other's wrists with a short rope which he took from his pocket, performing the same office immediately afterward for Mr. Percy's ankles.

"I take the count," was the sole remark of that philosopher. "I can't go up against no herd of elephants."

The two women were crying in each other's arms. "Goodby!" sobbed Anne Elliott.

Mrs. Harman turned to Keredec. "Goodby for a little while!"

He kissed her hand. "Dear lady, I shall come within the year."

She came to me, and I took her hand, meaning to kiss it as Keredec had done, but suddenly she was closer, and I felt her lips upon my battered cheek. I remember it now.

I wrung her husband's hand, and then he took her in his arms, lifted her to the footboard of the cart and sprang up beside her.

"God bless you, and goodby!" we called.

And their voices came back to us, "God bless you, and goodby!"

THE END.

BEARDING THE LIONS.

The modern clean, smooth faces of our gentlemen suggest a few bearded faces of other times and centuries.

Alexander caused his Macedonian soldiers to be clipped lest their enemies should make use of their beards as handles in the fight.

Persian kings wore long beards interwoven with golden threads, while slaves in the same country were shaven as a sign of servitude.

When the Normans sought to compel the English to shave, as they did themselves, many chose rather to abandon their country than to lose their whiskers.

In the Bayeux tapestry King Edward the Confessor is represented either with a beard like a bunch of radishes or a forked beard and a long mustache hanging down, while quite another sort of appendage adorns his chin in a painting at Westminster Abbey.

Cassar has left it uopn record that ancient Britons wore no beards, though they allowed hair to grow upon the upper lip; and Strabo bears testimony of an opposite sort, writing of Sicily islanders in his time whose custom it was to grow beards goat fashion in a point below the chin.

Many years ago a certain Frenchman's upper lip was graced by a flowing mustache of such extraordinary length that it was his custom before a meal to tie it, with the utmost gravity, behind his head, that there might be no impediment to the full enjoyment of his food.

Held on Double Charges.

New Brunswick, Jan. 25.—Running an alleged gambling house with coal said to have been stolen led to the arrest of John Davis, colored, here Saturday night. Davis has a poolroom on Burnet street in Armory Hall. Nearby are the office and coal yards of Edward Tindell, a coal dealer. Edward Bell and Spencer Beghter, both colored, were arrested by the police charged with stealing coal from Tindell's yards. They frequented the Davis place and charges were made against Davis of allowing gambling there and of receiving stolen goods in using the coal. All were held for the grand jury and were committed to jail.

BRUTALLY ASSAULTED.

Perth Amboy, Jan. 25.—Johannes Rosenvinge, an employe of C. Feigenspan, was found at Smith and Elm streets Sunday morning bleeding from a half a dozen wounds on his head and face. Rosenvinge said he was attacked by a Dane about twenty years old. Rosenvinge declared he was on his way to the Feigenspan stables shortly before 6 o'clock. The man who assaulted him asked him what time it was and as the latter looked at his watch he was dealt two blows with a piece of iron. Rosenvinge fell and the stranger kicked him repeatedly about the head, crying out, "I'll kill you, I'll kill you."

While Rosenvinge was still unconscious two other men approached them and the assailant told them to get the police and doctor, explaining that he had beaten Rosenvinge for attempting to rob him.

Dr. John L. Lund examined Rosenvinge and says that he will recover. The police arrested William L. Reynolds who said he lived in Long Branch. They took him before Rosenvinge, who said he was not the man.

IN HOSPITAL THROUGH GRIEF.

Elizabeth, Jan. 25.—Stricken with convulsions from the shock of her husband's death last Friday, the widow of Edwin O'Brien, who was janitor of Public School No. 8, lies in a serious condition in the hospital, where she was removed a few hours after he passed away.

Her brother, Edward Sheridan, is also in the hospital, suffering with pneumonia, the disease from which his brother-in-law died. Mr. Sheridan was in constant attendance on his relative during the latter's fatal illness and thus contracted the malady.

Mr. O'Brien's funeral took place yesterday morning from his late home, 124 Fulton street, Elizabethport. The Americus Association, of which he was a founder, and the Holy Name Society were represented at the obsequies. Rev. James J. Smith, rector of the Holy Rosary church, of which the dead man was a communicant, was the celebrant of the requiem mass. Interment was at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

SISTER CLARE AGNES ILL.

Elizabeth, Jan. 25.—Sister Clare Agnes, who is principal of the parochial school attached to the Holy Rosary church, Elizabethport, is dangerously ill with pleuro-pneumonia in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, here. Sunday the rector, Rev. James J. Smith, asked the prayers of the congregation at all the masses for the recovery of the sick nun.

Sister Clare Agnes came to Elizabeth from Newark, where she had charge of St. Columbia's parochial school. She took the place of Sister Mary Fortunata in the Holy Rosary School, the latter, because of failing health, being transferred to the parochial school of Our Lady Help of Christians, at East Orange. Sister Fortunata was stricken with heart disease on the street in East Orange and died before medical aid could reach her.

SECTION HAND "SIDESWIPED."

Whitehouse, Jan. 25.—Daniel Park, a section hand on the New Jersey Central Railroad, was severely injured Sunday night while on duty west of the depot at Whitehouse station by being struck by an eastbound passenger train. He was looking after signals and was walking along the track when the train approached. He thought he was far enough out of the way, but the engine struck him and threw him thirty feet. He landed on his head.

Park was dazed for a while, but soon recovered sufficiently to walk to his home. His scalp was cut open in several places, and he was otherwise badly cut and bruised. His wounds were dressed by Dr. Clark.

Died from Pneumonia.

Elizabeth, Jan. 25.—Mrs. Sarah M. De Groot, who conducted a variety store at 64 East Jersey street, Elizabethport, died at her home yesterday from pneumonia, after an illness of one week. She was one of the oldest residents at Elizabethport, where she had lived nearly all her life. Mrs. De Groot was the widow of Captain Robert De Groot, who for years was one of the best known navigators on the Kills and New York waters, and had charge of the steamers Kill von Kull and Chancellor of the Central Railroad, which plied between New York and Elizabethport. She was a sister of the late Captain Tunis Egbert, who for years had charge of the ferry service of the Central Railroad between Jersey City and New York.

Kicked in Back by a Horse.

Califon, Jan. 25.—Former Collector Lambert K. Alpaugh is laid up at his home in Academy street with injuries sustained by being kicked by a horse belonging to his father, George Nelson Alpaugh, near Cokesbury. Mr. Alpaugh visited his parental home Friday and as he was leading the horse from the stable preparatory to returning home was kicked by the animal. He was struck in the back and sustained two fractured ribs. Dr. Isidore Topkins treated him and he was taken to his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Meredith Dryden, formerly of this city, but late of St. Michels, Md., have returned to Plainfield and are residing on DeLacy avenue.

NEWARK ELKS DEFEAT PLAINFIELD ANTLERS

Plainfield Elks lost the odd game in an Elks' League series at Newark last night. The local pin knights made an auspicious start by taking the Essex county aggregation into camp in the initial set-to by the score of 972 to 950, but after performing this brilliant stunt, the backbone of the local machine collapsed, and it was Newark all the way.

A tiptop brand of pinning was executed by the local contingent in the first game. Stout led the procession with a 222 mark and Kiely was second with a score of 214. Campbell and Blatz also classified in the double century brigade with respective scores of 202 and 200. "Old Hard Luck" got Eddie Laing's goat securely by the horns, and the best the local newsdealer could register was a paltry 134, but that often happens to the best of bowlers.

Newark hit the pins at a steady clip in all three games. Losing the first game did not disconcert the opponents of the locals in the least. In the second they returned a 940 score to Plainfield's 836, and wound up the series with a 908 to 869 triumph. The scores:

| Totals | 950 | 940 | 908 |

Notes on Elks Game.

Despite their setback at Newark last night local Elks are making a proud showing in the league. Plainfield ranks fourth in standing, which is considered a grand showing for a first year team. Then the locals have the high team score, 993, and Johnny Campbell tops the individual efforts with a 254 mark. Campbell also held the high individual mark up to last night.

C. Stout did the best work for the locals last night. Chauncey's average for the three games was 190.

Hoboken will be here on Thursday night. The pinners from the German village are in second place and make a hot bid for the championship.

Last night's sting of defeat was partially wiped out by the hospitable treatment accorded the local contingent by the Newark Elks after the battle.

Franz, of Newark, rolled a spectacular game. In the first he scored 222 and in the second 211. Then he hit the toboggan and got a measley 127.

C. R. R. BOWLERS DO WELL ON THE ALLEYS

At the regular meeting of the C. R. R. of N. J. Bowling Association at Campbell's alleys yesterday morning, the two men team championship was decided by a victory for the dispatchers' team, which has held the honors for some time. The scores:

Dispatchers Team.

| | | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Snyder | 197 | 215 | 172 | 212 | 150 |
| Vanderhoof | 193 | 158 | 122 | 139 | 171 |

| Lavelle | 143 | 176 | 221 | 198 | 153 |
| Totals | 259 | 335 | 388 | 379 | 302 |

A special match between Snyder and Hall of the Dispatchers, and Early and Lavelle resulted in a tie. The scores:

| | | | | |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Snyder | 181 | 211 | 163 | 169 |
| Hall | 132 | 160 | 145 | 139 |
| Totals | 313 | 371 | 308 | 308 |
| Early | 129 | 157 | 194 | 166 |
| Lavelle | 164 | 136 | 218 | 170 |
| Totals | 293 | 293 | 412 | 336 |

The averages for all games rolled at the meeting were as follows: Snyder, 178; Lavelle, 175; Early, 159; Vanderhoof, 156; Hall, 144; Meaney, 125; Griffin, 95.

Notes of the Tourney.

It was a sad blow for the "Poodle Team," but Snyder and Van. were on the job and had them safe at all times. When it was necessary they stuck in a few good ones and won out.

Night Station Master Early contributes his poor showing to the "rooting." Others think it was his "regular game."

The 232 score still remains high. Lavelle made desperate effort to beat it, but dropped off with a 221. His expression indicated "a broken heart."

For novices "the two Mikes" did well.

"Abe" is getting back to his previous good form. The little rest did the gent from Somerville no harm.

Early appeared for the first time with two white feet. Frank thinks they made him top heavy and cut down his average. His 116 as an opener indicated something wrong.

There should be something doing next Monday.

JOINT CAUCUS PUT OFF.

Republicans of Both Houses Get Together Next Monday.

Trenton, Jan. 25.—Several prominent members of the House and Senate Republican majorities were unable to reach Trenton in time for the caucus which had been planned, and so the leaders decided to postpone it for a week. The call was formally issued during the evening for a joint caucus in the Senate chamber next Monday night, January 31.

The caucus will pick State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees to succeed himself for another term of three years. The Democratic minority of House and Senate has agreed tentatively to nominate for the place Stephen Egan, of Hudson county, as their choice for State treasurer and he will probably receive their complimentary votes.

Mr. and Mrs. William Thiers, of St. Michaels, Md., have been visiting relatives here for a time.

John C. VanDyke, of East Fifth street, who has been at the hospital under treatment for injuries received in a fall, was able to go to the hospital table for dinner on Sunday.

PANAMA AT CLOSE RANGE

Charles L. Lewis Pictures the Government Work on Isthmus.

HIS TALK WAS INSTRUCTIVE.

At the Y. M. C. A. Auditorium Lecturer Tells What U. S. Has Accomplished There.

"What I Saw in Panama," was the subject of a highly interesting as well as instructive lecture, delivered by Charles L. Lewis, to an attentive audience in Y. M. C. A. hall last night. Mr. Lewis' portrayal of the conditions on the Isthmus, which was given to his hearers in clear and convincing language, and his talk had a realistic tinge to it by beautifully colored photographic illustrations in which scenes of that tropical clime were vividly presented.

The material for the lecture was gathered by Mr. Lewis during the summer of 1908 when the Lotus Glee Club, of which he is a member, made a trip to the Isthmus under the auspices of the Isthmian Canal Commission, to give a series of ten concerts to the U. S. Government employes engaged in work in that country.

A distinctive interesting point of the lecture was Mr. Lewis' laudation of the perfect sanitary conditions prevailing in the cities of Panama and Colon. A remarkable progress in this direction, he said, had been made by the United States, which now has absolute sanitary jurisdiction in these cities.

Mr. Lewis alluded to the extermination of the mosquito by Dr. Gorgas, which he said displays the remarkable progress made there in sanitation. Referring to the mosquito Mr. Lewis put it in this way: "While there I saw one, heard two, but felt none."

A visit to Fort Lorenzo, as described by the lecturer, was another interesting part of his talk. In describing the native citizens, or "spiggoties" as they are called by the American residents, he declared they were a lazy, but apparently happy people, and life among them appeared to be a perpetual holiday.

While in Panama Mr. Lewis said he was impressed with the churches and cathedrals. While in that city he attended a session of the National Assembly, which is the only law making body of the Republic.

Mr. Lewis also depicted his visits to the Gatum Dam and to Culebra Cut which he classed as two of the most stupendous engineering feats in the world's history. The visit to these points of interest was augumented by photographs which showed the steam drills and machinery making the "dirt fly."

The beauties of nature to be found on the Isthmus was not forgotten by Mr. Lewis. He dwelt considerably on the birds, flowers and trees. His descriptions of the silk cotton tree, the cocoanut and traveling palms was interesting.

The lecture is so highly regarded by the New York Board of Education that that body has engaged Mr. Lewis as the only lecturer to talk on Panama in the public schools of the metropolis.

Off for Sunny Climes.

Frank Boos, of Grant avenue, left this morning for a two months business trip through the south and west. Mr. Boos goes in the interests of the U. S. Express Company, New York office, and his first stop will be New Orleans. From the Crescent City he will journey to Galveston, Texas.

WANT A FACTORY SITE

A. J. McClintock, Representing New England Concern, Seeks Land Here.

THE COMPANY EMPLOYS 3,500.

Manufacturers of Men's and Boys' Boots and Shoes—Coming Again In Three Weeks.

A. J. McClintock, representing four boot and shoe factories, located at Lynn and Brockton, Mass., called on Francis J. Blatz, Esq., yesterday, for the purpose of securing information relative to manufacturing conditions in this city. Mr. McClintock while here also took occasion to look over several available sites of land on which to erect a large factory, which will have a capacity of turning out the combined product of the four factories which are at present engaged.

Owing to the inclement weather Mr. McClintock did not succeed in getting around as much as he anticipated. He was obliged to return to Boston last night but he will be here again in about three weeks to continue his search for a satisfactory site.

According to Mr. McClintock the four factories consolidated interests on January 1 and that it is the intention of the controlling interests of the new company to establish one plant for the entire product of the four factories at a place within easy access of the New York market.

The company under the new arrangement has about 3,500 persons on its payroll in the four factories, including men and women, many of whom are skilled mechanics. The concern uses annually nearly 75 per cent. of the output of a Newark leather factory, the former company's chief products being men and boys' boots and shoes.

During the past week Mr. McClintock investigated sites at Aldene, Bound Brook, West Dunellen, in addition to plots of ground in this city. Yesterday he looked over land on the line of the Jersey Central between this city and Dunellen on both the north and south sides of the track.

Mr. Colton, as the associate of John R. Mott, in the leadership of the foreign department of the Y. M. C. A., is at the head of a responsible department for the maintenance of nearly a hundred Y. M. C. A. secretaries in foreign cities, involving the raising of more than $150,000 a year.

Two years ago he made an extensive tour of mission lands and took part in the great convention of the World's Christian Student Federation at Tokio, a convention that was followed by the greatest evangelistic campaign in the history of Japan.

As a speaker, Mr. Colton, like Mr. Mott, is strong, eloquent and convincing. He is a man with a message that appeals to thinking men. His topic Friday night will be "Will America Evangelize her Share of the World?"

Captain Buxton spoke of living in India, Australia, Japan, South Sea Islands and China. His family is now living in China, his eldest daughter being in charge of the Government school there, having three hundred Chinese children under her charge. Captain Buxton will leave next week for his adopted land.

DUNELLEN SPITE-HOUSE IS DOOMED AT LAST

Dunellen's "City hall," or Michael Gallagher's spite house, adjoining the postoffice, is doomed, and great is the rejoicing thereof among the citizens of that place. Alexander Kane, of this city, today purchased the "shack" from Gallagher, and has begun operation to raze the building and remove the lumber.

The building has been an eyesore to Dunellen citizens and merchants for about a year. It was erected by Gallagher following a dispute he had with the borough officials. The trouble was instigated by Gallagher who violated the Dunellen ordinance by soliciting hack passengers at the depot without a license.

Gallagher, it appears, continued to violate the law and the result was that one day Police Marshal Sliney arrested and locked him up in the borough lockup. Gallagher was in jail only a few hours and when he was released he declared he would "get even with the borough."

He retaliated by building the spite house, or "City hall," as it became known. The "shack" was roofless and constructed with second-hand lumber which Gallagher purchased especially for the purpose.

Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, performs the ceremony. The invitations include only relatives and immediate friends to the number of about one hundred. The only attendant is Edward White Overton, a brother of the groom, who is the best man.

The bride's family, formerly of New York city, have but recently leased the Hegeman house, 21 Myrtle avenue. The groom has been a resident of the borough for sometime and both he and Miss Corbett have a host of friends. Mr. Overton holds a responsible position as confidential secretary to William L. Saunders, president of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, of New York city. The couple will take a month's trip, after which they will reside in New York city.

Stage Fright.

Preparations are being made for taking some of New Brunswick's school children to Plainfield to take part in a singing contest there. ## SANG OLD TIME SONGS

The Jonesville Choir's Program Heartily Enjoyed by a Big Audience.

"LIVING ALBUM" A FEATURE.

Unusual Entertainment by First M. E. Church People at Vincent Chapel Last Night.

"Aunt Samantha," accompanied by the "Jonesville Choir," appeared in Vincent chapel, of the First M. E. church, last night, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society, and provided an enjoyable entertainment. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the church. Mrs. William Jillson, of New York, who had charge of the entertainment and took the part of "Samantha," was especially good, while the local talent representing the "Jonesville Choir" kept everyone in good humor.

The scene was laid in an old-fashioned country home, where "Aunt Samantha" entertained the choir. "Deacon Doolittle," in the person of Martin Stutsman, preceded the choir's visitation, and he was clever in the role. His makeup was fine and his repartee was capital. Those who comprised the choir were E. A. Edgar, leader, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dunham, Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis, Miss Laura Gesswein, Mrs. Harry R. Moyer, Miss Jane Bailey, Miss Ada Stark, Miss Helen Smalley, Miss Minnie Thomas, Nelson A. Miller and Edward Brown. They were all attired in the old-fashioned style.

During the entertainment the choir sang, "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean," "My Old Kentucky Home," and other old familiar selections, all in a heart-rending fashion. Other selections were "I Was Seeing Nellie Home," "Jingle Bells," while for solo numbers Miss Bertha Willis sang "In the Gloaming," and Miss Jane Bailey sang, "Just a Song at Twilight." Other solos were given by Mrs. Harry Moyer and Nelson A. Miller, while Miss Irene Miller, appearing as "Topsy," won much applause in singing two darky songs, one being "Old Black Joe," the choir joining in the chorus. Miss Jane Bailey presided at the old-fashioned meleodeon.

Another feature of the entertainment was a living album, presented by Mrs. Jillson and in which the young people of the church furnished the subjects. They were all very clever and won much applause. The characters and impersonators were:

"Mother," Miss Edna French; "Josiah" as a boy, Clarence Skiff; young girl, Miss Zeta Voorhees; "Josiah and Me," Dr. Frank W. French and Miss May Randolph; "Elder Drinkwater," Arthur Humble; "Orphelia and Cordelia," twins, Miss Frances Rittenhouse and Miss Anna Bingaman; "Josiah," Dr. Frank W. French; "Sam," the cowboy, Fred Martin; "Caroline Emmons," Miss Helen Whitney; the twins at sixteen years, the Misses Ethel and Florence Prior; "Old Maid," Miss Irene Miller; "Sister," Miss Thyra Stiles; "Dorinthia," Miss Mattie Humble; "Amelia Baskin," Miss Mildred Spicer; "Harriett," Mrs. Frank Rowley, holding doll baby; "Topsy," Miss Irene Miller; "Betsy Bobbitt," Miss Gertrude Sharp; "Amos," Aunt Samantha's first husband, Arthur Humble; "Thomas Jefferson" and "Susie Anne," Harry Little and Miss Helen Edgar; "Josiah' at 80 years, Dr. Frank W. French; "Columbia," Miss Jubilee Rowley.

In conclusion Mrs. Jillson recited two selections, one a war time story and the other humorous.

Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, who was chairman of the committee of arrangements, also acted as accompanist during the evening in the rendition of the solo numbers.

SAYS JAPAN IS A DREAM

Former Mayor Touring the World Captivated by the Flowery Kingdom.

AND WORDS FAIL HIM AT LAST!

Mr. Buckle Opines That He Will Not Take to the Lecture Platform When He Returns.

Hundreds of friends of former Mayor James F. Buckle, who is making a trip around the world with his wife, in this morning's mail received either letters or postal cards from that popular man. Mr. Buckle expresses himself as "de-lighted" over his travels.

Former Mayor James F. Buckle.

In a letter to The Daily Press, the genial former mayor says:

"If I had the gift of those fellows that write the New York Sun editorials, I could not describe the beauties of Japan where we are now. This country is a dream. I always thought that nature, human and otherwise, was the same the world over, but nature here holds the patent rights for this little earth of ours. All others are mere imitations.

"Tell my friend, 'Jim' Martine, that I ran across a Democrat during my travels. It was somewhat of a novelty. I have planned to give my friends at home a treat when I get back. I have made up my mind that I will not follow the example of every other man in our town who has seen something of the world. That is, I am not going to deliver any 'illustrated lectures.'"

This letter was posted at Kobe, Japan, on January 4. Mr. Buckle is expected home next month.

Mr. Buckle has sent The Daily Press copies of The Japan Chronicle, published at Kobe, Japan, and The Nagasaki Press, published at that city in Japan, both of which contain accounts of entertainments given in the American visitors' honor.

Mr. and Mrs. Buckle, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Mali and Miss Adele Dietrich are the Plainfielders in the party of 700 making the trip on the Hamburg-American liner "Cleveland."

NINE GOVERNORS FOR A SAFE AND SANE FOURTH.

Philadelphia, Jan. 26.—Nine governors have sent assurances to the safe and sane Fourth of July committee of the Civic Club of this city that they would enter into the crusade to suppress all unnecessary noises on Independence Day. The Civic Club is forming a national committee of the Governors of the various States to discuss the question of abolishing the use of fireworks except for public display.

Replies signifying their intentions of joining the movement from Governors have been received from Governors Draper, Massachusetts; Prouty, Vermont; Deneen, Illinois; Brady, Idaho; Eberhardt, Minnesota; Burke, North Dakota; Vessey, South Dakota; Morris, Montana, and Cosgrave, Washington.

HETTY GREEN REFUSES TO PATRONIZE BUTCHER.

New York, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Hetty Green, who has many millions of dollars, declared yesterday that at present prices meat is too dear for her, and she cut it out of her luncheon order. Mrs. Green entered a modest uptown restaurant and scanned the bill of fare. Steak she found at fifty cents a portion, and roast lamb and roast beef at thirty-five cents. Mrs. Green took half out, which was fifteen cents a portion.

"Have you joined the boycott?" asked the waiter. "No," said Mrs. Green, dubiously, "but meat is too high. You don't get your money's worth. People really can't afford to eat it. There are other things just as good, and cheaper."

FIGHTS EXCISE ACT.

Elizabeth, Jan. 26.—The old Board of Excise held a meeting late Monday afternoon, the first since it went out of existence. It was decided to fight the constitutionality of the act creating the new board and also to certiorari the proceedings of that board on the ground that it had acted illegally in its organization.

The city charter, it is pointed out, specifies the Excise Board shall organize with five members, but owing to the sudden death of Dr. Pierce A. Banker, a Republican commissioner, the new board organized with only four members, there being no provision made in the act which created it as to how a vacancy should be filled. Former Prosecutor William R. Wilson, of Union, has been retained by the old board to conduct the fight and with him will be associated Alan Strong, of New Brunswick.

SEWER PLANS CARRIED.

Towns Vote to Spend $54,000 for New System.

Roselle, Jan. 26.—A special election was held yesterday in Aldene and Lorraine to vote on the proposition to build a $54,000 sewer system. Out of 189 votes cast 142 favored the proposition; 32 voted in opposition, and 15 ballots were rejected.

The Council voted on the bond issue last November, but it had to be confirmed by popular vote. The contract has been awarded to a Rochester firm. Work will be begun in April. At present there is no sewer system in the town.

Six girls, members of the choir of Christ M. P. church, Atlantic City, acted as pall-bearers and carried the body of Miss Bondena New, formerly a member of the choir, to the grave. The dead girl, who was seventeen years old, was one of the prominent leaders in work of the church.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

This comment on Sunday golfing and a custom somewhat prevalent in this country, based on the principle that what the eyes do not see the heart need not grieve over, is from London Turth:

The North Manchester Golf Club has been agitated over the question of Sunday play, and by way of a compromise with the unco' guid a rule is now proposed to permit play on Sundays over only the first eight and last two holes. The explanation is that whereas these ten holes are to some extent screened from observation by a railway embankment, the remaining eight are open to the public view from the neighboring main roads. I have come across many quaint manifestations in Sabbatarianism, but for nauseous hypocrisy I think this arrangement takes the cake.

Garden G. Smith takes Truth to task in Golf Illustrated. He states ignorance of the circumstances but does not see where the "nauseous hypocrisy" comes in. "The golfers apparently have denied themselves play over eight of their holes on Sundays in order that their Sabbatarian brethren who pass by may not be offended by the spectacle of what they regard as Sabbath breaking," continues Smith. "As far as the golfers are concerned, it is a case of self-denial instead of hypocrisy. Truth surely does not mean to suggest that the Sabbatarians themselves play on Sundays at the holes which are hidden from the public view.

Henry C. Rew, an enthusiastic American golfers who has done a great deal for the San Remo Golf Club, has sent 500 francs to Mr. Hay-Gordon, secretary of the Nice Golf Club, to start a subscription for the purchase of a combined motor roller and lawn mower, which he thinks is all that is required to make the Nice golf links "a veritable paradise for golfers."

Carnoustie has furnished the amateur champion of India for three years past. Alex. Mann, who won the 1909 title in December at the Tollygunge course, Calcutta, also won in 1907 and David Scroggie of the same town won in 1906.

ROSELLE WOMAN FINED FOR BEGGING IN N. Y.

New York, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Anna Rubin, said to be the owner of property at Roselle, N. J., and the wife of an able bodied workingman, was fined $10 by Magistrate Steinert in Essex Market Court Monday on a charge of annoying pedestrians and seeking alms.

Miss Celia Jossum, an assistant to Mrs. Axeman, probation officer of Special Sessions, was the complainant against Mrs. Rubin. She said that she first observed Mrs. Rubin begging in Grand street three weeks ago. The woman, nearly fifty years of age and shabbily dressed, was telling all whom she accosted that she was destitute and had seven children and a husband who had lost seven fingers, dependent upon her for the necessaries of life.

Miss Jossum aided her through the Widowed Mothers' Fund and took an adress the woman gave. A week later Miss Jossum met her again, gave her more aid and took another address given by the woman. She investigated and found that both addresses were false.

When she saw Mrs. Rubin begging in Canal street on Sunday she demanded that the woman give her right address. The beggar refused, and Miss Jossum decided to play detective. Late in the day she followed the woman to Roselle, N. J., where she entered a cottage. From the neighbors Miss Jossum learned that Mrs. Rubin and her husband, who has all his fingers and is a steady worker, own the house and lot, worth about $4,000; keep a Jersey cow, have a lot of poultry, and each of her seven children has an individual bank account.

"This woman has been begging for twenty-one years," said Miss Jossum, "and apparently has been paying fifty cents a day round trip railroad fare between Roselle and New York city. She has obtained on her story from $1.50 to $10 a day."

Mrs. Rubin went to Essex Market Jail in default of paying the ten dollar fine, shouting as she was taken from the courtroom:

"I'll go to the island before I'll pay that fine."

Roselle, Jan. 26.—(Special).—Mrs. Anna Rubin resides here in a little frame building in the Jewish section, near Linden. Morris Rubin, the husband, is a cobbler, who travels about the town mending shoes when he can get the chance. His returns are meager. A year ago the Rubin home burned down and for a time the borough of Linden supported the family, in which there are half a dozen children. It was then, according to the Roselle police, that Mrs. Rubin began to go to New York, sometimes taking two children with her. The chief of police here says the Rubins do not own the house they live in. There is no cow, but a number of chickens.

HOOT MON, IT'S "CHIEF" MAC DUFF WHO SPAKES

There was an enthusiastic gathering of Scottish people of Plainfield at the home of Robert Murray, on East Front street, last night, to celebrate the one hundred and fifty-first birthday of Robert Burns. Mr. Murray is the past royal deputy of the order of Scottish Clans of New Jersey, and in consequence friends from out of town met at his home in honor of the occasion. The house was beautifully decorated and the refreshments were suitable to the occasion, including Scottish haggis.

"Chief" MacDuff was toastmaster and in his introductory remarks said that at no time was Burns more widely known than the present and never had any poet commanded the love and affection of his fellow countrymen in like degree. His genius had triumphed over every obstacle and as the years roll on whilst poetic dynastics would fade and their founders be forgotten, the sneer of the critic would sink into oblivion and the influence of his genius would remain indelibly and ever green upon the literature of his country. His memory would flourish green in the hearts of his admirers.

Mr. MacDuff said that this meeting was but one of the many taking place in honor of Burns wherever the English language is spoken. Vocal and instrumental music added to the evening's features and the company spent a delightful time.

HOPE'S PEOPLE OBSERVE ROBERT BURNS BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hendry, of 925 West Fourth street, entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid Society and friends of Hope chapel last night. There were about forty persons present. This was one of a series of dime socials being given by the society at the home of different members. Yesterday being the 151st birthday anniversary of Robert Burns, the Scotch poet, a program of entertainment commerorative of his birth was followed.

Scotch ballads were sung, poems recited and games played. Best of all was the serving of several Scottish national dishes. They proved an unexpected treat and were greatly enjoyed. Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Hendry were Mr. and Mrs. William Grey, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInnes, Mrs. James Heron, Mrs. Samuel Cratsley, Miss Flora Miller and David Hendry.

Floods Cause Heavy Damage.

The recent storms caused the North Branch river to rise to such an extent that on Friday the iron bridge and the wooden truss bridge over the river near line's Mills, Bedminster township, were taken off their foundations and carried down the stream, causing about $1,000 damages, which the Somerset County Freeholders will have to provide for in the way of repairs to county bridges.

Newark Six-Day Race.

As an opener for the Newark six-day bicycle race, which will be held in the First Regiment Armory, that city, from February 7 to 12, the management has arranged for a championship sprint meet in the armory on Saturday night, February 5. The meet will comprise six races, professional and amateur sprint contests, and a ten-mile motor-paced race. This will serve as an introduction to the six-day affair, which will start at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, February 7, and run ten hours a day until 11 o'clock Saturday night, February 12.

Commuters Near Death.

More than a score of commuters nearly met death at Cranford yesterday when a coal train broke and two of the gondolas bowled down grade past the depot at high speed. There were about twenty-five commuters boarding a train going toward New York when the cars bore down upon them. The engineer let loose the whistle. Many of the commuters jumped just in time to prevent being run down. The two cars were part of a coal train, the engine of which was taking water. The cars stopped a mile below the depot

FOR GOVERNOR'S WIDOW

State Will Aid Mrs. George T. Werts Who Was Left Penniless.

OTHER IMPORTANT MEASURES.

Bill to Suppress White Slave Traffic —Removal Power—Gebhardt Has a Sensible Suggestion.

With the death of former Governor Geo. T. Werts last week his widow and two daughters were left penniless. The girls are employed as stenographers in Jersey City. Senator Fielder, of Hudson county, has introduced a bill in the Legislature, which if passed, will make provision for the widow of the dead governor. The bill creates the position of assistant to the Commissioner of Charities and Corrections to visit and inspect charitable and correctional institutions at an annual salary of $1,300. If the position is created Governor Fort will name Mrs. Werts to the place.

One of the interesting measures which has appeared in the Senate is the bill introduced by Senator Gaunt, of Gloucester, and known as the white slave bill. It amends the crimes act by making any person guilty of attempting to take, harbor, persuade, or in any other way by any device or scheme, any female in any place against her will for illegal purposes, or takes or detains her against her will, or any person or guardian who consents to any such action, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor. Any person who shall place any female in the charge of any person for immoral purposes, or compel her to live in the company of such person, shall be guilty of a high misdemeanor. Any procurer shall be guilty of a like offense. All other offenses of a similar character are made misdemeanors. This bill is similar to the Mann bill recently introduced in Congress.

The power of removal bill of last year has been introduced again in the Senate by Senator Minch, of Cumberland county. It authorizes the governor to remove from office any official whose term is created by statute, or appointed by any State official whose term is created by statute, or appointed by any State official with the consent and approval of the Governor or any member of a State board of managers.

Mr. Wilson, of Atlantic county, presented a bill which would amend the State road act. It permits the boards of freeholders to issue bonds for the two third-cost of improving any road, instead of including some in the annual tax levy.

Mr. Gebhardt introduced a measure which imposes a penalty of 30 days in jail or $25 fine on any minor obtaining intoxicating liquors by representing himself to be more than 21 years of age.

STATE IS SECOND IN COLLEGE MEN.

Princeton, Jan. 26.—The annual catalogue of the Princeton Theological Seminary has just been issued and is now being distributed.

The statistics show that there are nine fellows, sixteen graduate students, forty-five seniors, twenty-nine middlers, forty-eight juniors and three partial students. There are eight seminaries represented among the graduate students, of which the Princeton Seminary furnishes fifteen. In the three regular classes there are seventy-two colleges represented, of which Princeton University furnishes thirteen, Lafayette College ten, and Wooster University nine. There are twenty-nine students from Pennsylvania, twenty-two from New Jersey, thirteen from Iowa and thirteen from Ohio. The foreign countries represented are Brazil, Ceylon, China, Ireland and Japan. The form of the catalogue has been very much improved, particularly in the statement of the list of courses and in the arrangement of the courses of study. The list of extra-curriculum courses available for the year is a very long one.

There are now sixteen members of the faculty, which is headed by Dr. Francis L. Patton, who is president of the seminary, and who was formerly president of Princeton University. The list of special lectures as noted in the catalogue includes Dr. Louis Fitzgerald Benson, Robert E. Speer, John Thomas, of Liverpool, England, and Dr. Henry E. Dosker, of the Theological Seminary of Kentucky.

The book is illustrated with handsome half tone illustrations of the different seminary buildings. The work of getting out the catalogue was in the hands of the Rev. Paul Martin, registrar of the seminary.

The earth is like a whirling midget;
But what's all this to him who plays
An ardent game of bridge?

The officers-elect of Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, will be installed tomorrow night by District Deputy Boyer, of Bound Brook. Several Grand Council officers will be present.

THE FORUM.

FEDERAL BUILDING SITE.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Many years experience in real estate leads me to think that a public building of any kind, church or hall, and for any other purpose than mercantile persuit is a detriment rather than a help to surrounding stores and business. I have had to do and still have, with postoffices, etc. I'm not a politician or owner of real estate affected by the choice of the postoffice department here. The department to save expense locates as near the railroad as possible. At Asbury Park in Depot square, at Elizabeth out on North Broad street, at the outskirts of business section, in fact not in best business section at all. Newark and New Brunswick possibly are in business sections, but not so they effect retail trade. Since the carrier system was established, and rural free delivery, there is nothing especially to draw customers to any locality. The postoffice might as well be out Park avenue, East Front, West Front, or Somerset street, where ground is much cheaper and much better than as far as the business is concerned, of those in any retail trade. The cheaper the property so much less does the city lose in taxes as I believe the Government does not pay on its buildings. Am I right? Then, too, I happen to know that the department heads to save the great annual deficit, have been figuring to abolish as many local postoffices as possible, and centralize in one large, one in a district, making all minor offices sub-stations. In a report of a recent date it was suggested that a scheme be devised by which New York postoffices should take care of a radius of 25 miles and all other offices be sub-stations and likewise in all principal cities of U. S. Plainfield would come under that ruling. It's lucky to have a new building anywhere.

THE TARIFF QUESTION.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I desire through your columns to congratulate the Rev. Dr. Herring for his words upon the all pertinent question of the inordinate prices of general living expenses. It seems to me the cause is not far to find. Extravagance and special privilege have been the policy of the governing party in this country for the past quarter of a century.

The reverend doctor asks "if much of the high prices may not be traced to the inordinate greed of men?" Yes! through the workings of the "so-called" protective tariff, prompted through greed and selfishness, all this unfair system has its being. The high, so-called protective tariff has for its purpose, special favor and the making of higher prices. If the tariff made prices lower it would defeat the object for which it is levied. For were we not told that we wanted high prices in order to pay high wages? I hold that the whole system, that taxes the masses for the benefit of the few is all wrong, un-American and un-Christian.

I hold that when a man or woman through the dint of his or her industry and frugality has earned a dollar, it is his or her dollar, and that any law that shall intervene between him in spending that dollar in the markets that may bring to himself and family the greatest amount of comforts and blessings, is a law against God and humanity. This the high tariff does. It fosters trusts and great combinations that fatten on humanity from the cradle to the grave. The expenses of government must be met. A tariff for revenue will satisfy this end and afford incidental protection. Such would level this tariff wall, start again individual competition and general thrift and treat mankind as brothers.

JAMES E. MARTINE.

HEAVENLY REST'S FINANCES

Editor Daily Press:

Your report in last night's issue of Rev. Mr. Stevenson's kindly intentioned appeal for financial aid for Heavenly Rest church, was altogether misleading. It has for a long time been the desire not only of Rev. Mr. Stevenson but of the vestry of Grace church to extend its mission work in the West End of the city, but as this is the territory which logically comes under the care of Rev. Mr. Mallery, the rector of Grace church volunteered to aid the rector of the Heavenly Rest church in extending the work, and this is the specific object for which the request was made.

Heavenly Rest's congregation is steadily growing, its bills for current expenses are paid with reasonable promptness, there is money in the treasurer's hands, and everyone is loyal and interested. I would thank you to give this the same prominence accorded the news item.

"Very truly yours,
"J. A. BABCOCK,
"Treasurer."

(The Daily Press is very glad to publish this communication, but it should be understood that this paper does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed in such letters. —Editor.)

Rev. Andrew Jones, better known as Prophet Jones, of Philadelphia, will conduct revival meetings at Calvary Baptist church, beginning tonight.

SUPERB PROGRAM FOR "FAVORITE SONG CONCERT"

Several important changes in the program of the "Old Favorite Song Concert" to be given at the Plainfield High School auditorium, tomorrow night, were announced today by Joseph McIntyre. Two artists, one a contralto and the other a harpist, and both new to Plainfield, have been engaged.

The full complement of artists to participate in the concert comprises Mrs. Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Miss Adah Hussey, contralto; John Young, tenor; Dr. Carl Dufft, baritone; Madame David, harpist, and Mr. McIntyre, accompanist.

By this it can be seen that Mr. McIntyre is adhering to his original plan of presenting a harpist at this concert. In securing Mme. David and Miss Hussey, Mr. McIntyre was singularly forunate. The former has acheived a succession of triumphs all over the country, where she appeared on the program with men and women in the front rank of the concert stage. Miss Hussey is a prime favorite in New York and she has made a tour of the concert stages of the larger cities of the east and west. This is the revised program:

"Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," quartet; a, "Kathleen Mavourneen," b, "Robin Adair," c, "Twickenham Ferry," soprano; a, "Last Night," b, "Ben Bolt," c, "Low Back Car," contralto; "Beware, Beware, She's Only Fooling Thee," tenor and baritone; "All Through the Night," "Louis XIII Gavotte," harp; a, "Afton Water," b, "Salley in Our Alley," c, "Molly Carew," tenor; a, "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms," b, "The Heart Bowed Down," c, "Simon the Cellarer," baritone; "See the Pale Moon," soprano and contralto; "Margaret at the Spinning Wheel," "Winter," a fantasie, harp; "Good Night," from "Martha," quartet.

WILL DISCUSS UNION AT METHODIST DINNER

The Methodist dinner to be given in Vincent chapel, of the First M. E. church, tomorrow night, will be one of the most important church affairs held here in a long time. It will mark the beginning of a movement to form a religious social union among the members of the First M. E., Monroe Avenue M. E. and Grace M. E. churches, for the promotion of the welfare of each and all as the body of Methodist in this city and borough.

The dinner will be attended by men and women and the affair is in charge of a committee comprising three representatives from each one of the three churches.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, will be the toastmaster and there will be three addresses by ministers and three by laymen. The same topic has been assigned to all the speakers: "What three things does our church need?"

The speakers will be Rev. Dr. Charles S. Kemble and Rev. Ora J. Shoop, for the ministers; S. S. Swackhamer, Walter McGee and W. J. Conroy for the laymen, while Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of this city, district superintendent of the Elizabeth district, Newark Conference, will make the closing address. The dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock sharp in Vincent chapel.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The funeral service of Mrs. Catharine Zeller was conducted in St. John's church yesterday morning, at which Father Dunphy celebrated a requiem mass. A large number of friends of the dead woman was in a attendance. Interment was made at St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield.

Mustn't Slap Wife's Face.

Elizabeth, Jan. 26.—George Wanko, of 130 Pine street, this city, must not again slap the face of his wife, even if she did, according to his story, take the money he saved for taxes for booze. Wanko was in court yesterday on complaint of his wife, who declared he was drunk when he slapped her. This Wanko denied. He said he was angry when he found the tax money had been spent. Judge Mahon advised the couple to go home and patch up their difficulties.

RAIDED THE RESORT OF ALLEGED COUNTERFEITERS

The police of Elizabeth shortly before midnight Saturday made an important raid on a gang of supposed counterfeiters who, it is alleged, were also running a disorderly house at 232 Niles street.

Acting on information he received Chief of Police Tenney sent a detail consisting of Detective-Sergeants Murphy, Hanly and Brogan, Policemen McCarthy, Novello and Hankins, to the house which they surrounded and then broke in the doors. Eleven young men and two women who were inside made a wild scramble to escape, but all were captured and taken in the patrol wagon to police headquarters and locked up. The prisoners when the police rushed in dropped several knives and razors on the floor, also a couple of loaded revolvers. On searching the place a quantity of spurious coins were found, also a couple of smelting pots, dies and other paraphernelia of a counterfeiter's outfit. The police likewise found a trunk and large valise filled with dress goods, which are believed to have been stolen. All the stuff was removed to the police station. The male prisoners, chiefly Sicilians and who are said to be members of a "Black Hand" society, were arraigned in police court yesterday morning and gave their names as Joe Forka, Patsy Caliona, Pasquale Laponia, James Gustosi, Oscar McCarry, Bellini Currer, Mariano Paterno, Pasquale Otterano, Rocco Julete, Nick Vossle and Joseph Marrapodi.

Their ages ranged from nineteen to thirty years. They were sullen and refused to talk. The female prisoners gave their names as Kate McKenzie, aged twenty-eight, and Mary Stoule, also twenty-eight. The latter said she had been lured from New York to Elizabeth by Joe Forka, while the McKenzie woman declared she had been enticed in the same manner from Bridgeport, Conn., by Rocco Julete. Both men and the women are being held at police court for a further investigation. The nine other prisoners were each fined by Judge Mahon $10 and costs, or $12.85. Five paid the money and were released. The remaining four were committed to the county jail for thirty days. The proprietor of the den is still at large. He went to New York, the police learned, on Saturday morning with a young woman and has not yet returned.

The joint had been in operation several months and so secretly had it been conducted that the people living next door had no suspicion as to the real nature of the place until the police raided it. Chief Tenney yesterday sent an Elizabeth photographer to take a picture of the house, which will be used in court in connection with expected developments in the case. Several complaints during the past two months had been made to the police by frightened young women who alleged that they had been pursued at night and grabbed by Italians who only fled when they screamed for help. These acts are supposed to have been committed by members of this gang.

Miss Spitaling, daughter of Simon Spitaling, who conducts a dry goods and grocery store at 228 South Fifth street, Elizabeth, called at police headquarters yesterday morning and identified all the goods in the trunk and valise as having been stolen from her father's store during the Christmas holidays. This only further confirms the opinion of Chief Tenney, that a band of all-around crooks has been unearthed.

Rocco Julete and Joe Forka were today arraigned in police court charged with enticing Kate McKenzie and Mary Stoule to Elizabeth under threats to kill them if they did not come. The women testified that they were forced to comply with the men's demand at the muzzle of a revolver. Forka and Julete were committed to the county jail in default of $1,000 bail. The women were also committed there by Judge Mahon as witnesses. More disclosures are promised by the chief within a few days.

ENGINEER DEFIES BANDITS.

Rushes Paymaster Through a Fusillade of Bullets.

Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 25.—Four men, armed with rifles, attempted to hold up Paymaster Lex Coleman, of the Knox Creek Lumber Company, near Devon Monday. He had $15,000 in cash with him and was aboard a yard engine.

The engineer threw wide the throttle and plunged by the bandits amid a shower of bullets.

Non-Union Men Go Back.

Perth Amboy, Jan. 26.—The backbone of the strike of the clayworkers at the Great Eastern Clay Company's plant, South River, was broken at noon Monday, when 200 men returned to work. Those who returned are non-union men, and fearing that the union men may start trouble, twenty-five deputies will remain at the plant.

New Perth Amboy Editor.

Perth Amboy, Jan. 26.—Albert H. Boughton, former city editor of the Perth Amboy Evening News, has been made editor of the Perth Amboy Chronicle, to succeed Walter H. Turner, of Newark, acting editor and receiver of the newspaper.

TO USE EDISON'S BATTERY.

New Storage System Adopted by Street Car Co. Now Forming.

Preliminary steps have been taken at Caldwell for the formation of a street car company, which will use the new storage battery invented by Thomas A. Edison. John Ottenheimer, who is interested in the proposed company, says that the plans of the new concern will act as a feeder of the Public Service Railway Company or the Erie Railroad. It is proposed to start out about twenty cars.

These will be housed in a central station at Caldwell, and will cover the town and country hereabouts which is not reached by the trolley line or the steam railway.

HOME NEWS.

Of Interest to Everyone in Plainfield.

In every newspaper in the country you will read statements made by people living in out-of-the-way places, who are supposed to have been cured or derived great benefit from some wonderful remedy or "cure-all." But here in Plainfield we only publish statements made by Plainfield people—the testimony of your friends, neighbors and fellow-townsmen.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe backaches and occasional attacks of rheumatism. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from disordered kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time I have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of this preparation and I am soon feeling good. Doan's Kidney Pills have my highest endorsement."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

A canary bird fourteen years old belonging to Mrs. H. Sand, of Pitman, died of pneumonia.

Lemuel L. Rice, of Wildwood, has been elected civil engineer for the Cape May County Board of Chosen Freeholders.

Caught in a drill press at his father's sand dredge, Ralph H. Reeder's left arm was broken in two places, at Bordentown.

Arrested on the charge of fraudulently soliciting money for a children's home in Norristown, Marie Gugler was released on bail by Mayor Lincoln, at Gloucester City.

Looking for pointers concerning the system of accounts inaugurated at the Camden Court House, the county collector, clerk and auditor of the Union County Board of Freeholders called on County Collector Sell Monday.

The strides which Wildwood has been making as a residential resort are reflected in the annual financial statement just issued by Tax Collector Jed Du Bois. The island is now paying one-third of the entire taxation of Cape May county. Last year's receipts amounted to $103,15[illegible].44.

Admitting that he ran away from home, Joseph Starr, thirteen years old, of Frankford, was sent to the Camden City Hall early yesterday by Special Officer Robert Cusick, of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The boy said he had walked to Riverton and back. His parents promised to care for the lad.

Quick action of fellow-employes saved the life of Miss Catharine Phillips while she was working in the Bridgeton laundry yesterday, when her hand was caught in the rollers of the ironing machine. She was slowly being drawn into the machine, when her companion threw off the belt. Her arm and hand were crushed.

Long strings of wild geese flew northward over Atlantic City Monday, and old waterman claim that the wild birds furnish a sign that winter is about to break. Gunners declare that the geese are moving north to follow up the ice break which has started lower down the coast and extends above this section of the Atlantic shore.

Mrs. James B. Haggerty, who before her marriage was the widow of Dr. Trenchard, of Glassboro, died Monday at Sewell from injuries received in a runaway about a month ago, when she had a leg broken and was injured internally. Mrs. Haggerty was a victim of the building collapse at Eleventh and Market streets, Philadelphia, last summer.

To test the right of Charles E. Old to sit in the Camden Council, lawyers representing Albert H. Conover instituted proceedings before Supreme Court Justice Garrison Monday. The action questions the citizenship of the councilman, the right to vote being twice challenged by the election boards. A rule was granted carrying with it an order to take testimony before a Supreme Court commissioner.

The Law and Order League of Burlington is investigating the County Court's action in apparently abandoning cases against sixteen local saloon-keepers indicted nearly a year ago for various evasions of the "bishops' law," but especially the sale of rum to schoolboys. The league, it is said, will also question the power of the Excise Board to grant a new license to a saloon-keeper convicted of infraction, as was done here this month.

Causing considerable anxiety among her relatives on account of her mysterious disappearance from her home, Millie Conte, seventeen years old, of 3[illegible]9 Division street, claimed to Policeman Troncone, when she was located at Second and Mickle streets, Camden, that she had been ill-treated by her parents, but later admitted that her only reason for disappearing was to become the bride of Thomas Stacco. Her mother and father consented to her marriage, to her very great surprise, and the ceremony was performed yesterday afternoon.

The annual presentation of medals to those who qualified at Sea Girt attracted a large number of persons to the Third Regiment Armory in Camden Monday night. Those conspicuous at the presentation were Inspector-General of Rifle Practise Bird W. Spencer, Lieutenant-Colonels William Libbey, William A. Tewes, Daniel M. Flinn, Arthur Roland, Major Charles H. Grant, Major Frank Phillips and Captain John Malcolm. There were eighty-seven medals for expert riflemen, twenty-two sharpshooters, 324 to marksmen. The inspection was the subject of a great deal of favorable comment.

Two attempts to enter his garage at 182 Graham avenue, Paterson, within the past two weeks made Eugene W. Smith, of 201 Governor street, that city, doubly cautious, and he was rewarded last night by capturing two little boys, both loaded with clothing stolen from yards along Graham avenue and Governor street. The boys proved to be Edward Newton, aged ten years, of 83 Straight street, and Edward Decker, aged thirteen years, and living at 199 Governor street. Smith caught the two lads going through his premises with the box and bag containing the clothing and linen still damp from hanging on clothes lines. The lads are held on Reserve Officer Cook's charge of petty larceny.

The Proud Heart of Danko

By RACHEL CAREW

(Copyright, by Short Stories Co., Ltd.)

A cloud arose over the sea, black and heavy like the crest of a mountain; it trailed across the steppe curtain-like, rifts and rags of its dark mass blotting out the stars one by one; the moon became a pale opal spot, and in the wide steppe, now black and terrible, as if it held some guilty secret, tiny blue lights flamed forth here and there like the sudden and soon-quenched glow of a match. There was something uncanny and mysterious in thees dancing points of light which I could not understand.

"Do you see the blue sparks?" asked Isergil, the mummy-like old gipsy from the steppe of Bessarabia—the wide steppe which had been her cradle, her home, and was ready soon to grant that surest of all shelters, her grave.

"I, Isergil, cannot see them any more—there is much that I can no longer see. I am ages old, but the dancing lights are always there."

"Yes, I see the little blue flames; what are they?" I had often heard mention of those fairy light, not fata morgana, not insect, but I wished to hear the old sibyl's version.

"Those sparks come from the hot heart of Danko," she began, in tones that vibrated with intense belief and feeling—the born narrator of the legends of her tribe. "There was once in the world a heart that flamed like fire, and the blue gleams are the sparks from that flame. Listen! I will tell you the old, old story, and how it was in that long dead past, of which there is nothing good left; no more real men; no real deeds; no real stories as in those days.

"A fig for you young people of modern times! what do you know? what do you understand? Look back into the past; there, everything is explained; but you, foolish children of to-day, look not back, as do I, old Isergil, and I see, though my eyes are dim; I see that you young ones know not how to live. You wait always for opportunity which comes not of its own self. Then, when you find that you have wasted your time, you whimper over your fate.

"What is fate? Everybody makes his own. There are many kinds of people to-day, except great and mighty ones—where are they? And beauty in man and woman—still less is there of that."

After a long pause, the ancient one resumed: "Ages ago there was a band of people, where it was I cannot tell you. I only know that the camp of these people was surrounded on three sides by a tall, impenetrable forest, and on the fourth side lay the steppe.

"They were a strong, joyous, daring folk, probably gypsies, content with little, and happy in the good of each day as it came.

"After a time strange tribes crept in among them bringing discord and unrest, and driving these simple folk, few in comparison, deeper into the woods. Here it was dismal with swamp and darkness, because the forest was old as time, and so dense that one saw no sky between the branches, and hardly a ray of light pierced through to the sodden ground. The people sickened and died like stricken sheep. Distracted with the weeping of their women and children, the men looked helplessly in each other's hollow eyes, asking in vain for rescue. Two ways there were out of the snare—one backward to the cruel grip of the enemy; the other, forward, to a far deeper, denser forest. Giant trees clasping each other in a tangled embrace, with roots like twisted iron, deep in the black slime. Here at high noon a dim twilight only flickered down through the branches, and at night when the wind blew it wailed like a dirge for these people at bay from their enemy in the dreary forest fastness.

Night after night the outcasts sat around their camp fire and bethought themselves of a way to freedom, but in vain. Nothing, neither work nor follies, so weaken men as anxious, brooding thoughts, which suck the blood from the heart.

"Fear arose in the breast of these men, and the women drove them to despair with wailing over their dead and the bitter fate of those still living. At first in faint whispers in the camp, then louder and bolder, the tribe declared that bondage was better than death—they would give up their freedom and return as slaves to their enemy.

"Then rose up Danko, the rescuer of them all. He, Danko, was one of the band, a beautiful youth and brave—the beautiful are always brave—and thus he spoke to his companions:

"'Thinking moves no stone out of the way. Action only counts.' Why are we wasting our strength with fret and fear? Rise up, let us win a way through the forest; there is an end to every struggle. Come, rouse yourselves, one and all!'

"They looked at the youth and saw in his eyes that which made him their leader and superior. 'Lead us!' clamored they all, and he led them."

Old Isergil paused and looked out over the steppe where the sparks from the hot heart of Danko gleamed like blue flowers.

"Danko led them; willingly and trustfully they followed.

"That was a weary way, dark as night, with the black mud of the marsh yawning for prey, and the trees in close ranks like a mighty wall. Their branches were interwoven like a knot of snakes, everywhere their twisted roots coiled and clung; every step cost blood and sweat. Onward they toiled, each morrow's hardship worse than yesterday's; each day their strength less.

"At last it grew so dark in the forest that it was as if all the nights, that had ever been since time began, had melted into one blackness. The thunder rolled, the wanderers staggered helplessly among the rocking trees, blinded by the cold, blue lightning.

"They halted, and in the roar of the forest, in the thick of the darkness, exhausted and angry, they turned upon Danko: 'A useless creature are you, harmful and hateful to us all,' they began. 'You have led us forth to destruction, and for this you shall suffer,' the thunder and lightning giving force to their words. 'You bade me lead you, and I obeyed,' cried Danko, confronting the angry troupe with bared breast. 'I have the courage to lead, therefore I do it—and you—what have you done to help yourselves? You follow only, and your courage is too weak for the strain of hardship. You only follow—follow like a drove of sheep.' These words angered the people still more. 'You shall die!' they cried, and to their clamor the wind howled an echo, and the lightning tore rents in the darkness.

"Danko gazed upon them, his followers, for whose sake he had borne such toil and suffering, and saw that they were like wild beasts. They crowded about him, but in no eye was the light of kindness—to no one could he look for help. Then anger against the people flamed in his heart only to quench itself soon in pity. He loved these, his companions, and knew that without him they would perish. Then his heart glowed anew with desire to save them and lead them upon an easy path, and forth from his eyes gleamed the light of this desire."

"The forest sang unceasingly its solemn song, the thunder roared and the rain gushed in streams. 'What can I do for my people!' cried Danko in a voice louder than the thunder. Suddenly he rent open his breast, tore out his throbbing heart and held it high above his head. It flamed as bright as the sun, and even brighter; the whole forest fell silent, awed by his torch of love for humanity; the darkness fluttered away from this light and sank trembling in the black mold of the swamp. The amazed people stood as if turned to stone.

"Follow!" cried Danko, striding forward, his glowing heart held high in his uplifted hands, lighting the way to the people who flung themselves madly in his wake. The roar of the forest began again, but the sound of it was drowned by the rushing footsteps of the people. Everyone ran, fearless and fast, enchanted by the sight of the burning heart. Many fell by the way and died even now, but without lament or tears. Danko ever at the head of the troop, his heart flaming, flaming, and ever flaming.

"Suddenly the forest opened and fell back, and Danko with his flock found themselves bathed in a sea of sunshine, and pure, sweet-scented rain-washed air from the steppe fanned their faces. The tempest was behind them, grumbling over the forest; here the sun beamed, the grass sparkled with rain diamonds, and the river glowed like gold. The setting sun turned the river red, like the blood that dripped from Danko's torn breast.

"The proud, brave Danko cast his dying gaze over the broad steppe, and laughed with joy at the sight of the pleasant land—then he sank down and died.

"The wondering trees began a dirge-like murmur, and the grass, wet with Dankoo's blood, whispered in sympathy, but the happy, hopeful people took no more notice of Danko—saw not that he lay dead, nor that beside his body, on the sod, his brave heart still flamed.

"One cautious soul only saw the glow, and, fearful of danger, trampled the proud heart with his foot. Then was the flame quenched and scattered in a thousand sparks. These are the blue lights which dance on the steppe before a thunderstorm."

As the old woman ended her fantastic story, a profound stillness fell over the steppe, as if it, too, were awed by the power of the brave Danko, the bold spirit which burned itself out for humanity without asking reward. Isergil sank into uneasy slumber, and watching her, I mused over the many legends stored in her memory—What power of human fancy to conceive these legends; what heroism and bravery adorned that golden past!

And our present—poor in strong men and great events—rich in cold distrust that turns everything into ridicule—the miserable epoch of miserable people with still-born hearts.

Three sailors from the German cruiser Bremen strolled into a German resort on the upper West side of the city last week, says the New York Tribune. Immediately on entering they were made welcome and given to understand that they might do anything in the place except spend money. They had hardly been seated when four English sailors and two Frenchmen came in, and the nine men seated at one table naturally attracted much attention. Although each spoke only his own language, they seemed to get along remarkably well, and the waiter, who was instructed to serve anything that might be called for, said: "They're all German, even if they can't speak the language, for they all want beer." It was remarked later that the domestic beverage pleased the Germans and the English, but the French asked for "the real German."

Buy a Gas Range Now and Pay for It Later.

Every spring brings a big demand for gas ranges and water heaters.

One result of the rush of orders is that it keeps us very busy making deliveries and installing ranges and heaters on short notice. At times delays are unavoidable.

This year we are trying to anticipate some of this rush and so spread the work of installation over a longer period of time.

To accomplish this purpose we make the following offer:

On all ranges and water heaters sold on the installment plan from now until March 31, 1910, the first payment will not be due until April 1, the balance to be paid in monthly installments thereafter.

If you want a range or water heater buy one now and begin paying for it April 1.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

A County's Gain; A City's Loss.

In the latter part of 1908 and early in 1909 Mayor Fisk and other officials of Plainfield undertook to suppress the unlicensed sale of liquors. They hired detectives and secured abundant evidence against local druggists as well as several large department stores in New York. All the cases were taken before the Union County Grand Jury, at the May term of 1909. Supreme Court Justice Bergen charged that it was their duty to find indictments.

The agents for the department stores were indicted for taking orders, delivering liquors and collecting pay therefor. All these indictments were successful, and those put on trial were convicted with one exception, when the jury disagreed. The court imposed fines amounting to $1,200, which the county collected. A test case has been taken on appeal to the United States Court.

The druggists were not indicted. The fact that their cases were before the grand jury was believed to be sufficient warning to them, but Mayor Fisk says he is convinced that the practise of selling liquor in drug stores is continued to a certain extent. He does not say the same with reference to department store sales. The investigations cost $1,500, and though Union county has received $4,200 in fines, it declines to help Plainfield bear any of the expense incurred in bringing violators of the law to justice.—Newark News.

ANNUAL RECEPTION OF ELIZABETH ELKS.

Surpassing any social affair heretofore attempted by Elizabeth City Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the annual reception last night in Turn Hall, Elizabeth, made for itself a record for good fellowship that won the commendation of visiting Elks from all sections of the State as well as from the many city guests of the organization.

When the well-arranged concert which opened the event began at 9 o'clock the hall was thronged. There were scores of elaborately gowned women. The stage was a mass of ferns and other floral and flag decorations. Over the stage was the emblem of the lodge. The hall itself was illuminated by a myriad of colored lights, more than 1,000 of these being suspended from the ceiling. American flags hung in profusion, the royal purple, the lodge color, predominating.

Among those present were most of the city and county officials, professional men and business men. Practically all of the lodge's 500 members were on hand, and with their guests completely filled the hall.

The concert was a feature. After the concert there was dancing, which continued until morning. There was no one present who did not thoroughly enjoy himself.

At 11 o'clock the toast to the "absent brothers" and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" was a solemn and unique feature, which made a favorable impression on the invited guests. Supper was served throughout the evening.

The committee in charge included Louis Hetzmann, chairman; William Brown, treasurer; James J. Farrell, secretary; William Moss, Thomas Humphreys, John R. Quien.

In this contest Stout was high man with a mark of 211, and Harry Van Emburg second with a score of 201.

The Woodmen reversed matters in the second game, winning by the score of 869 to 847. In the "rubber" game the Elks came across the line a winner, 864 to 825. The scores:

TO HOLD CENSUS TEST AT ELIZABETH, FEB. 5

Examinations for those wishing to qualify for enumerators of census for this district will be held on February 5. Those wishing to qualify from Union county will take their examinations in Elizabeth, the hour and the exact place to be announced later by Supervisor Louis V. Hoagland. Examinations for the same district will be held on that date in Morristown, Dover, Madison, Butler, Boonton, Phillipsburg and Belvidere.

Any who wish to become enumerators must first make application to Mr. Hoagland, who will turn over the necessary papers to be filled out. It is specified that these must be returned and filed with the supervisor before January 25, but the time has been extended five days, or to January 30.

The remuneration has not been definitely fixed, but the assurance is given that the pay will be higher than it has been for any preceding census. The applicants must be energetic persons of good address, thoroughly trustworthy and of good habits. They must have at least an ordinary education and be able to write plainly and with reasonable rapidity. Preference will be given to persons who have served as enumerators before, provided they are physically able to perform the duties of the appointment.

The examination which must be taken on February 5 will be of a practical character, consisting chiefly of filling out a sample schedule of population from data furnished, and, in case of enumerators whose work would be in the rural districts, the filling out of a sample schedule of agriculture. If an applicant receives an appointment he will not be excused from duty without a reasonable excuse. Applicants must be between the ages of 18 and 70 years, citzens of the United States, and, where possible, should reside in the district from which they apply.

CAPTAIN WATSON DEAD.

New Brunswick, Jan. 26.—The sudden death of Captain Robert W. Watson yesterday leaves Second Lieutenant Willard P. Clark acting captain of Company H., Second Regiment, N. G. N. J. First Lieutenant Henry Landahl resigned his commission about a month ago and his successor has not been selected. It had been planned to promote Clark to first lieutenant and to name J. Bayard Kirkpatrick, Jr., who received honors for military proficiency at Rutgers College, as second lieutenant. Captain Watson had been connected with the State militia since 1881. He was in command of his company at the time of the strike at Keasbey, November, 1908, and his health was undermined by the exposure. He was high in Masonic orders an Elk, and belonged to many local fraternal organizations.

The funeral will take place Friday afternoon.

Beginning with this week and continuing for the next six months the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will merge its weekly service with the regular Wednesday evening church meeting, instead of meeting Friday night as heretofore.

ASSEMBLYMEN ARE AFTER BEEF TRUST

Hudson county Assemblymen will go after the Beef Trust. At a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic County Committee of Hudson last night it was made known that there is enough fish in the cold storage warehouses in Jersey City and county to feed the entire population for a year, while eggs are stored by the millions.

Jersey City Collector Davis, who was at the meeting thought that the trusts could be brought to terms by the enactment of a law prohibiting the sale of goods kept in cold storage warehouses for more than sixty days if this were possible, Mr. Davis said, there would be a tremendous drop in the price of meet, eggs, fruit, fish, poultry and vegetables.

A lawyer who was present said that legislation such as proposed could be brought about, and it is probable that one of the Hudson Assemblymen will have the bill ready for introduction next Monday.

"I am heartily in favor of any legislation that will curb the trusts and force down the price of foodstuffs," said Mr. Davis.

MANUFACTURERS TO WATCH LEGISLATORS

With a membership of nearly 100 the Manufacturers' Association of the State of New Jersey was organized yesterday in the Trenton House with these officers: President, John Schmidt, Passaic; secretary, J. W. Foster, Trenton; treasurer, Charles S. Boyer, Camden.

The objects of the association is to keep strict watch on the laws concerning the employment of labor and wherein such laws affect the manufacturers of this State investigation will follow and if found inimical to the interests of the employer concerned effort will be made to defeat such measures.

Some of the bills that have been introduced at this session, it is maintained, are not to the liking of the manufacturers affiliated with the association, such as the employers' liability bills, upon which a public hearing is to be given next Monday afternoon.

It was decided at yesterday's meeting to have as many members as possible at the hearing on the liability bills next Monday and to enter strong protest against the enactment of the measure into law.

President Schmidt appointed Thos. Devlin, of Burlington; Herbert Knight, of Newark, and Charles S. Boyer, of Camden, a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws.

PRESIDENT W. H. TAFT WILL VISIT PASSAIC

Positive assurance has been given to Victor L. Mason, assistant secretary of the Republican National Committee and president of the Passaic Board of Trade, that President Taft and General Leonard A. Wood will be present at the Paterson Board of Trade banquet to be held early in April.

Mr. Mason hopes also to have two Cabinet officers and Gov. Hughes, of New York, and Gov. Fort, of New Jersey, present. The principal topic of discussion will be the proposed bridge over the Hudson river connecting New York and New Jersey. Mr. Mason is a member of the New Jersey Bridge Commission.

P. H. S. NOTES.

The P. H. S. Athletic Association board of directors at a meeting held yesterday afternoon elected Roy Woodhull as manager of football team for next year.

The indoor meet will be held at the Y. M. C. A. on March 18. This year Westfield, North Plainfield, Leals and the local High School will enter. The events will include 12 pound shot put, running high jump, standing high, standing broad and three standing broad and a potato race of one mile relay. Gold and silver medals will be awarded the winners.

The annual report of the Board of Education was given out in book form this morning to the pupils in the various schools t take home to their parents. The increase in teachers and pupils is remarkable.

Mr. Strong resigned from this commission, as did Mr. Werts some time before his death last week.

JOIN IN BEEF BOYCOTT

Wealthy Women Show Their Sympathy in War Against the Trust.

RETAILERS HERE SUFFERING.

Local Meat Shop Proprietors Complain That Their Business Is Hurt By the Crusade Against Monopoly.

That the wealthier people in the city and borough sympathize with the movement to boycott the butchers to compell the beef trust to return to honest prices, is amply demonstrated by the complaints made by local retailers. The meat men say that their trade has fallen off considerably since the National agitation was started. Those who supply the families of the rich frankly admit that they will have to curtail expenses if the new condition of affairs continues much longer.

"I don't want you to use my name," said the proprietor of one big butcher shop today, "but it's a fact that I'm a victim of this holy war against the trust. I have suffered as much as my customers have in the last few years for I am compelled to pay the price exacted by the trust. As these prices have gone up I have necessarily had to raise my own to pay my expenses; but it is a fact that so far as I am concerned my profits are even less than they were two years ago. The burden falls not only on the consumer but on the struggling retailer as well. The trust fixes the prices and we either have to buy of them or go out of business. Yet the people charge it all up to us."

The butcher, in question—that's a misnomer, for in recent years he has been only a retailer—gave the reporter for The Daily Press the names of twenty of Plainfield's wealthier citizens who had told him to stop delivering meat. "These people," he said, "are my best customers and I don't blame them—only that I'm the goat."

Over the telephone at least half a dozen wealthy women admitted to the reporter that they had stopped buying meat but in each instance before going into any discussion they exacted a promise not to reveal their names.

SCHOOLMATES ATTEND HER FUNERAL SERVICE.

The funeral service of Jeanette, the thirteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scott was conducted at the home of the parents yesterday afternoon by the Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel. A large number of the dead girl's schoolmates were present and among the numerous floral tributes was a large bouquet from her classmates at the Watchung school. Interment was made in the Methodist cemetery, the casket being borne to the grave by Arthur, William and Alexander Campbell, David and Robert Scott, cousins of the deceased, and Martin Kane, Jr.

Y. M. C. A. Concert Tonight.

The Y. M. C. A. orchestra will repeat its program of December concert at the association hall tonight. The assisting artists will be Miss Laura Gesswein, soprano, and Harold Jacobs, baritone, of New York. Miss Gesswein will sing "Heaven Hath Shed a Tear," by Kurken, and "Come to Me Mavourneen," by Lynes. Mr. Jacobs will sing "The Little Irish Girl," by Lohr, and "My Song is of the Sturdy North." The program will include eight numbers by the orchestra, a quintet, violin, two flutes, a clarionet and piano and a 'cello solo by Herbert B. Smith. Admission will be free.

Buys the County House.

William Smith, formerly proprietor of the St. Charles Hotel, New York, and more recently of Hoboken, yesterday purchased the county house at Somerville from Charles A Speer. The hostelry was owned twenty years ago by Mrs. William Moore, of this city, who disposed of it to Mr. Speer. Her husband once conducted what is now known as the Hotel Iroquois in this city. Mr. Smith is well known here.

Joe Gunn, Explain Please.

Joe Gunn, of Newark, who is booming the coming Newark six-day bicycle race, is away off in the weathed dope that he is inculcating in his notices to the press. One of the latest stated "Moran is doing thirty miles a day on the roads around Boston." That's a pretty good stunt for the Chelsea milkman when it is considered that the roads around Boston have a twelve-inch covering of snow.

—In preparing for your Sunday dinner do not forget that Neuman Brothers have a full and complete assortment of fine vegetables from which to make a selection.

INSTITUTED SR. O. U. A. M.

State Officers of Order Attend Organization of First Local Council.

TWO PRESENTATIONS ARE MADE

Starts With Forty-seven Members—Council Positions Are Filled—Many Speeches and Then Refreshments.

Royal Council No. 77, Senior O. U. A. M., was instituted with a big hurrah in Coward's hall last night, when National Councilor Samuel Charles, of Jersey City, and a large representation of officials of the New Jersey State Council. The new lodge was launched with a membership of forty-seven out of a charter list of seventy-three.

The initiatory work was deferred until Wednesday night, February 16, when a uniformed team from Rahway or Newark councils will come here to exemplify the degree work. Last night the forty-seven members were obligated and instructed in the secret work. The auspicious start made by the council is highly gratifying to Charles Keiderling and James E. Church through whose efforts the organization was effected.

An important feature of the meeting was the installation of officers by members of the State Council. The officers are: Senior Past Councilor, T. E. Currin; junior past councilor, J. T. Bolsterli; councilor, J. O. Randall; vice councilor, Lewis Bimble, Jr.; recording secretary, James E. Church; assitant recording secretary, J. L. Bennett; financial secretary, R. V. Kinney; treasurer, W. E. Day; conductor, F. W. Soper, Sr.; assistant conductor, Lewis C. Ely; inside protector, William J. Trembath; outside protector, Edward P. Shearer; trustees, J. O. Randall, J. T. Bolsterli, T. E. Currin.

A pleasing incident of meeting was the presentation of a Bible and a flag to the new council, a gift from General Sedjwick Council, of Newark.

The State Council was represented at the institution by State Councilor B. L. Hartman, of Trenton; State Vice Councilor S. Early Asy, of Mt. Holly; State Council Secretary Morhis Bauer, of New Brunswick; State Council Treasurer George H. Poulson, of Trenton; Past State Councilor Ike Bartlett, of Rahway; National Representatives C. M. Garrett, of Woodbury; Benjamin W. Hand, of Newark, and Jacob Matheis, of Trenton.

Following the installation ceremonies addresses were made by several of the visitors and members of the local lodge. During the good and welfare session a collation was served.

Applications for charter memberships will be received until February 16. Persons desiring to join the council at that meeting may file their applications with Mr. Keiderling or Mr. Church.

WOMEN HEAR TALK ON FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of Hope chapel held an all-day sewing meeting at the chapel, yesterday. A large number of women were present in the morning and in the afternoon the attendance was considerably larger because Mrs. V. O. Burtis, of Westfield, spoke on the subject of foreign missions.

Mrs. Burtis is the chairman of the Alaska committee of the Women's Board of Missions of the Presbyterian church and as such has an exhaustive knowledge of foreign missions. She presented the subject of missions in a new light and aroused increased interest among the members of the society.

Mrs. G. Herbert Condict, president of the society, presided at the business session. The members had luncheon at 1 o'clock and at 4:30 o'clock tea was served. The social committee of the society was in charge.

Pastor Invited to Remain.

The members of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, have extended an invitation to Rev. Charles S. Kemble, the pastor, to return another year, and no doubt the wishes of the people will be granted at the coming session of the Newark Conference to be held in Newark. Rev. Mr. Kemble has done a good work since coming to Plainfield and there is harmony and good fellowship existing between pastor and people.

N. P. H. S. Victorious.

The colors of North Plainfield High waved triumphantly in two basketball contests in Debele Hall yesterday over Westfield. The boy's team defeated their opponents from Mt. Ararat by the score of 38 to 19, and the girls won by an 18 to 3 score.

TO DESIGN $1,000,000 BLDG; HAD NO COMPETITION

The architect firm of Tracy, Swartout & Litchfield, of which Evarts Tracy, of this city, is a member, has been engaged to draw the plans for the new armory hall to be built in Washington, which will not only have the largest drill hall in the country, but will be the finest structure of the kind, costing not less than a million and a half dollars. The honors are especially noteworthy, because the firm received the job without competition.

The firm was engaged by a commission comprising Elliott Woods, Gen. Harris, Col. Cosby and Gen. Oliver, and it will begin at once the work of making plans for the building to be submitted to Congress at the earliest possible date. The structure is to be 240x480, and it is proposed to hold all future inaugural balls there.

The building will be constructed of marble, stone or concrete. It will be located on the site of the old Pennsylvania Station in B street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, Northwest. It will contain a memorial hall, a riding hall, swimming pool, gymnasium, rifle gallery, fencing room and running track, besides quarters for the officers, dining room, hospital and in other words, a complete equipment.

Tracy, Swartout & Litchfield were the architects in charge of the construction of the Federal building at Denver, drawing the plans for the same. The firm secured that job in competition.

BIG MUSICAL COMEDY HERE NEXT WEDNESDAY

"The Yankee Prince," the big musical comedy success with Tom Lewis and seventy-five singers that can sing and dancers that can dance, is a mixture of musical numerous divertisements. With a comedy plot furnished by that well known author George M. Cohan. A long string of musical numbers runs through the play with a dainty chorus of attractive show girls assisting in the many numbers. And a strong cast with the comedy roles in excellent hands. "The Yankee Prince" is unquestionably the musical comedy event of the season. It comes to the Plainfield theatre next Wednesday night.

Unquestionably the great success of all George M. Cohan's musical plays has been the fact that they contain a plot and a consistent one. The back of many of the so-called musical comedies has been the cause of many failures, for the simple fact that dialogue is often interrupted by an interpolated musical number that is by no way consistent with the plot. In all of Mr. Cohan's musical plays he alone writes the book, lyrics and music. With a result that every musical number throughout the different acts of his various plays invariably have something to do with a scene preceding or following. Such was the case with those wonderfully successful songs of his "So Long Mary," "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy," "The A. B. C.'s of the U. S. A.," "It's a Grand Old Flag," etc.

BUSINESS MEN DEFEAT LEALS IN HARD GAME.

The Business Men's basketball five encountered its toughest proposition of the season last evening on the Y. M. C. A. court when it stacked up against Leal's five and won out in a sharp contest by a margin of two points, the score being 34 to 32. Line and Best put up superb games for the Business Men, while Lawrence shone for Leal's. The lineups:

Business Men—Doane, Line, forwards; Dunning, Shaw, center; Stevens, Spicer, Best, guards. Leal's School—Lawrence, Stevenson, forwards; Hibbard, center; Jewett, Dallas, guards.

Ordain a Convert.

In the presence of many of the clergy and laity of the diocese of New Jersey, Bishop Scarborough this morning ordained to the Episcopal priesthood Rev. Mr. Elliott, of Roselle, the service being held at the Church of the Holy Comforter, in Rahway. Rev. Mr. Elliott was until recently a Methodist Episcopal minister, having a charge at Roselle. Several of the Plainfield rectors witnessed the ceremony.

Christian Endeavor Social.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel held a business meeting at the chapel last night, at the conclusion of which an informal social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served. The entertainment committee comprising Miss Edna Eckert, chairman, Miss Jessie Duncan and Frank Rimmer had charge of the social.

Rowland and Mrs. W. M. Wherry, Jr., Miss Tweedy and Mrs. W. F. Taliaferro. ## FRENCH CHILDREN ARE HAVING A REUNION

By the presence of David H. French, of Washington State, and William A. French, of St. Paul, who are the guests of their brother Elston M. French and sister, Miss Harriet A. French, the children of the late Mr. and Mrs. P. M. French, are enjoying their first reunion in ten years at the French homestead on Somerset street.

David French, who has been here several weeks recently removed from Graham, Texas, where he was engaged in the ranching business, to the State of Washington, about one year ago. He is now engaged in fruit raising on a large farm located between Spokane and Seattle.

William French arrived in town on Tuesday and will remain a week. He is known as one of the largest indoor decorating contractors in the northwest.

"JACK" PEACOCK STARS IN PRINCETON'S SPORTS

"Jack" Peacock, of this city, is a college athlete who is rapidly coming to the front. Peacock is now one of the star hockey players in the intercollegiate ranks. As captain of the Princeton 'Varsity seven, the former N. P. H. S. star, is making a big reputation for himself. At St. Nicholas Rink, New York, last night Peacock was one of the big factors in Princeton's 2 to 1 victory over Yale.

Princeton's athletic moguls got a line on Peacock's standing in sports last spring when he was one of the pitchers of the freshman team. Peacock's performances in the box were of the g lt edge brand and the chances are that he will sine on the diamond next season.

Before entering college Peacock was one of the standbys in North Plainfield High's sports. He was rated as one of the cleverest box artists in interscholastic circles.

QUARREL OVER A DOG RESULTS IN A FIGHT

A quarrel over the ownership of a dog in Isaac Bender's shoemaking establishment at 87 Somerset street last night nearly resulted seriously, and it was only due to the prompt interference of Marshal Lemuel Pope, that Bender was prevented from stabbing Morris Estrim, also of Somerset street, with an eighteen inch file.

For three years Bender kept a dog. Last spring when the borough officials began to enforce the dog tax ordinance Bender was going to part with the bow-wow. Estrim, however, said he was willing to pay the tax, and he did so, but the payment was made in Bender's name.

Since the payment of the tax the dog has remained in the possession of Bender. Last night Estrim and his brother Benjamin, went to Bender's shop and demanded possession of the canine. Bender refused to give the dog up and an all round fight ensued.

Bender's wife and daughters also engaged in the melee with the two Estrims. Marshal Pope heard signs of a scrap and hurried to the store. On his arrival Morris Estrim was in Bender's grasp and that the latter ready to wield the file into Estrim's body. Te instrusion of the cop, however, put an end to hostilities.

All five persons were placed under arrest. After hearing all tell their versions of the fracas in court this morning, Recorder Dolliver fined Bender five dollars and Morris Estrim a three-spot.

CHURCHMAN'S EDITOR TO ADDRESS LAYMEN

Silas H. McBee, editor of The Churchman, and one of the founders of the missionary laymen's movement, who is to be one of the speakers at the men's mass meeting in the First Methodist church on Friday night, is widely known in the religious world as the result of his writings and activities in the work. The occasion will mark Mr. McBee's initial visit to this city.

The meeting and the nation-wide campaign of which it is a part are everywhere topics of conversation among Christian men of all denominations. Here, as in other cities, where the influence of the movement has been felt, there is a genuine and hearty response to the summons "to acknowledge the paramount importance of the missionary enterprise and to give due honor and support to those who are spreading the gospel of peace and goodwill." The bigness of the task that the movement has undertaken has challenged the attention and enlisted the interest of thousands of men who have always considered missions too small an enterprise to interest them.

Apart from the creation of public opinion favorable to missions, two of far-reaching importance to the Christian church have been accomplished by the movement. One is the promotion of a spirit of unity and brotherhood among the men of the nation. The other has been the calling of the men of the church back from selfishness and greed and love of money to the service of men and the love of God.

An attractive musical program has been prepared for the meeting. Selections will be rendered by a quartette consisting of Bertram Tallamy, Alfred Osmun, Thomas McDonald and George Smith, with Judge William N. Runyon as the leader.

Mrs. Joseph R. Hall.

Mrs. Joseph R. Hall, formerly of Cranford, died yesterday at her home, 102 Central avenue, after a brief illness. The funeral services will be held from the late residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and the burial will be private.

TAXPAYERS FREELY EXPRESS THEIR VIEWS CONCERNING AFFAIRS OF THE MUNICIPALITY

Summoned by the Mayor, Citizens Give Opinions as to What Should Be and Should Not Be Done for the City's Welcome and Mr. Fisk Gives His Own Ideas.

In response to one hundred invitations sent out by Mayor Charles Joel Fisk, representative citizens to the number of about fifty attended an open conference held in the Common Council rooms, last night, when Mr. Fisk presented municipal matters of importance. Mr. Fisk touched on the questions of water supply, sewage and that of securing a site for the erection of a city hall.

Among those who entered into the discussion on the various topics presented were former Mayor L. V. F Randolph, William M. Stillman, Donold McInnes, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, W. R. Codington and L. B. Woolston.

The Mayor was not pleased with the representation and when he began speaking at 8:30 o'clock there were less than fifty people present Others came in later.

The Mayor's Remarks.

Mr. Fisk said at the outset that he was disappointed that not more people were present. He did not think it possible to get a fair expression of opinion on the questions he desired to present.

The first question taken up by Mr. Fisk was that concerning water supply. He said that the city's contract with the water company expired in 1912, but that it would be necessary to arrange for the terms this year, if the contract is to be renewed. He then reviewed the work of the water commission, composed of fifteen citizens, explaining that the report of the engineers showed that there was a question regarding the supply of water from the underground source. In dry weather the wells show a marked reduction in supply. The engineers estimated the cost of the plant, but there is no definite idea as to the income.

It was also stated in the report of the commissioners that if another company was formed and a new plant established one would probably draw upon the other. He thought that the company was willing to enter into a fair contract with the city. If condemnation proceedings were taken up with a view to purchasing the present plant, it would mean a large issue of bonds. Mr. Fisk said he would not like to state the purchase price, but it would be at least a half million dollars.

Sewerage Disposal System.

Mr. Fisk then took up the question of sewage disposal, telling the history of the present plant; also the work of a commission appointed to investigate other ways and means for disposal by joining with nearby municipalities. In his opinion the beds should not have been located where they are, although he added that he had voted in favor of the scheme. There was no doubt, he said, that the beds are a nuisance and a detriment to property interests in the West End of the city. He then explained that at first the filtration system was adopted and later abandoned because the soil would not permit of its success. Septic tanks were then installed and are now in use, but Mr. Fisk declared that it is only a question of time when other arrangements must be made for taking care of the city sewage. He favored a plan to join with North Plainfield and locate beds out of the city. In a short time it will be necessary to clean the beds at an expense of approximately $6,000, and within the next ten years it will be necessary to expend between $70,000 and $80,000 to make certain improvements.

If the beds are removed from the city, Mr. Fisk said that the present land would be available for building lots and would net the city a big income.

Site for City Hall.

Regarding the proposition to purchase a site and erect a city hall, Mr. Fisk said that yesterday a piece of property was offered the city, where the Friends meeting-house now stands, but later in the day the offer with withdrawn, the first price of about $50,000 being considered too low. The owners would probably want $60,000.

Mr. Fisk called attention to the fact that the New Jersey Central wants to secure additional land along Third street so that that thoroughfare can be widened to correspond with North avenue. He said that the city has many valuable records and there should be a suitable place to keep them. He then went into an exhaustive discussion of taxation, adding that everyone should be assessed equal. As to personal taxes, he said that it is almost impossible to get at the right figures. Some people pay more than they should, and others don't pay enough. This, he said, was due to the fact that proper returns are not made. The assessor is obliged to size things up according to his own judgment and then the property-owner goes before the county board and gets a reduction. The man who has property is constantly trying to get out of paying his taxes.

Some Other Topics.

Mr. Fisk praised the assessors, saying that he believes they are doing their best. As to the general sources of income to support the city government, Mr. Fisk said that the city receives $[illegible],000 from saloon and hotel licenses, not such a large sum, while from outside sources, including franchise tax, the city's revenue amounts to about $32,000. In addition the Common Council assesses certain taxes for police, fire, lighting, maintenance of sewers, etc., for which the Council is responsible.

Reference was also made to the school tax, which is fixed by the board of estimate and the library tax, which is fixed by law. He said that the library directors could ask for $11,500, but had placed the figures at $7,500. He suggested that a place be opened downtown where mechanics and others could go and read, smoke, etc., explaining that not fifty people could be accommodated at the public library reading room.

As to the city's financial condition, Mr. Fisk said that it was very good. At the end of the year there was $52,000 in the bank and an equal sum collectable from 1909 taxes, while the floating indebtedness had been reduced from $84,000 to $22,000. Mr. Fisk then enumerated the expenses required for the various departments this year and said that he could see no reason why the rate should not be lower next year. He said that the policy of the Mayor and Common Council is not to jump in and expend great sums without consulting the taxpayers and he hoped there would be a free expression of opinion.

L. V. F. Randolph made an extended address. His address follows:

Mr. Randolph's Address.

A certain air of mystery has surrounded the subject, or subjects, which His Honor the Mayor might choose to submit this evening to the principal taxpayers; and naturally we could thus hardly be prepared to advise him very fully or profitably. It is indicated, however, that plans for spending public money—or rather private money to be obtained for public purposes—were likely to be introduced. The general subject is not wholly a new one; and, in anticipation I have prepared a few lines in relation to such money-expending suggestions as are contained in the recent thirty-page pamphlet-message sent by His Honor to the Common Council.

The Mayor brings forward the city debt as $594,000 (and we know the debt has rapidly increased) and he states the rate of taxation on the present fully-assessed values at $1.68; and proceeds, under various divisions to explain, in effect, how the debt and the tax rate may be enlarged—namely by new sewer plant, by play-grounds, by additional fire department expense, including more men and higher salaries, by increase of police force and higher pay, by pension fund arrangements and other enterprising and costly propositions.

Consolidation First.

The sewerage subject has been more or less agitated. Many citizens like myself who have been large taxpayers have, up to about the present time, received not a single dollar's worth of return or advantage for the money we have paid out for the city's sewerage. Leaving aside this fact, we were all assured when our sewerage system was installed that the scheme was sufficient for a lifetime and more—even allowing for the probable increase of population. On this basis hundreds of thousands were spent. Now we are told that our plant is insufficient and that we must at once run in debt for hundreds of thousands more; for one, do not believe this. I have read the report on sewerage submitted to the Council and consider it fallacious—incorrect both in fact and in theory. But if, by possibility,

BRANDED THE BABY WITH A HOT CENT.

New York, Jan. 27.—Jacob Goldberg, 11 years old, of 242 Delancy street, was sent to the Jewish Protectory yesterday by Justice Deuel in the Children's Court for branding his brother, Sammie, who is two years old, with a cent. Jacob had been given the cent by his mother on condition that he stay in and take care of his little brother while she went out washing.

Jacob didn't like to stay in, but he wanted the cent. It was Sunday afternoon, and from his windows he could see his friends having fine times. He turned away from the window in search of amusement. The cent, which he still held in his hand, fell to the top of the stove. He tried to lift it off, but it burned his fingers, and he got a sliver of wood and poked it off. By that time the coin was pretty hot and it left a black circle on the floor. That was delightful, and he tried it several times until the floor was speckled with circles.

Then he thought that he would see what kind of a mark it would leave on Sammie. It left the same kind exactly, but as the first impression wasn't very clear he made several.

The Gerry Society heard about the case and sent Officer Farrington to look into it. He arraigned Jacob in the court Tuesday and explained the case to Justice Deuel.

SETS FIRE TO JAIL, WOMEN IN A PANIC

Mrs. Sallie Schaffer, old and demented, set fire to the Middlesex County jail at New Brunswick, late yesterday afternoon and caused a panic among the seventy-three prisoners. The fire department confined the fire to the women's and witnesses' departments. The loss will not exceed $1,500. Mrs. Schaffer has been in jail for two weeks, having been arrested for vagrancy. Warden Charles H. Rogers had learned that she had relatives in Trenton, and he had made arrangements to send her there today. He wanted to get rid of her, as she had recently set fire to her bedclothing.

Yesterday afternoon she fired a couple of old mattresses which were stored in the rear part of the women's department. The blaze gained much headway when discovered and had eaten through the wooden ceiling in the rear of the first floor. There were six women in the department. Sheriff William J. Quackenboss, Deputy Edward Houghton and Wardens C. H. Rogers and William Voorhees quickly transferred the women to the sheriff's office. Judge Adrian Lyon, who was holding criminal court, sent all of the court constables except one across the courtyard to the jail to assist in guarding the prisoners, and Chief of Police Michael O'Connell, with all of his men available, hurried to the scene to prevent a delivery.

The sixty-six male prisoners were given the run of the men's corridor, and arrangements were made to transfer them if necessary, but the heavy brick wall between the two departments kept the fire from spreading and kept the dense smoke from entering. The loss is covered by insurance.

Peter Hendricks, director of the Board of Freeholders, was in the jail when the fire was discovered, showing William Dommon, who is to take charge of feeding the prisoners on February 1, about the place. Therefore Quackenboss, who is to be warden on February 1, was also there. Director Hendricks took steps at once to repair the damaged parts.

The dense smoke drove a number of rats from their holes, and they climbed to the grated wired windows in an endeavor to escape, but could not get out. Crowds of schoolboys in the street amused themselves snowballing the rodents.

The Middlesex County jail was once referred to as the opera buffe jail of the papier mache lockup, owing to the ease with which prisoners cut their way through the roof to liberty. In recent years it has been made more secure, although it is still antiquated. There is a demand for a modern structure.

GOLF.

Although Golf Illustrated of January 14 states that a published report in Great Britain of the match having been arranged is untrue, letters of the same date at hand assert that the American professionals at home for the winter have been taken on for a contest by the resident talent. Arrangements according to the correspondent were arranged by H. H. Barker of the Garden City Golf Club, who was secretary of the committee to send the challenge over in November. The match is to be on February 16 at a course near London and J. H. Taylor is named as captain of the British team. Aleck Smith will captain the American team, which will include Gil Nichols, Isaac Mackie, James Maiden, David Hunter, Peter Robertson and any others who may be available.

The British open championship will be at St. Andrews June 13 to 25.

Harry V. Keep of the Englewood Golf Club was re-elected president of the New Jersey State Golf Association at the annual meeting held Tuesday in the office of the secretary-treasurer, Walter C. Shoup, 40 Wall street. After a course has been selected for the championship tournament a successor to Shoup will as usual be chosen from the club to hold the competition. The reports showed a cash surplus of $[illegible]. An application to hold the tournament was read from the Atlantic City Country Club, and while no action followed the trend of debate was that the course was too far off. An informal application from the Essex County Country Club met with more favor, and it is probable that the championship will be held there.

The tournament will be held on June 2, 3 and 4. Instead of giving gold and silver medals as prizes for each sixteen and beaten eight there was a vote to give medals only to the lowest scorers at medal play and to have other prizes for the match play winners.

STATE POLICE TO VISIT ELIZABETH.

Patrolmen and superior officers from all over the State will be the guests in Elizabeth this afternoon of the local Patrolmen's Benevolent Association.

There will be an open session, including a banquet, so that the superior officers, all of whom were officers or members of the State L. B. A., will be able to attend as guests. The session will be held in Kiefer's hall, 635 Elizabeth avenue, and will conclude with a banquet and entertainment.

State President Beggans, of Jersey City, together with other State officials and representatives from associations in Newark, Jersey City, Hoboken, Bayonne, Paterson, New Brunswick, Trenton and Camden will be present. A good time is assured the visitors by the local committee. There will be important business transacted at the meeting. The meeting will begin at 2:30 and the banquet at 4 o'clock.

The hall will be decorated for the occasion, and there will be speech-making. The committee in charge includes D. J. McCarthy, chairman; James J. O'Brien, secretary; Daniel J. Bedell, James Ward and Patrick H. Sheridan.

O'Brien is vice-president of the State Association.

EAGLES TO DANCE.

Elizabeth Lodge Prepares for Its Annual Reception.

Arrangements are being made by Elizabeth Aerie, 667, Fraternal Order of Eagles, for its sixth annual reception to be held in Turn Hall, High street, Elizabeth, the evening of February 2.

Among the features will be the snow dance, which made a hit at the reception two years ago. The feature this year will be a tag dance. At the heighth of the dance a gentleman dancer tags another gentleman, and immediately couples are changed, to the amusement of everyone who participates. There will be a concert from 8 until 9, and at 9:[illegible] the ball will be opened with a promenade led by William P. Bergen, floor director. General Dennis F. Collins has been assigned as head of the reception committee. The decorations will be on a more lavish scale.

A large delegation of visiting Eagles and friends from the surrounding cities have declared their intention of being present.

Postmasters Named.

The following New Jersey postmasters were appointed yesterday: George L. Clarke, Morristown; Geo. W. Hope, Raritan, and John H. Nunn, Glen Gardner. New York: J. B. H. Mongin, Waterloo; George H. Hubbs, Central Islip; James L. More, Pulaski; George W. Hitchcock, Ripley, and Charles A. Fowler, Rome.

Club Hears Mrs. Murray.

The principal speaker at the meeting of the Wednesday Afternoon Club at Cranford yesterday was Mrs. John C. Murray, of the Single Tax League, of New York. Her subject was "Modern Education." The speech was devoted to the conditions in congested schools.

VES PAYS PENALTY FOR KILLING WIFE.

Trenton, Jan. 27.—George Ves, an Italian convicted of murdering his wife in a cemetery in Perth Amboy last summer, paid the penalty for his crime in the electric chair in the State prison Tuesday night. Ves was the fourteenth to die in the electric chair in New Jersey, and the second from Middlesex county. He was known for some time that there was no hope of saving him from death and had become reconciled to his fate.

Ves had charged his wife with being unfaithful to him. She denied the charge and then left him. He located her in Perth Amboy and went to see her. He persuaded her to go with him to the cemetery and there killed her. Then he went to the Perth Amboy police station and reported what he had done. The police held him while they made an investigation and found the body. His case was carried to the Court of Errors and Appeals, where his conviction was sustained.

Ves is said to have been wanted for a murder committed in Ohio some years ago.

RAISING OF THE MAINE.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Democratic Leader Frisbie called up in the Assembly Monday night his resolution favoring the Sulzer bill for the raising of the Maine in Havana Harbor. Republican Leader Merritt opposed the resolution on the ground of interference with federal functions. Mr. Oliver, of New York, declared that it had become a party matter.

"The Maine will be raised," he said, "when it suits the Republican interests to do so. Until then she will rest on the bottom mud."

POPULAR GOVERNMENT.

In summoning some of the taxpayers to learn their views on matters being considered by the administration for the municipality's interests, Mayor Fisk did a wise and commendable act. Under our form of government officials are but the servants of the people and are supposed to act according to their wishes.

There are many matters now under discussion upon which there is a wide difference of opinion. Our tax rate is high and consequently there is the expected average of complaint. To make improvements, not absolutely needed, at this time would naturally send the rate still higher. This is the sole reason why there is strong objection to the administration incurring new obligations.

There is no sentiment for a municipal ownership of the water supply. Neither is there any for consolidation under existing conditions since a union of city and borough would place a heavier burden for a time at least on the former's taxpayers. As to the abandonment of the present sewage disposal plant, which has cost the people a fortune, and the establishment of a new plant at a great outlay, the popular feeling appears to be that no immediate action is imperative.

The mayor's plan in getting the views of the people on these and other important subjects, we repeat, is praiseworthy. We hope that the meeting last night will not be the last.

SENATOR KEAN'S REPARTEE ON PANAMA LIBEL CASE.

Washington, Jan. 27.—"I notice that you have lost another little suit," said Senator Kean of New Jersey to Attorney-General Wickersham, when the news of Judge Hough's decision in the Panama libel case reached the Capitol.

"Oh, I inherited that," the Attorney-General replied.

"Well, it looks like you had squandered your inheritance," said Mr. Kean as he backed off.

FOWLER 'INSURGING' BUT ALL BY HIMSELF

Representative Charles N. Fowler, of this district, who used to be chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency unil he fell out with "Uncle Joe" Cannon, and was relieved of the job, made an insurgent demonstration all by himself at Washington yesterday. Without any preliminary warning he introduced a resolution to increase the membership of the Rules Committee from four to nine, and to relieve the Speaker of the House from any connection with it. Some of the insurgents who were asked about the proposition seemed inclined to the belief that Mr. Fowler had tried to steal their thunder. They have had something of the same sort on the fire for some time.

Mr. Fowler is a sort of lone outlaw. He is dead set against Speaker Cannon and attacks him at every opportunity, yet his is not conspicuously identified with the organized insurgent movement as are Murdock, Gardner, Hayes, Norris and a few others. Insurgents seen yesterday afternoon following the introduction of the resolution by Mr. Fowler spoke heartily in its favor.

Representative Goebel, of Ohio, made the statement that within 48 hours the Republicans of the house would find it necessary to hold a conference on this proposition, and that in his opinion, after it had been talked over and threshed out, the main idea involved would be approved by the organization. There was an attempt by some members of the house to make it appear that President Taft favored this Fowler resolution. The idea that the President will actively interfere in a purley organization matter of this sort is not credited, however.

The Egotist.

"Stuck on himself, ain't he?"

"Is he? Say, do you know why he gave up the idea of becoming a physician?"

"Why?"

"He was afraid he coudln't feel a lady's pulse without giving her heart trouble!"—Cleveland Leader.

The First Baby.

"I guess we'd better weigh the youngster."

"But you weighed him only twenty minutes ago, old fellow."

"Well, maybe he's gained a little."—Exchange.

PRAYERS AS NECSSARY AS FUNDS HE SAYS

A personal plea for prayer was made to the congregation of Trinity Reformed church at the midweek prayer service last night by Dr. Paul W. Harrison, the church's missionary, who departs for Arabia on Saturday. Dr. Harrison impressed on his hearers that prayer was just as necessary as funds, and more so to carry on the work successfully in that country.

"There is a good deal of opposition to receiving Christianity in that country," said Dr. Harrison, "but the chief opposition is by the people, and the work of the missionaries should be prayed for. If Carnegie should give $10,000,000 to build up the kingdom of God in that country no much could be accomplished by the money alone. The opposition can only be overcome by the working of God's spirit.

"I haven't discussed much in public what we will need prayers for in Arabia," continued Dr. Harrison, "but there ar a good many temptations, particularly to those who go to that field as a medical missionary. There will be opportunities and ambitions for wordly success in the medical profession and we are likely to lose sight of the real object of our labors to save souls. There is nothing wrong in such ambitions, and if they are under control, they will not interfere with missionary work. We must have the grace so that other ambitions wont creep in and take the place of the spiritual duties, so I will always look back to Plainfield for support in prayers of this church.

Case of Capacity.

Hopkinson Smith tells the story of the Southern slave who diagnosed a boy's illness in her master's home.

"It's a case of too much watermelon," she said.

Thereupon she was informed with great dignity that there could be no such thing as "too much watermelon."

"Well," she retorted, "then there ain't enough boy."—Cleveland Leader.

The Ready Excuse.

"What are you going to do with this sandbag," demanded the Chicago cop. "It's part of me equipment, boss," answered the footpad. "Honest, I got an airship anchored around de corner."—Exchange.

TAXPAYERS EXPRESS VIEWS

there should be need of further early action (which, from my best information, I do not believe) then surely, before we are plunged into further cost or debt, we are entitled to other and better advice than that of the very same "expert" who misled us before. Moreover, I respectfully submit that the community of Plainfield and North Plainfield is one and should act as one in any new plan of sewage disposal—that, taking steps in logical order, and in view of the absurdity of having two municipalities' rubbing elbows but pretending to keep separate, North Plainfield and Plainfield should first definitely get married "for better, for worse," and then arrange together on a broad and reasonable plan their housekeeping in relation to sewage disposal and otherwise.

Concerning the water problem, I have always considered that an unfair advantage was taken of the rights of Plainfield in connection with what is sometimes called the "charter of the Water Company." I am informed that the water company refuses to divulge its profits to the municipal authorities. The charges made by it so consumers are high. It may be found practicable to obtain the water plant by honest condemnation proceedings, and I believe it is possible (and it may be found necessary) for the city to build outright an entirely new water plant for the use of its citzens. But this, if done, should also follow consolidation with the borough and should be accomplished for the equal benefit of all concerned.

Taxes Too High.

One common sense proposition stands out prominently—We must keep down our tax-rate or be the worse for it. We are now paying, on high valuations, practically the same tax-rate as is Tammany-ridden New York city—with all its parks and public buildings. One way to increase the tax-rate would be to start a local pension system, which is, for a municipal government, in its last result, a school for the promotion of inefficiency and ultimate pauperization.

An equally unfortunate scheme would be such so-called "civil service" device as would fasten irremovably upon the tax-payers a number of officials who would have to be supported, unless driven out by a tedious and costly conviction for malfeasance; and we know how likely that would be. Another way to increase the tax-rate is to increase the number of police patrolmen and to increase their pay. Is is realized that Plainfield paid last year fifteen times as much for police service as it did when I was Mayor, the city being then of the same size as now, and with nearly half its present population? Is it known that within half a dozen years the cost of the police has doubled, now running above $30,000 a year, and being now so ill adapted to requirements for important investigating or detective work, that when such work is required foreign help must be imported? These are surely not conditions requiring more patrolmen and higher pay and pensions. Even across the brook our neighbors have no notion of scattering public funds in any such fashion. Similar remarks might be made touching suggestions made for increasing taxes to pay for certain fire department and builders' department notions. Expenses in the fire department are increasing by leaps and bounds, and the building department itself, as well as its expense, requires careful supervision.

Library Economical.

It is a comfort that His Honor the Mayor has found one public trust requiring economical check and reformed administration. This is the Public Library. Its reports show that it circulates about forty thousand books (two for each inhabitant); that its benefits are rapidly increasing; that it is becoming a scientific centre and place of popular study; that it receives from taxes $7,500 per year; that it expends for a librarian, janitor and four assistants to the librarian—most of them efficiently trained for a period of years—in all $3,000 a year; that $2,500 a year goes for new books; and the rest, about $2,000, for repairs, light, heat, renewals, binding, new shelving and other sundries. It is the one important public institution of an educational and useful character that got built without a cent of public money. It has enjoyed three splendid private benefactions and runs a chance of getting another—unless strangled. But the Mayor has, to use a vulgarism, "caught it with the goods on it." Part way through the taxation year, he found it had cash in pocket $4,208. The Mayor wants a check put on the library legal tax-rate and he suggests to the Common Council—and not to the library trustees—that the board open an outside lounging room which "should be fitted up for men, where they could congregate, read the papers and smoke and talk over questions of the day?" Doubtless if the suggestion of His Honor were carried into effect it would serve to promote one important industry—the tobacco business. But if the library board were to see their way to try it, they would have to call for more tax money.

Functions of a Mayor.

On one subject my opinion goes clearly with that of the Mayor. He considers that, as Mayor, he has a right to discharge executive functions and that the Council should not assume them. He is right. The city's charter so provides, and it is in accordance with the fundamental scheme and law of the republic. The legislative body holds the purse-strings; the Mayor is the ruling executive officer. As to whether the Mayor is right in opposing Governor Fort's proposition to repeal the Hillery law I perhaps have hardly the ground upon which a just opinion should be based. But I incline to the Governor's view. The Hillery law was, I think, a device to excuse certain taxpayers from a part of their taxes and to make the rest of us pay more. Every new scheme appears to raise our taxes, and often without benefit to the taxpayer, and we have about reached the limit of forbearance.

As for a new city hall, we are in no pressing need of it. We cannot now afford to run in debt for such a luxury, and the site proposed is not a suitable one.

At the conclusion of Mr. Randolph's remarks, Alexander Kane said that he concurred in everything that the former had said, that his speech was O. K. He said that Plainfield has a Tammany Hall and it was time to put a stop to it right now.

Others Speak.

Taking exception to the increasing tax rate, William M. Sillman said that at present it requires two months' rent for a man to pay his taxes and this he thought was all wrong. After awhile Plainfield would be as bad as Elizabeth or New York.

Making a strong plea for an extension of the sanitary sewer system in the West End, Donald McInnes, also took occasion to speak of what he called a "monopoly in the cesspool cleaning business." He said that everyone had to employ one firm and pay its price, because the board of health had only licensed this one firm. He said that it was time that this thing was stopped. He said that there are today many valuable building lots in the West End of the city, but people will not build until sewers are provided.

Mayor Makes Reply.

In reply to Mr. Randolph and Mr. McInnes, Mr. Fisk said that the former's criticism was not fair nor just. He said that Plainfield has some of the best detectives in the State, and as good a fire department, which, of course, costs more than a volunteer department, but is not extravagant. He said that the Common Council is trying to find ways to save money. As to Mr. Randolph's criticism of Civil Service, said that if correctly understood it means the obtaining of good men without political influence and is really a saving to taxpayers.

As to providing sewers for the West End, Mr. Fisk said that that section would receive attention soon. He realized that that section of the city is entitled to such consideration, but it could not be done by gravitation. It would be necessary to install pumping stations. Mr. Fisk then gave additional history regarding the installation of the sewer system.

L. B. Woolston's Views.

Referring to the question of a city hall, L. B. Woolston said that he recalled a few years ago when the local newspapers were crying, "Oh, for a City Hall." The question finally come up, but one of the newspapers at the last minute took a stand against the improvement and this killed the proposition. He thought everyone should be proud of Plainfield and if the individual is willing to beautify the city, the municipal authorities should be equally anxious to do so. He said that there are millions of dollars worth of fine pictures here that escape assessment. Mr. Woolston said that he was not advocating a city hall, but he thought the city should purchase a suitable site. He also favored a joint sewage proposition and the consolidation of the city and borough. He believed that now is the time to act in the matter of sewage disposal.

As to the question of water supply, Mr. Woolston said that he had no sympathy with Mr. Randolph or the city of Plainfield. He said that there was a charter kicking about for years and no one would pick it up, until Mr. Kean came along and built the present works. He took exception to the statement that the water company's rates are high, on the contrary he thought they were reasonable. The men of the city should have accepted opportunities years ago, and in this connection he charged Mr. Randolph with being derelict in his duty when he was Mayor.

Mr. Depew's Thoughts.

R. Henry Depew, president of the Plainfield Protective Association, said that the association had given a warning that unless a check was put on expenditures the rates would go up. He said that he previously suggested the consideration of all questions pertaining to the city government and adopt feasible plans for the growth of the city for the next twenty years. He devoted considerable attention to the police department, and wanted to know if there was not a law that provided for the revocation of a saloonkeeper's license if found guilty of selling liquor to an intoxicated man. Mr. Fisk told him that there was such a law, but that it was always difficult to secure a conviction. A policeman would have to enter a saloon, see the man drink the liquor and in fact taste the liquor himself.

Mr. Depew said that he frequently read in the local newspapers accounts of where intoxicated men are thrown out of saloons, and if the city is paying $30,000 for its police department it should get the evidence. He recalled a published story about the late John Rafferty that an intoxicated man could not get a drink in his saloon. If he could observe the law he thought others should be made to do so. He also recalled the fact that William Taylor got evidence and that the people had not forgotten it. He thought it was a disgrace to have people come out of saloons drunk every day.

Reply to Mr. Randolph.

In reply to Mr. Woolston's remarks, Mr. Randolph said that the people would not support a measure to establish water works when he was Mayor, and refused to bond the city. As to the charter that was "kicking about" he said that everyone believed it to be "a dead one." He paid his compliments to Mr. Fisk, thanking him for his kindly reference to him, and adding that they would probably continue to smile at each other and be friends.

As to the lack of adaptability of the police department, he cited an instance of where a detective came to his house to work on a case of depredation. The officer told him he would do all he could to find the guilty parties, and after obtaining clues, went away, and Mr. Randolph added, "I have not seen him since."

Mr. Ackerman's Statement.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman arose in defense of the Civil Service bill, explaining that he did not want any false impressions given. He said that the bosses and their friends like to hear criticisms about the civil service, especially in Union county. He then stated that today there are 11,000 positions in the State under Civil Service and many who formerly opposed it are now in favor of the plan.

Two Others Speak.

Brief remarks were made by W. R. Codington and B. Frank Coriell regarding the question of a city hall, but they were seekers after information instead of giving advice. Mayor Fisk thanked one and all for their presence and hoped that some good might result from the conference.

BUILDING AND LOAN LEAGUE ASSN. DOINGS

The Executive Committee of the New Jersey League of Building and Loan Associations held its quarterly meeting in the Board of Trade rooms at Jersey City Tuesday afternoon. The committee is composed of one representative from each county in the State in addition to the officers, and there was a large representation present yesterday.

Several points in the building and loan laws which are working unsatisfactorily were discussed and through a legislative committee, which was appointed, an attempt is to be made to remedy the faults.

A committee was also appointed to revise the constitution of the league so that a broader representation might be secured from the associations of the State.

The next meeting of the committee will be held in Elizabeth on April 26, at which time officers and members of all the Union county associations will be invited to attend, to listen to and to take part in the discussion of any subject which might arise touching the general good of the associations throughout the State.

It is not the purpose of the league to interfere with the individual management of any of the associations, but it hopes to secure through co-operation of the larger organization, some reforms in the laws and possibly check legislation which may be deemed unwise.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. A. Woodruff Halsey, one of the secretaries of the Board of Foreign Mission of the Presbyterian church, commenting on a recent statement regarding the administrative expenses of the various denominational foreign board of missions, has this to say for his church: "If you look at the seventy-second annual report, you will notice that the expenses last year of carrying on the foreign board were 6 96-100 per cent. This is a little more than ordinarily, as we have branched out in our home department and are spending more money than we did a few years ago. The expenses vary from about 4½ to 7 per cent. with various years."

W. D. Murray Led Meeting.

William D. Murray was the leader of the midweek prayer service at the First Presbyterian church last. Mr. Murray spoke on the laymen's movement and also referred to the big Rochester convention which he recently attended.

Daily Press Ads Pay.

Another illustration of the value of the Cent-a-Word advertising columns of The Daily Press is cited by Richard Randolph, a local ash carter. One day last week a bundle of valuable clothing dropped off Mr. Randolph's wagon. Mr. Randolph promptly inserted a "Lost Ad" in The Daily Press and the next day he got results. The package was found by letter carrier Frank W. Bailey, of Duer street, while he was covering his route on West Seventh street. Mr. Baily saw Mr. Randolph's advertisement and returned the goods to him.

SYNOPSIS OF PIERCE PUBLIC UTILITY BILL

The Pierce bill, providing for a public utility commission, was introduced in the House at Trenton Tuesday as told in The Daily Press. It differs materially from the Pierce bill of last year in that it provides for a continuance of the present State Railroad Commission under the name "The Public Utilities Commission." The membership of the new board is to remain as at present and the salaries are to be unchanged also, except for the president, who is to receive $5,500. The present commissioners are also to be continued until the expiration of their terms.

The jurisdiction of the railroad commission as it now exists is extended to all utility corporations. This includes, by provision of the bill, the right to regulate rates and to provide for a physical property valuation to determine these. There is a clause, also, permitting a court review.

Powers Defined.

Among other things the bill, on the subject of jurisdiction, says these things:

To direct any such corporation found unduly discriminating in its rates, fares or charges, to make such rates, fares or charges uniform, except as hereinafter provided.

To direct any such corporation found to be granting rebates or other unjust discriminations, to immediately cease therefrom.

To direct any railroad company to construct, maintain and operate, upon reasonable terms, a switch connection with any private sidetrack which may be constructed by the shipper to connect with the railroad, where such connection is reasonable, practical, and can be put in with safety, and will furnish sufficient business to justify the construction and maintenance of the same.

To require any railroad company, upon the complaint in writing filed by the governing board of any township or municipality, or twenty or more freeholders thereof, where the conditions at any grade crossing are such as to make it necessary for the protection of travel over the same, to erect and maintain such gates or flagmen or other reasonable protection at such crossing, as the public safety requires.

To prevent any corporation subject to the provisions of this act and engaged in the transportation of persons or property as a common carrier, from directly or indirectly, by any special rate, rebate, drawback or other device or method, charging, demanding, collecting or receiving, from any person or corporation, a grater or less compensation for any service rendered or to be rendered, in the transportation of passengers or freight, except as authorized in this act, than it charges, demands, collects or receives from any other persons or corporation for doing a like and contemporaneous service in the transportation of a like kind of traffic under the same or substantially similar circumstances and conditions.

Rate Regulation.

The commission shall further have power, upon complaint in writing filed by the governing board of any township or municipality, or fifty citizens thereof, to investigate any rate or charge made by any corporation subject to the provisions of this act, for any service rendered. If, after a hearing upon notice to such corporation, such rate or charge shall be found to be unjust or unreasonable, the commission may make an order fixing said rate or charge at what is just and reasonable. And in determining what is just and reasonable, the commission shall take into account the circumstances of the particular case, including, where the issue is raised by the corporation, the allowance to the corporation of a fair and adequate return upon the value of its property, including franchises, in view of the risks, incidents and hazards of the particular business.

The yearly expenses of the commission are fixed at $35,000, which is about $5,000 more than is at present paid yearly to the State Railroad Commission.

There is also added a stock and bond issue clause, requiring the submission of proposed issues to the commission for its approval, the approval to be given if the proposed issue is lawful.

The Pierce bill is much like the Scharff bill, offered last week. It comes, however, nearer meeting the suggestions of the Governor in his last message. Those who profess to know, say there is small likelihood of any utility legislation this season.

The bill, also, in its introductory paragraphs, would give the Governor the power to remove any commission, with the consent of the Senate, for inefficiency or neglect, and prevents any commissioner from being affiliated in any way in the ownership of any utility concern. Like the Scharff bill, this would have the effect of legislating State Railroad Commissioner Thomas J. Hillery out of his job, as Mr. Hillery is a part owner of the Boonton Water Company.

The clause providing for court review makes the Supreme Court the final court of appeal.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

County Superintendent Hand has appointed J. B. Hastings, principal of the West Cape May schools; F. W. James, principal of the Goshen schools, and Miss Mary Miller, a woman of long experience as a teacher, to be the Cape May County Board of Examiners for teachers.

The High School building at Haddon Heights is in such a crowded condition that there is room for only a few more pupils and the Board of Education is facing the serious problem of taking care of the new pupils who will apply for admission at the fall term.

The Roselle Park police are trying to find two boys who Monday night threw custard pies against the display windows of George H. Horning's drug store and Ernest Bruni's fruit and confectionery store.

Glassworkers and millworkers at Millville have signed pledges promising to abstain from eating meat for ten days. Dealers feel the effect of the movement and say they will be forced to cut the prices this week to save themselves from loss.

Struck by a trolley car at Broadway and Kaighn avenue, Camden, William Costello, 18 years old, of 749 Woodland avenue, sustained cuts of the scalp yesterday and was attended at the Homeopathic Hospital.

The wideawake Comercial League, which has already been instrumental in securing several industries for Bridgeton, is now endeavoring to obtain two more, one of them being a hosiery mill and the other a factory for the finishing of violins.

William T. Foulks, a large real estate owner of New Egypt, and a prominent granger, died yesterday. He will be buried from the home of his son-in-law, Walter Kirby. His death, following a very short illness, was a great shock to his friends and relatives. He was 68 years old.

Because of the high price of food the supper annually given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Presbyterian church, Woodbury, will be cancelled this year. The suppers have always netted from $200 to $300. A canvass has been made and it has been found that with the present prices a profit could not be realized.

Officers of the National Canners' Association, who have made an investigation of the recent illness in the family of John Mameit, of Trenton, who were said to have suffered from ptomaine poisoning after eating canned tomatoes, say they have discovered that there was no foundation for the statement. The family were victims of disordered stomachs, according to the statement of Dr. Mitchell, who prescribed for them. The latter is said to have been greatly surprised by statements that the family had been poisoned by ptomaines.

REV. CRANE CALLED TO WESTMINSTER.

What was practically a unanimous call was extended by the congregation of Westminster Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, last evening to the Rev. Louis B. Crane, pastor of the Brainerd Union Presbyterian church, of Easton, Pa. It was also decided to fix the salary at $4,000 a year.

There were 98 ballots cast, 97 favoring Mr. Crane's call and one being blank. Many of the ballots were underlined, signifying that the voters were eager for Mr. Crane's acceptance. The majority of those present were women.

The Rev. Dr. William B. Hamilton, of Westminster Hope chapel, a branch of Westminster, was moderator, and announced the result of the vote. William H. Corbin announced the selection in behalf of the committee which has been seeking a pastor. He referred to Mr. Crane's peculiar qualifications, saying that he is an excellent preacher, affable and cultured. He is a widower, 45 years old, and was educated in Princeton University. He will be asked to preach at the church next Sunday morning, when he will decide whether or not he will accept. The salary is understood to be higher than that he receives at present.

The call will be prosecuted before the Elizabeth Presbytery by Messrs. McLean and Simons, and the Presbytery at Easton must then consent to the release of Mr. Crane. In view of the decisive action of the congregation it is very likely that Mr. Crane will accept.

Another Pennsylvasia minister declined the call about a year ago. The pastorate has been vacant more than a year and a half, since the suspension of the Rev. Dr. Henry Elliott Mott, who has since endeavored to be returned by the local Presbytery, but was unsuccessful. The committee has been zealously seeking a pastor since June. The congregation is one of the wealthiest in the city.

Trenton, Jan. 27.—Falling from a ladder, which he had mounted to adjust some belting in the Roebling Mills, Alfred Wentzel was so badly crushed and torn before the machinery could be stopped that his life is despaired of. Wentzel fell directly upon the machine.

WANTS MORTGAGE CANCELLED.

Firehouse Matter Brought Before Westfield Council.

Steps for cancelleing the $1,000 mortgage on one firehouse in Westfield were taken by the Common Council at its meeting Tuesday night. Councilman Schmitt wanted to know why the mortgage on the property, amounting to $1,000, had not been paid. The mortgage is held by the Exempt Firemen's Association. It was decided to refer the matter to the law committee with power to act.

Councilman Affect was added to the committee on municipal water ownership.

"I would like to know," said Councilman Wilson, "why the park committee does not report on the pieces of property on which it holds options. These options will soon expire and the price of the property will be increased."

The matter was referred to the law committee.

Church Makes Good Record.

Bayonne, Jan. 27.—The Rev. Father Coyne, of St. Vincent de Paul's church, made the announcement yesterday that $2,500 had been paid last year on the church debt, which now is $22,000. During the year just closed the church raised $8,559.67.

Several applications for membership will be received at the meeting of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., tonight.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 30, 1910.

Topic.—The most stirring events of foreign missionary history.—Acts xiii, 8-52. Comment by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The incident recorded in the topical reference took place at Lystra, one of the easternmost points in Asia Minor reached by Paul and Barnabas on their first missionary journey. A man who had been a cripple from birth heard Paul speak. The apostle saw that he had faith enough to be healed and "said with a loud voice, Stand upright upon thy feet. And he leaped and walked." The people were astonished and cried out in their native tongue, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men." Because of his great stature they called Barnabas Jupiter, the king of the gods, and Paul, being the smaller of the two, was supposed to be Mercury, the messenger of Jupiter. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands into the gates of the city and would have worshiped Barnabas and Paul, but they rent their clothes and ran in among the people and protested, saying, "Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men, of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made heaven and earth and the sea and all things that are therein."

This experience of Paul and Barnabas at Lystra was certainly a stirring one. But such scenes and even more thrilling ones have been matters of common occurrence in missionary history. Many imagine that missionary literature is dull and uninteresting, but they were never more mistaken.

In no field of endeavor do we have more "truth stranger than fiction" than in missionary labors. The history of missions in the New Hebrides as told by John G. Paton, who has labored so long there, cannot be surpassed for thrilling adventure by any book of fiction. His encounters with cannibals and the many times that his life was in danger form stirring scenes indeed. And yet the conversion of these man eating tribes to the gentle virtues of Christianity is an even greater event than the physical dangers that he endured. Moffet and Livingstone in Africa passed through many thrilling adventures, as well as did Carey in India and the earlier and later missionaries in China, Korea and Japan, Madagascar and the south sea islands. Every field of missionary effort has its stories of stirring events. Yet in all, as among the cannibals of the New Hebrides, the greatest wonders have been the transformation of savage peoples and tribes from their terrible and cruel methods of living into the ways of Christianized and civilized nations. And when we think of what the early missionaries endured and the heroism which they displayed under the most crucial tests there should be a stirring within our minds and hearts inspiring us to do a still greater work under far more favorable circumstances in winning the world for Christ.

St. Louis' New C. E. Leader.

The president of the St. Louis (Mo.) Christian Endeavor union is Alfred Fairbank, a bright, energetic Endeavorer, who has been connected with union work for the past two years. During this time he has served on a number of different committees and has done most efficient work. He has recently toured Europe and America and knows all phases of Christian Endeavor work from personal observation.

ALFRED FAIRBANK.

Mr. Fairbank recently graduated with the title of LL. B. from the Benton College of Law and has also passed the bar examination. He is supported in Christian Endeavor work by a splendid body of officers, and they will doubtless show to good account in the year's work that lies before them.

A Governor's Tribute.

Governor W. R. Stubbs of Kansas welcomed the Endeavorers to a convention at Topeka recently. In the course of his remarks he said: "I am not ashamed to tell you that I try every day to serve God. For a great part of my life I was ashamed to have people know that I prayed. One of the main things in my life every day is to know what I ought to do. I believe God answers prayer, and I am not ashamed to have it known that I ask God to tell me what to do."

THE FOURTH ESTATE

Novelized by
FREDERICK R. TOOMBS

From the Great Play of the Same Name by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY JOSEPH MEDILL PATTERSON AND HARRIET FORD.

In "The Fourth Estate" the effectiveness of newspapers in fearlessly exposing political and judicial corruption and the safeguard they are to the public are interestingly and convincingly set forth. A young, earnest newspaper writer and editor is the central figure, and his battles with a dishonest United States judge against big odds and against the cunningly underhanded machinations of the lawyer lobbyist Dupuy form one of the most valuable as well as most entertaining pieces of fiction of the day. That the false judge's daughter, the reigning beauty in the fashionable life of a leading city, should play a sensational part in this gripping story of strong honest men and of strong dishonest men, fighting each other in a war of dollars, evidences the romantic possibilities of the narrative. This is a story of today's America, a fact story torn out of life's book, dealing with the most vital issues that confront every one of us. Romance and humor vie with stirring action for supremacy in this instructive and fascinating novel, which teaches that the path of duty is the path to love and happiness and that in success, nobly won, lie rewards of greater and more lasting value than in a triumph ignobly dnd more easily gained.

CHAPTER I.

> Burke said there were three estates in parliament, but in the reporters' gallery yonder there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all.—Carlyle.

THE silence in the managing editor's room of the Daily Advance was abruptly broken by the entrance of Ross McHenry through a private door. His eighteen years of active newspaper work in a career extending from cub reporterhood to his present important office had drilled into him the necessity, even the habit, of constant action, quick thought, keen and accurate perception and readiness for emergencies. He hastily threw off his coat, glanced at several papers laid on his desk while he was out at dinner and seated himself in his managerial chair. He wrote a few rapid words on a pad of paper at his right hand as he pushed a button with his left to summon an office boy.

"Any one here while I was gone?" McHenry queried sharply as the boy entered.

"Yes, sir. Woman whose boy was pinched wants to keep it out of th' paper. Been outside two hours. She's sittin' outside an' bawls an' bawls an' bawls."

"Tell her we're printing a newspaper and I've left for the night."

"Then there was a few phone calls. We handled 'em all 'cept th' last. He was a man named Nolan, an' he wanted ter see you."

"What'd you tell him?"

McHenry immediately became interested.

"What'd you tell him?" he asked, rising.

"That you was to th' theayter."

The managing editor picked up a Congressional Directory and shied it forcibly at the lad.

"Well, next time, young man, you tell him I've just stepped down to the night editor's room. Nolan; remember his name—Nolan. He's the new owner."

"Cheese it, another owner. Nobody keeps us long, do they?"

"No," respondest McHenry laconically. "Like certain other luxuries, nobody keeps us long. We're too expensive, Durkin."

The boy grinned and hurried away to summon the night editor at McHenry's command and to dispose of the "bawling" woman.

McHenry seated himself and turned to the ever ready telephone at the right hand corner of his desk.

"Hello, Miss Stowe! Get me Mr. Nolan—Mr. Michael Nolan—on the wire right away."

As the managing editor hung up the receiver Moore, the night editor, entered carrying a bundle of galley proofs in his left hand, a schedule in his right.

"Well, Moore, what have you got for part 1?" asked McHenry.

The night editor repeated rapidly in a dead flat monotonous voice:

"Thirty-five columns of ads. Telegraph editor's hollering for twenty columns. He just got a couple of nice flashes—one from Pittsburg about a man eloping with his daughter-in-law; very fine people. Another first class murder from St. Louis. Local has twenty-six scheduled, sports are very heavy, bowling, fights, checkers, and Kentucky's shut down on racing; they want two pages. We've got a tip that Morgan has the asthma. Steel will probably open soft on Monday."

McHenry took down the telephone receiver and held it expectantly at his ear. He took the proofs from Moore's hand and began looking them over. They contained important articles which had been set up, but which he had not previously seen.

"Hello, there's a live one," he suddenly exclaimed, glancing over one of the sheets. "Bill, I'd like to run that one. Senator Deering dead yet?"

McHenry turned to the telephone.

"No, not yet."

The managing editor was disgusted.

"Pshaw!" he exclaimed. "I'll bet the old codger dies for the afternoon papers. We're having rotten luck lately."

The telephone rang.

"Hello! Who's this?" cried McHenry savagely. But his voice changed abruptly to its most sugary tones.

"Oh, Mr. Nolan, this is Mr. McHenry. Yes; why, the boy said I'd gone to the theater. He's new to newspaper offices. Yes, indeed. He doesn't know we newspaper men have little time for theaters—no, indeed—ha, ha! I was downstairs in the press room all the time—yes, indeed; trouble with the roller on cylinder 5 of the color press, and I happen to have a bit of a mechanical turn of mind—yes, indeed. Anything I can do for you, sir? Hope we may have the pleasure of showing you over the office—your office—pretty soon. Yes, sir. Tonight? Yes, any time. We're always here. Yes, sir. Thank you."

He hung up the receiver and reverted to his natural voice. "It's the new boss, Moore. 'S coming down tonight."

"I wonder if that means more changes?" observed the night editor as he filled his pipe.

McHenry sighed.

"Ain't a man who gets into this business a sucker?"

The night editor smiled grimly.

"Wonder what kind of a joke is this Nolan anyway?" he asked.

The night editor's brow wrinkled.

"All I know is that he's a Colorado miner with a hill of ore all his own." He glanced over the night editor's schedule. "What is this T—T—golf or politics?"

"Taft—both; golf 2 down—conference with Aldrich."

McHenry snorted.

"Gosh, the White House is dead since Teddy left!" He pointed to the schedule. "What's this? 'Baltimore, one column.'"

"Double divorce. They exchanged partners."

"Good people?"

"Not much."

"Fifty words 'll be enough. Dead heavy—stupid paper," grunted the managing editor.

McHenry rang for the boy, Durkin, and on his belated arrival sent him to summon the city editor. "What you got?" saluted McHenry as the editor arrived.

Downs, the city editor, went straight to the point.

"Are you going to use that follow up story about Judge Bartelmy throwing the Lansing Iron company into a receivership?" he queried.

"Double divorce. They exchanged partners."

"I dunno. Any kicks on this morning's story?"

"I should say yes — telephone going all day."

McHenry turned and pounded the desk with his fist.

"If they kicked on that they'd get our jobs on this." He pointed at the proof of the new Bartelmy story which he had taken from Moore. "All the same, the judicial ermine is getting rather soiled these days. It makes me sore to think of what they're pulling off on the federal bench. He's bad all through, that Bartelmy. Whose story is it—Brand's?"

"Yep," responded the city editor.

"By heaven, he is a newspaper man."

"That's why he won't last in this office," put in Moore sarcastically.

"Yep," supplemented the city editor.

McHenry's face took on a resigned expression as he said: "Well, we'll have to pass it up." He paused. "It's likely to be libelous."

He laid aside the proof sheet and resumed his perusal of the schedule of articles intended to be used in the next morning's paper.

"How about divorces?" McHenry asked suddenly, raising his head to the city editor.

"The Sarrup divorce is up again. Two new corespondents named." He pointed them out among the photos.

McHenry drew a few lines on one of the photos and rang for the boy. "Bring me an artist, Durkin," he ordered. The artist soon appeared.

"Here," spoke up the managing editor, "take these corespondents and run 'em with the two you had yesterday, but fix those up different. Put a hat on one and the other in low neck, and put Sarrup himself in the middle with a dado of hearts around." McHenry changed his mind. "No; make it a big question mark of cupids and the caption 'Which of These Women Does This Man Love?' Yes, and frame in his wife too. Three columns."

"Yes, sir," responded the artist, starting away with the photos.

But McHenry called him back.

"Hey!" he cried. "Make that 'Which of These Beautiful Women Does This Man Love?'"

The artist bowed in acquiescence and escaped.

McHenry took up another photograph.

"Ha, what a beauty!" he said enthusiastically. "What's she been doing?"

"She is Judith Bartelmy, the judge's daughter. She gave a reception today," answered Downs, the city editor.

"High society all there as usual, I suppose?" mused McHenry. "The Bartelmys are an old family and they've held on to some of their money. Here, Downs," he went on, "play her up for two—no, three columns. Maybe it will square it with the judge for what we did to him in the paper this morning. You explain to an artist."

"All right."

"The new boss, Nolan, is coming down to look us over tonight," added McHenry.

"Wonder where we'll all be working next week?" was the city editor's reply over his shoulder as he quickly made his exit.

The boy came in and laid a card on the managing editor's desk.

"Miss Judith Bartelmy!" exclaimed McHenry as he glanced at it. "Well, what do you think of that, Moore?"

"It's a kick sure, and"—

"By the way," interjected McHenry deliberately, "this girl, Judith Bartelmy, isn't she engaged to Wheeler Brand?"

"Seems to me I've heard something of the sort," assented Moore vaguely.

"Well, same here, and Brand wrote that story this morning showing up her father, the judge, as a trickster of the worst, most dangerous sort. Now the girl comes to this office—probably to defend her dad. Say, Moore"—the managing editor was becoming excited—"things are getting warm around here. Brand certainly had his nerve with him to hand such a roast to his prospective father-in-law."

McHenry turned abruptly to one side and reached for his coat, which he quickly donned.

"Show her in," he called to the boy.

Moore hastily retreated from the room as Judith Bartelmy entered, leaving the judge's daughter alone with the managing editor. McHenry had long flattered himself that he had met many attractive women in his time, but as he rose to meet Judith Bartelmy and surveyed this fashionably gowned young woman he made a mental note that she surpassed them all. Her blond features were of distinctly patrician cast. Her blue eyes had the magnetic qualities so envied by the many less fortunate women, and the pure whiteness of her finely curved chin and neck was advantageously revealed by the low cut collar of her princess gown of wine colored silk which clung to a figure that celebrated artists had pronounced unusual in its symmetry.

"I desire to complain about the article attacking my father this morning," the girl began.

"Yes?" answered McHenry.

"I wish an apology for it."

"Is this a message from your father?"

"That's not the point. This is the first time in his life that any one has ventured to question his honor. The article is false, and I think your paper should apologize for it immediately."

"Before saying as to that," returned the managing editor, "I should have to refer the matter to the new proprietor, Mr. Nolan. You know it is not customary for a newspaper to take back what it says."

The judge's daughter raised her eyebrows in surprise as she drew close to McHenry's desk, where he had resumed his seat.

"I should think you'd have a good many lawsuits," she suggested.

"Oh, no; not many. We go up to the line, but we try not to step over it." He picked up several newspapers from his desk. "For instance"—scanning the papers—"I don't think your father will feel inclined to sue us." He rose as if to end the interview.

Judith, however, was not to be thus disposed of.

"I don't want to detain you," she remarked, "but I should like to ask you who was responsible for that article." She seated herself in a chair which McHenry indicated.

"We never tell the name of our writers," answered the managing editor.

Her father had diplomatically suggested to her that Wheeler Brand might have written the story. This she found difficult to believe. But she must be convinced, and one of her motives in visiting the newspaper had been to ask him—to ask him to tell her that he was not the author of the new attack on her father. She must see him and learn the truth from his lips alone.

"Is Mr. Brand in the office now?" she asked.

"Yes, I think so."

"Would it be possible for me to see him?"

"Why, yes, if you wish. I'll send for him."

McHenry summoned the boy and told him to "ask Mr. Brand to come in."

"We've noticed"—she hesitated—"all his friends have noticed that he's becoming very radical lately." Judith rose from the chair and stepped nervously toward the editor's desk.

"Oh," he laughed, "they all get that when they're young, like the measles."

"And that's something they all get over, isn't it?" she asked eagerly.

"Yes," responded McHenry, stirring as though to leave the room.

Judith stepped squarely in front of his desk.

"But I don't want to disturb you. Can't I go to his office?"

"He hasn't got any office, and they're all bunched in the local room in their shirt sleeves smoking. You wouldn't like it. We haven't a reception room." McHenry laughed as he spoke.

In his shirt sleeves, rolled to his elbows, with quick steps and squared shoulders, Wheeler Brand, one of the ablest men on the city staff of the Advance, strode into the office of the managing editor through the door leading from the city and telegraph rooms.

"Yes, sir," he greeted McHenry. Then he stopped short both in his steps and in his speech. He had caught sight of the managing editor's visitor. "Why, Judith!" he gasped. "What in heaven's name are you doing here? I"— At this point words failed him, and he stood staring at her, with his breast heaving violently as the result of his surprise.

The girl was also deeply disturbed in spite of her previous knowledge that she was to be confronted by the man she loved.

McHenry thought that the moment had arrived when his presence was no longer necessary.

"Miss Bartelmy has asked to see you for a few minutes," he said, rising and starting toward a door. "You may talk here." A handful of proof sheets rustled in his grasp as he disappeared.

Wheeler Brand started toward the girl.

"Is there anything the matter?" he queried anxiously.

She hesitated before answering. Then she spoke determinedly.

"Yes; two things. First, you did not come to my reception the afternoon; secondly, there is that article about father this morning."

"I couldn't get off from the office to attend the reception, and I am awfully sorry," he protested. "But as for the story about your father—well, did he send you here?"

"No, he didn't send me. But I couldn't help seeing how disturbed he was, and"—

PLAINFIELD HIGH 94, SOMERVILLE HIGH 4

The Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the Somerville High School five yesterday afternoon in the local gymnasium, by a score of 94 to 4. It was a complete walkover for the local boys and made a good practice game. The Somervillians were too light, and seemed to be all out of practice.

Doane did the best work for P. H. S., putting up a splendid game and scoring most of the points. Morris also did good work, being second in the number of points scored. In the first half P. H. S. did not show up well, but in the last half they tried to make the score as near one hundred as possible. The line-up:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Clark, Manley, Woodhull; centre, Morris; guards, Doane, Overton.

Somerville H. S.—Forwards, Davenport, Brunt; centre, Garretson; guards, Morton, McCullough, Bolby.

Goals were made as follows: Doane, 16 field and 9 foul; Morris, 13 field; Clark, 3 field; Overton, 6 field; Manley, 2 field; Woodhull, 2 field; Brunt, 1 field and 2 foul. Time of halves, twenty minutes; referee, Lidgate.

HOPE JUNIORS TAKE ANOTHER CONTEST

The Hope chapel junior basketball team deefated the Social five last night by the score of 44 to 11. The Hopes gained a big advantage in the first half by registering a lead of fifteen points. The Socials made several changes in their lineup, but they were unable to overhaul the west enders. The lineups:

Hope Juniors—T. and J. Heron, forwards; W. Brown, center; C. Nicholson, G. Leighs, guards. Social five—McNamee, Ball and Weber, forwards; Grisley, center; Manley, Moulton, Champlain, guards. Referee, J. Porter; umpire, Weber.

DEMOCRATS STILL IN RAHWAY JOBS.

The State civil service commissioners, who met Tuesday in Trenton, when it was expected they would officially classify the Rahway officials under municipal civil service, reopened the case and heard arguments as presented by former Councilman Reuben Tharp, former City Attorney Fred C. Hyer and others, after which the commissioners completely reversed their former decision as given in Rahway Friday last.

At that meeting they placed on the unclassified list all of the city officials excepting a few of the minor officers and the chief of the fire department. Tuesday they placed on the classified list nearly all the city officers.

The commissioners deferred submitting their official decision for one week, giving as a reason that they expected the courts to give an important decision which would have an important bearing on the act in the meantime.

The reversing by the commissioners of their former decision causes the Democrats, who are holding fast to the offices, to feel much elated, while the Republicans, who expected to take hold of the jobs yesterday, are dejected.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

The Health of Urban New Jersey.

We confess to being puzzled as well as interested by an analysis which Mr. James Owen has made of the last report of the State Board of Health in New Jersey as it relates to the urban population. The subject is one of concern not only to the majority that earn a livelihood within the State and pass their days there, but to the commuting population; not only to medical men, but to laymen. Local pride is involved, and with easier acess to New Jersey by the Hudson tunnels it is of the utmost importance that local pride should feel a stimulus to sanitary improvement in instances where the health statistics seem to reflect upon the government of a town. New Jersey's population is urban for the most part. We believe that in no other State are there so many dwellers in cities or towns in proportion to the whole number of inhabitants. Therefore if Mr. Owen deals mainly with urban statistics the explanation is obvious. In the State at large there has been a reduction of 2.3 per thousand in the death rate during the last twenty-nine years, or from 18.73 to 16.37. A table that will set rival cities exulting or explaining he reproduces:

| City or Town. | Population. | No. of Deaths. | R. per 1,000 |
|---|---|---|---|
| East Orange | 26,643 | 297 | 11.15 |
| Bloomfield | 12,468 | 145 | 11.63 |
| West Hoboken | 31,477 | 371 | 11.79 |
| Perth Amboy | 29,173 | 399 | 13.68 |
| Millville | 12,402 | 174 | 14.00 |
| Kearny | 14,683 | 213 | 14.50 |
| Paterson | 114,072 | 1,839 | 16.12 |
| Town of Union | 17,732 | 291 | 16.46 |
| Bayonne | 46,078 | 763 | 16.56 |
| Montclair | 17,333 | 291 | 16.79 |
| Atlantic City | 41,495 | 699 | 16.85 |
| Camden | 86,334 | 1,506 | 17.44 |
| Bridgeton | 13,508 | 239 | 17.69 |
| Plainfield | 19,709 | 358 | 18.01 |
| Trenton | 88,529 | 1,599 | 18.06 |
| Hackensack | 11,760 | 218 | 18.54 |
| Long Branch | 15,493 | 288 | 18.59 |
| Elizabeth | 63,861 | 1,194 | 18.70 |
| Orange | 26,885 | 513 | 19.08 |
| Newark | 298,177 | 5,736 | 19.11 |
| New Brunswick | 24,384 | 468 | 19.19 |
| Jersey City | 243,205 | 4,723 | 19.24 |
| Harrison | 13,714 | 264 | 19.25 |
| Passac City | 41,861 | 808 | 19.30 |
| Morristown | 12,498 | 281 | 22.49 |
| Hoboken | 67,910 | 1,556 | 22.91 |

To those familiar with their location, topography and character of government some of these places seem to occupy the position in the list they deserve. But as the report of the State Board of Health is unread except by proofreaders, doctors, undertakers and sanitary experts, it will excite surprise that detached, remote and mountain Morristown should be, according to these statistics, the unhealthiest town in the State except Hoboken proper. West Hoboken is not a bad third as a health resort to East Orange, where Governor Fort lives, and Bloomfield, which should be salubrious if there is anything in a name. Why East Orange should be at the top and Orange in the ruck we leave to their public spirited citizens, including the real estate interests, to settle. Mr. Owen has a suggestion that might pour oil on the controversy. He has noted that in Montclair, which as a select and superior community should at least be bracketed with East Orange for salubrity, a report of the local health officer shows that 49 non-residents died in the Montclair hospitals, and he suggests that if these were not included Montclair's death rate would be 11.81 per thousand. The same explanation, we presume, could be offered in behalf of Morristown, Orange, Plainfield, Elizabeth and New Brunswick, in all of which there are public hospitals. But the trouble with the explanation is that it may act as a soporific upon health authorities that should bestir themselves to make a better showing in the next annual report.

When Perth Amboy (13.68) and New Brunswick (19.19), both on the Raritan and both manufacturing places, are so wide apart in their death rates, as are those suburbs of of Newark, Kearny (14.50) and Harrison (19.25), the health experts ought to be able to put their fingers upon some salient cause of the difference. In the case of Passaic, far down on the list, we should say that to the ever fetid and repulsive river that flows sluggishly through the town might be attributed its insalubrity in part. Newark also suffers from the same black infection. A study of the components of population in the large cities should disclose reasons for their high death rate. In 1900 Newark had 246,070 people, of whom 71,400 were foreign born and 6,700 were negroes. In Trenton, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Passaic there was and is a considerable proportion of foreign born and negroes. Considering the slums in which many of them live, the nature of their labor, their necessities and their habits, it is not surprising that they contribute largely to the death rate. But eternal vigilance on the part of health officers is the price of of hygenic excellence, and we have no desire to help authorities remiss in their duties over a stile.—New York Sun.

URGING TRADE SCHOOLS FOR NEW JERSEY'S GOOD

Simultaneously with the appearance in both branches of the Legislature of the report of the State commission to investigate the subject of industrial education, Senator John D. Prince, of Passaic county, introduced a bill to carry out the commission's recommendation that that body be made permanent. The report, as submitted over the signatures of President George R. Rowe, of Essex, and his associates, says in part:

"Statistics show that of every twenty pupils who enter the elementary grades of the public schools nineteen leave permanently before or at the age of 14; in other words, 95 per cent. It is to this large number starting out in life with but an elementary education that the State should lend its aid in order to make them proficient in the work which they set out to do.

"When a boy reaches the age of 14 or 16, economic conditions usually compel him to go to work, either to support himself or to assist in the support of his family. He is not mature enough to make a selection of the occupation which he expects to follow through life, and tries one thing after another until he locates in some calling which he seems best adapted for. If he enters a trade, it is but a short time before he realizes that there is no place or method by which he can secure the supplemental education necessary to make him a skilled workman. This lack of opportunity no doubt prevents many boys from undertaking a trade, and its importance is now recognized by those who have given any thought to the subject.

"From the investigation and study of the subject by the commission it is convinced that the best results at the outset will be obtained by establishinbg evening schools for industrial education in the various communities of the State, under local boards of trustees appointed by the chief executive of the municipalities. These schools must offer special courses of instruction for the different industries. The boards of trustees should be made up largely, if not wholly, of those interested in industrial pursuits.

"The law of 1881 now provides for State aid schools for industrial training, but what is lacking is a comprehensive basis on which to establish the schools, and on which to provide for proper textbooks and instructors.

"The commission believes that one of the greatest benefits to be derived from the better education of those employed in the industries will be a solution of the labor problem, which at times has caused so much disagreement and hard feeling between the employers and employees. A well educated and skilled mechanic is the one least apt to make trouble, or to join in a movement against the best interests of his employer and fellow workmen."

Labor organizations will not take kindly to the last statement, which, while ambiguous, is not regarded as very friendly.

The Commissioners state that they bore personally part of the expense of their work in 1908, and, because the Legislature made no appropriation last year, all of the expense during 1909. In his message Governor Fort praised the report highly. On the commission with President Howe are William A. Bainbridge, John A. Ferguson and Frederick W. Roebling, Jr.

Another report submitted yesterday is that of the commission which had charge of the erection of a battle monument at Salem Church and battle tablet at Spottsylvania Court House, in Virginia, commemorating the heroism of the Fifteenth New Jersey Volunteer Infantry in battles there during the Civil War. Former United States Senator John F. Dryden is the head of that commission.

"The Silk Stocking," a comedy playlet, is being presented at Proctor's theatre this week by Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth and it made a decided hit today. Alice Davenport & Co. present an original dramatic playlet entitled "Now." Mrs. Davenport is a sister-in-law of the late Fanny Davenport and is supported by her youngest daughter, who is clever. The sketch is from real life. West & Volkes are a pair of funny German comedians, who can produce a real laugh. John Marion and Grace Lillian, singers and dancers, are a pair of celever entertainers. ## HOLD HOUSEHOLD GOODS

W. P. Bache's Effects are in Freight Car When Attached by Merchants.

NUMEROUS SMALL CLAIMS.

Creditors Did Not Know That Couple Were Removing to Denver, Colo., Leaving Unpaid Bills.

Attachments for a tax bill amounting to $15 and other bills aggregating $210.71, were sufficient to stop the removal on Wednesday of household goods belonging to Wallace P. Bache, formerly of North Plainfield, but more recently of 141 East Ninth street. Mr. and Mrs. Bache left town on Wednesday for Kansas City, where he is to take the position of general superintendent of the Union Stock Yards, it is said. The same day the household goods were placed in a box car at the freight station for removal to Kansas City.

Various creditors got word of the proposed sudden departure and through counsel got busy and placed an attachment on the goods. The action was taken in the District court. In addition to the attachment for a tax bill amounting to $15, seven other creditors took action. Their names as well as that of counsel and amount attached for follows:

Wadley & Goodenough, coal dealers, $12; Plainfield Cleaning Pressing Company, Robert Newton Crane; Gorham Manufacturing Company, of New York, $10, Harry C. Runyon; Frank Brothers, of New York, shoe dealers, $85.50; W. W. Warnock, baker, $15.91; A. H. Enander, plumber, $64.50; George I. Forgerson, butter and egg merchant, $13.80, V. W. Nash, Jr.

The bill that started all the trouble is said to be that of the Plainfield Cleaning and Pressing Company for $9, and it is said, that if that amount had been paid, Mr. Bache would probably have had no trouble in getting his goods out of the city. It is also understood that the rent for the house remains unpaid.

Martin B. Stutsman represents Mr. Bache, and it was said today that probably a check would be received soon to liquidate the entire indebtedness.

SANG GOOD OLD SONGS

Joseph Mc Intyre's Concert Heard by an Appreciative Audience.

THE ENCORES WERE FREQUENT.

Mrs. Goold, Miss Hussey, Dr. Dufft, Mme. David and Mr. McIntyre the Artists— The Program.

Never was there a better illustration of the popularity of old melodies than the enthusiasm evoked at the Old Favorite Song concert, given last night under the auspices of Joseph McIntyre at the High School auditorium. Encore after encore greeted the four artists, who in their repertoire included those old songs which we asociate with our earliest childhood, and which like old wine, seemingly improves with age. It was a brilliant, fashionable and appreciative audience which assembled at the pretty auditorium and throwing off that restraint so much in vogue among smart folk of today, entered so thoroughly into the zest of the songfest that the artists and their critics were soon in perfect harmony.

Two artists new to Plainfield made their debut here last night, Miss Ada Hussey, contralto, and Mme. David, harpist, added fresh laurels to their wreaths and each was accorded a warm welcome and assured of a cordial greeting should they consent to pay us a return visit. Mrs. Edith Chapman Goold, soprano; Mr. John Young, tenor, and Dr. Carl Dufft, baritone, all have been heard here before and all three are prime favorites. Each was in splendid voice and then too, the songs they selected appealed strangely to their audience.

The first number, a quartet, "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," was splendidly rendered, and in consequence vociferiously encored. Mrs. Goold was the first soloist of the evening and all of her songs were exquisitely sung. Both Kathleen Mavourneen and Robin Adair brought forth thunderous applause, and it was difficult to judge which was the more popular.

The duet, "Beware, Beware, She's Fooling Thee," sung by Mr. Young and Dr. Dufft, was immensely popular, and proved a splendid medium for demonstrating the tone worth of these two finished artists.

Miss Hussey's group of three songs followed and the reception accorded each must have been gratifying to this artist, who has won so many plaudits in the larger cities of the east and west. Mme. David came next on the program and she too played with a brilliance of execution that won for her round after round of hearty applause.

Mr. Young sang quite as delightfully as of yore, and that he is firmly established in the affections of Plainfield's musical vistories was attested by the reception accorded him.

In the opinion of many no musical season in Plainfield is complete without one or more appearances here of Dr. Dufft. Last night this most sterling artists was in capital voice, and two of the group of three songs he sang, "Beware, of All Those Endowing Young Charms," and "Heart Bowed Down" alone were worth the price of admission. Mrs. Goold and Miss Hussey in their duet, "See the Pale Moon," sang charmingly and the "Good Night," quartet from Martha, was a fitting climax to a delightful evening in harmony's realm. The program follows:

SCANDINAVIAN SOCIAL CLUB GIVES TWELFTH ANNUAL DANCE

The twelfth annual masquerade ball of the Scandinavian Social club was held last night in the Coward Hall on Park avenue. There were about seventy-five couples present. The costumes worn were cleverly gotten up preventing recognition. Dancing was continued until a late hour this morning. There were guests from New York, Newark, Orange, Cranford, Westfield, Elizabeth, Bayonne and this city.

During an intermission at midnight supper was served. Christian Hove was chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Benjamin Hansen, Alfred Jensen, Christian Ramussen, A. Wetrub and Charles Madsen.

FORM BOARD OF TRADE

Frank R. Wynkoop Elected of Dunellen's New Civic Body.

STARTS WITH 126 MEMBERS.

Mayor Sanford, President Jeffery and Others Give Advice—The Officers Are Chosen.

Dunellen's board of trade was organized last night under the most auspicious conditions. The board starts out with an enrollment of 126 members which is 7 per cent. of the population of that borough. Assisting in the organization were President William Jeffery, J. V. E. Vanderhoef, George N. Christian and Professor A. S. Herr, of the Plainfield Board of Trade.

President Jeffery made a big hit in his speech to the Dunellenites and he was repeatedly interrupted by rounds of applause. One member of the board who occupied a seat in the rear of the hall became so enthused while Mr. Jeffery was making his address that he shouted: "You're O. K. Jeff, we'll have you for a governor some day."

The chief point in Mr. Jeffery's address was his advice to keep politics out of the organization. "If you will eliminate politics entirely, you are sure to achieve wonderful success," said Mr. Jeffery. The speaker also touched on a number of needed improvements in the municipality in which he declared the organization would be in position to demand. The remarks of Messrs. Vanderhoef, Christian and Herr were also enthusiastically received.

Mayor W. A. Sanford delivered a practical talk in which he predicted that the board is bound to flourish. He also declared that Dunellen is on the boom and that the population will be doubled in the course of a few years.

Frank R. Wynkoop, who acted as chairman of the meeting, was unanimously electer president of the organization. Mayor Sanford was nominated but he declined. The other officers selected were A. S. Todd, Jr., vice president; Dr. Thomas Hogan, vice president; Wilson S. Frederick, treasurer; executive committee, John H. L. Peters, George T. Schenck, Paul Reusch, Henry S. Garretson, S. D. Baerman. Auxiliary committees will be selected by the executive committee and announced at the next meeting. The regular meetings of the organization will be held on the last Thursday of each month.

COUNTY W.C.T.U. ATTACK TEMPERANCE TEXT BOOK

The Union County W. C. T. U. executive meeting was held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Edward Wheeler, of Prospect street, Elizabeth, when several matters of considerable interest was taken up. A book entitled "A Text Book of True Temperance," distributed by a brewery company, was presented for inspection by Mrs. Peter H. Bennett, of this city, and received the condemnation of the women.

The spring institute will be held at Westfield in April, when among other topics to be discussed will be that of "Suffrage," "Scientific Temperance Instruction," and the "Loyal Temperance Legion," with a matrons' silver medal contest in the evening.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson reported a new union for Plainfield, and that an L. T. L. will be organized at Cranford on February 4. Judge Vail was commended for recent saloon restrictions and Senators Kean and Briggs are to receive petitions favoring reform measures. The White Ribbon News, of New Jersey, a paper recently started by the State organization, was given attention and subscriptions were received.

C. H. Eldridge Loses Finger.

Charles H. Eldridge, of South avenue, who is employed by the Baird Company, manufacturers of surgical instruments on East Fourth street, while engaged in work on a machine finishing hyperdermic syringes, yesterday stepped on a lever which brought a clutch down on the second finger of his right hand, and bruised the first finger. He was taken to Dr. C. A. Gesswein's office, where it was found necessary to amputate the finger at the first joint.

P. H. S. "Seconds" Win.

The Plainfield High School second basketball team defeated the borough "seconds" yesterday in an exciting contest by the score of 35 to 31.

BLACK HAND SCARE SCHOOL BOYS' PRANK

Scotch Plains manages once in a while to get into the lime light and this time succeeds with a "black hand" scare. Robert Jansen, the young son of Frank Jansen, of Park avenue, was the scared one and perhaps the perpetrators of the joke, if such it was, will be glad to know that if their identity were known they would receive the punishment they deserve for perpetrating it.

Master Jansen received a note duly signed withe symbols of the black hand demanding $5 which was to be deposited in a certain spot near the Episcopal church and failing to do so was threatened with kidnapping. Robert failed to make the required deposit and is still running around as usual. The affair is considered a prank of schoolmates, but coming as it does when the blackhand are so busy in the surrounding country it takes on a serious aspect and ought not to be repeated.

BIG MASS MEETING OF LAYMEN TONIGHT

Large delegations of laymen from the evangelical churches of Plainfield, North Plainfield, Westfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook, will attend the laymen's missionary meeting at the First M. E. church, tonight. Charles W. McCutchen will preside and addresses will be given by E. T. Colton on "Will America Evangelize Her Share of the World?" and Silas H. McBee, editor of The Churchman, will speak on "Men and Missions."

Judge William N. Runyon will lead the singing and there will be selections by a quartet comprising Arthur H. Osmun, Bertram F. Tallamy, George H. Smith and Thomas MacDonald. J. Edmund Skiff will preside at the organ. There will be no solicitation of funds at this meeting, its purpose being purely inspirational.

Mr. McBee will be entertained while in town by Mr. and Mrs. William S. Tyler, of West Eighth street, while Mr. Colton will be a guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Murray, of West Ninth street.

ST. MARY'S ALUMNAE EUCHRE AND DANCE

Socially and financially the euchre and dance given by Mount St. Mary's Alumnae Association last night at the Park Club was a great success. Fully three hundred people were present. In the euchre preceding the dance forty-two tables were in use. The play was spirited and at the conclusion thirty-five awards were made to scorers of the greatest number of points among the men and women playing. Presents were received by Miss Ethel Hudson, Mrs. Nash, Miss Anna McCullough, Miss Anna Daley, Mrs. C. Dineen, Mrs. C. Bowlby, Miss M. A. Smith, Mrs. C. D. Pope, Mrs. W. J. Hudson, Miss Irene Duchesne, Louis Pentigill, William Hickey and others.

The dancing, however, proved to be the feature of a wholly enjoyable evening. Parubeck's orchestra furnished the music for the affair, which continued until midnight. Refreshments were served.

The committe in charge was composed of Miss Irene Duchesne, chairman; Miss Theresa Snyder and Miss Ethel Chamberlain. They were ably assisted by Miss Kathryn Reddington, Mrs. A. G. Slevin, Mrs. A. Slevin, Mrs. Hillaire Blatz, Miss Lorette Nolen, Mlle. Jaccard and Messrs. Andrew Kenney, Arthur Cannon, M. T. Moynihan, Leo Kenney and Louis De Brigard.

The dance was attended by friends from New York, Newark, Elizabeth, Somerville, Westfield, Raritan, Cranford, South Plainfield Fanwood Roselle, Bound Brook, Dunellen, Watchung and this city.

Printers' Grand Ball Tonight.

The first grand ball of Typographical Union, No. 399, of this city, will be held in Saengerbund Hall tonight. Great preparations for this event have been making for a long time, and a large crowd is expected. Suhr's full orchestra will furnish the music and delegations of printers and their friends are expected from Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway, Somerville and New Brunswick.

After Delinquent Taxpayers.

Tax Collector Brown will advertise all unpaid tax accounts on February 1. A deputy will aslo be employed to collect poll and personal taxes.

SOUGHT BY HER HUSBAND

Mrs. Victor Lees Left Orange Two Weeks Ago to Visit Friends Here.

APPEALS TO THIS PAPER.

Mr. Lees Asks The Daily Press to Help Find His Wife, of Whom He Gives a Description.

Is Mrs. Victor Lees in Plainfield? If so, her husband, Victor Lees, of Orange, would be glad to know just where. Mrs. Lees left home on January 15 and with the understanding that she would either telephone or write of her safe arival here. But Mr. Lees has not had a word from his wife since she left home and is almost frantic.

In a letter to The Daily Press Mr. Lees says his wife is twenty-six years old, but appears to be no more than twenty. She is five feet two or three inches tall and very petite. When she left home she wore a close fitting lavender coat, black dress and cream colored silk shirt waist, a picture hat with large black ostrich plumes. She has light brown hair, small blue eyes and small features, in other words she is pretty.

Mr. Lees says she came to Plainfield to make her usual visit to some girl friends, the mother of one of whom is a widow. The widow was to have sailed for Europe last fall but was taken ill and the trip was postponed. The name of the widow is not given in the letter and the only other information about her is that she has a son and that she owned the house in which she lived until it was bought by an Italian woman (name not given) who runs a hotel or high class boarding house in New York.

"I know my wife would be with me," Mr. Lees says, "if she were free to come and she is alive. Unless some one is exerting some undue influence over her I cannot understand her absence."

The distracted husband has closed up his store and is using every means at his command to find his missing spouse and hopes that some one will recognize the description if she has been seen and notify him of the fact. The store which the couple have conducted in Orange is one of the kind patronized by school children and furnishes a comfortable living for Mr. Lees and his wife. He says they have always lived happily and there is no cause for her remaining away from home unless she is forcibly detained.

Misuse of Commutation Tickets.

The practice of loaning and hiring Central Railroad commutation and fifty-trip tickets, when discovered last summer, resulted in the issuance by the Court of Chancery, of an injunction restraining this practice. That injunction applies not only to the defendants in the suit instituted by the railroad company, but to all persons in the State of New Jersey engaging in such practice. The Central Railroad has given notice that all persons violating this injunction will be proceeded against according to law.

GATHERING OF M. E. FOLK

Dinner Marks Social Union of the Three Local Congregations.

DR. CARROLL TOASTMASTER.

Speeches Made by Ministers and Laymen—One Hundred Men and Women at the Feast.

For the purpose of forming a religious social union of the members of the three local Methodist churches a banquet was held in Vincent chapel of the First M. E. church last night. More than one hundred men and women from the First M. E., Monroe Avenue and Grace M. E. churches, attended the affair and enjoyed the excellent dinner and the fine addresses afterward. The idea was suggested by Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent of the Elizabeth district, of the Newark Conference, and that much good will result is not doubted by those present.

After two hours was spent in enjoying the dinner, the speechmaking began. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of the borough, was the toastmaster, and he made a good one. In his introductory remarks he referred to Farmer Anderson, Gardiner Shoop and Truckman Kemble and about each he made a humorous remark, in speaking of their particular field of work.

Dr. Carroll praised Methodism in general and said that he was not only proud that he had been born an American, but that he was also a Methodist, a member of a denomination that holds a wide influence throughout the world. He referred to the strength of the denomination in the city and borough, of the harmony existing among the members and of the possibilities for greater usefulness in the work for the Lord.

There were six speakers in all, the three local pastors, two laymen, S. S. Swackhamer and W. J. Conroy and Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph. The assigned topic for the evening was "What Three Things Does Our Church Need?"

Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, was the first speaker. He said that it was a rather risky thing to say what three things his church was in need of. Some might turn it about and suggest "What Do the Preachers Need?"

The speaker said that every Methodist Episcopal church is a unique church, and first, it needs a positive experience of the New Birth as taught by Nicodemus and enjoyed by St. Paul. In the second place it needs a belief in the Holy Scriptures as interpreted by the twenty-five articles of religion as taught by the church, and thirdly, loyalty to the church as recorded in the Book of the Disciples. Then it will be possible for all to wear the crown and wave the palm.

In telling what three things his church needs, Pastor Shoop, of Grace church, said that his son, Hamilton, suggested arithmetic, bioglogy and geography, which thought was not so bad. The first would help one to count their blessings, the second would help one to cultivate life in the fullest, highest and best sense, and the third would give the world as a parish.

Continuing, Mr. Shoop said:

"The three things needed for the highest efficiency of Grace church, are first, we need a vital sense of personal responsibility on the part of the membership of the church. This will entail a very general throwing aside of indifference, irresponsibility and spiritual desuetude; with a glorious confederation of all the vital forces of the church for the triumph of the Kingdom of God.

"Secondly, the men of Grace church need the assurance borne in upon them that the work of the Kingdom of God is a man's job. Our women of Grace church, God bless them, are high minded, consecrated and active and loyal. But the church must have for her highest efficiency, the broad statesmanship and business acumen, the high, grand note of earnest enthusiasm, the spirit of intelligent daring and the masculine virility.

"In asking men to consecrate their powers to the work of the church we are not taking them from the manly tasks of which they are worthy, to place in their hands the distaff! No! No! The church demands men for a man's work. The church needs the rich, cultured muluality of a Paul; the bold daring and fiery fervor of a Savonarola; the Dutch determination and God-like steadfastness of a Luther; the evangelistic grace and spiritual wealth of our Father in God, John Wesley; the heroic zeal and apostolic fortitude of an Asbury. All five of these types are hiding in the men of Grace church.

"The supreme need of Grace church is the delicious vision and David D. Smalley, one of the best known citizens in the borough, as well as Somerset county, passed away at 6:30 o'clock this morning. Death was due to Bright's disease and complications. He had been ill for nine months and was confined to his room for five weeks. The last time he appeared on the streets was on Election Day in November.

Born at Smalleytown August 1, 1827, Mr. Smalley was in his eighty-third year. He was of the fourth generation of the Smalley family that emigrated from England and settled in the Passaic Valley in about 1650. Mr. Smalley was a farmer until 1884 when he gave up his agricultural pursuits and removed to the borough where he has since resided.

In politics Mr. Smalley was a Democrat of the old school and always voted the Jeffersonian ticket. In 1871 and 1872 he was elected to the Legislature representing Somerset county in the Assembly. During his resident in the borough Mr. Smalley was justice of the peace for about fteen years. He was also a commissioner of deeds and also engaged in the real estate business.

PLAINFIELDER FIGURES IN UNUSUAL ACCIDENT

Harry Le Page Heaume, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Heaume, of Dunellen avenue, who is in charge of the Postal Telegraph Company's office at Rodeisa, South Africa, in a recent letter to his parents in this city, relates a collision between a train and a herd of elephants which created a lot of excitement among the passengers on the train.

The engine was derailed and the cow-catcher was all buckled and twisted back under the wheels of the locomotive as a result of the force of the collision. One large elephant became entangled in the train and did not die for two hours although several of the passengers tried to shoot the brute to death.

Mr. Heaume, who was a passenger on the train, said the collision was accompanied by a loud crash which terrorized the women on the train. The accident occurred in an elephant jungle in which the train was obliged to remain all night.

SCOTCH PLAINS KICKS OVER TROLLEY SERVICE.

Workmen who live in Scotch Plains and work in the local shops, have complained to the Public Service Railway because the trolley car leaving there at 6:30 in the morning, going west has been discontinued, and they say they can get no satisfactory explanation from the company for its action in losing that particular trip which brought the men to Plainfield in time for the commencing of work at 7 o'clock.

The matter has been referred to the township committee and township Counsel Walter L. Redfield, Jr., has taken the question up with the railway with a view to having the trip restored or some adequate explanation given for its removel.

Searching for Dr. Richards' Will.

Surrogate Thomas, of New York, yesterday signed an order directing the Lincoln Safe Deposit Company, to permit George H. Richards, eldest son of Rev. Dr. William R. Richards, to examine the contents of the safe deposit box rented by the latter, to ascertain if it contains a will. If such will is found the surrogate directs that it be filed with the clerk of his court. A diligent search has been made, but no will found.

TEACHES SCHOOL IN THE HALLWAYS.

Bayonne, Jan. 28.—Because of the overcrowded condition of the building, many High School pupils are on part time. Classes are being held in the hallways and on the stairways leading from one floor to another. There are accommodations for 305 pupils, but about 100 more are registered. With the February graduating classes the number of pupils in the High School will be increased by seventy. The classes will then be divided into two sections and every hall and corridor used as classrooms and study halls.

The new High School was built to relieve these conditions, but because of a strike of the steam fitters there is no telling when the building will be ready for occupancy. It was to have been finished February 1. This is now impossible, as no work is being done on the heating apparatus.

The steam fitters demand an increase in wages from $5.50 to $6 a day. There is talk of the plumbers joining in the strike.

—D. D. Denny, of Fairview avenue, has gone on a Western business trip.

—The Common Council will hold its next regular meeting on Monday night, February 7.

ACTIVE BIDDING FOR TRENTON BANK STOCK.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—Lively bidding marked the public sale of First National Bank and Trenton Banking Company stock offered by Charles L. Patterson at his office on West State street Wednesday. In all there were fifty-one shares of local bank stock sold and fifty shares of Standard Fire Insurance Company's stock. All the stock brought good prices.

The bank stock belonged to the estate of Julia Day. There were sixteen shares of First National and twenty-five shares of the Trenton Bank. William E. Ford, of Crosswicks, bought seven shares of the First National at 165, and F. J. Bowen, of this city, took the remainder at 163. The par value of this stock is $100.

In all there were thirty-five shares of the Trenton Bank's stock, Caleb S. Green, of this city, buying ten in one lot, at 99.5, and fifteen in another at 100. The balance, ten shares, went to James C. Tattersall, at 100. The par value of this stock is $50.

Irwin W. Rogers, secretary of the Standard Fire Insurance Company, bought in the fifty shares of stock of his company at 38. These shares belonged to the estate of Richard A. Donnelly.

MAGAZINE PUBLISHERS PROTEST POSTAL PLANS.

Washington, Jan. 28.—An error of $60,000,000 exists, according to the Association of American Magazine Publishers, in the Postoffice Department's figures on the deficit in carrying second-class mail matter. This and other mistakes were alleged in the department's figures upon the basis of which it is proposed to raise the rate for carrying magazines and periodicals through the mails, when some twenty-five leading magazine publishers appeared yesterday as representatives of the Periodical Publishers' Association before the House Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads.

Frank H. Scott, president of the Century Company, said that any increase in the rates on second-class matter would affect not only the publishers, who themselves, he said, were by no means wealthy, but the printers, paper manufacturers, advertisers, authors, artists, and the millions of readers of magazines, with whom the publishers would be compelled to adjust the increased burden laid upon them. It would result in greatly increasing the prices of magazines to subscribers, said Mr. Scott.

BAMBERGER'S
"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE"
MARKET, HALSEY & BANK STS.

Vigilance and System

Have you ever noticed how the tide of traffic at Broad and Market streets move first north and south, then east and west—without friction and without hitch?

This is admittedly one of the busiest if not THE busiest crossing in the world, and the reason things do move so smoothly and quickly is due to the eternal VIGILANCE of those in charge and to SYSTEM.

Without vigilance and without system affairs at this famous corner would be in a chaotic state constantly.

Now the management of a great store requires vigilance and system without end. VIGILANCE in the selection of the merchandise and SYSTEM in the distribution of it.

The executive heads of this establishment are busy from morning until night WATCHING, WATCHING, WATCHING—they are constantly on the alert and constantly devising NEW systems and strengthening the OLD.

While none of us are exactly perfect, and while it is but human to make mistakes SOMETIMES, we believe (and we speak advisedly) that there is LESS friction here than in most stores where a large volume of business is transacted and an ARMY of people employed.

Vigilance and system—vigilance and system—no business can exist or no individual can succeed without practicing the one and adopting the other.

Every Parlor Suite Reduced 25 Per Cent.

Over 100 Different Suites Now on the Floor to Choose From

We have done handsomely by the people of New Jersey thruout this month of January in the selling of furniture. We have saved thousands and thousands of dollars. No one has paid within 10 per cent. of the value of any piece of furniture bought during this month. Many have secured the furniture they wanted at a quarter less than it was worth, and many got things at about half price. We are getting near the end and we want to do something spectacular, at the same time profitable to you, and we have decided to offer tomorrow, Saturday, every parlor suit in the house at 25 per cent. less than the regular marked prices. This means—

A $200 Parlor Suite for $150.
A $160 Parlor Suite for $120.
A $100 Parlor Suite for $75.
A $50 Parlor Suite for $37.50.

Mind you, there is not an old parlor suite in the house! We made a clean sweep last season and have only new stock here to sell you, so that you may be sure that any suite you lay your hands on will be up-to-date style and finish, and that it will be upholstered in the newest materials, free from blemishes, free from fault. Some are very plain in outline, others are elaborately carved. Some are covered with velour, others with tapestry, others with silk plush, panne plush, damask and novelties. Gold suites are included and you can pick any one you like, no matter what the original selling price, and pay us just one-fourth less than marked prices.

Stipulation—No parlor suite bought tomorrow at the special selling discount of 25 per cent. will be taken back or exchanged, nor will they be stored for later delivery unless entirely paid for.

The selling begins immediately at the opening of the store at 8:20.

NOTE—But two days remain of the Annual January Furniture Sale, during which we marked everything in the Furniture Store at 10 per cent. less than regular, sometimes 33 1-3, sometimes 1-2, as conditions warranted. All beds, both enameled and brass, all sorts of bedding, such as mattresses, pillows, springs, couches, divans, etc., are very liberally reduced during the sale. Economical people will note the fact that the selling ends Monday night, and if they are wise they will come Saturday or Monday and buy furniture they are likely to need now or in the Springtime, and save at least 10 per cent.

Search for Gem Ends.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—The police of numerous Eastern cities have been searching several months for a $450 diamond stud belonging to R. J. Stokes, of this city, and a burglar insurance company has been aiding in the search, when Wednesday Stokes notified the police that the stud had been located in the home from which it had never departed. The house was entered last November, when a number of articles of jewelry were stolen. The stud could not be located in its accustomed place, and was supposed to have gone, too. It developed that Stokes had put the stud in a more secure hiding place just before the robbery, and forgot about it.

Women Faint at Bargain Sale.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—Several women fainted, many had narrow escapes from being injured, children were trampled upon and handbags and muffs were lost in a crowd of several hundred persons Wednesday that tried to gain admission to a "tin sale" at a South Broad street store. "It was one of the worst mix-ups I was ever in," said Patrolman Schuman, who was sent to the place with Patrolman John Kelly to keep the crowd in order.

GOLF.

An unofficial offer to hold the annual championship was received from the Esex County Country Club at the annual meeting of the New Jersey State Golf Association in New York this week. A written bid was also received from Walter E. Edge, of the Country Club of Atlantic City, but unanimous opinion among the delegates was that a more central course would be preferable.

The dates for the tourney, however, were settled at the session, June 2, 3 and 4 being the choice. This is about the time usually selected by the State body. Numerous prizes will again be in order for the championship, but there will be fewer medals, although this point is to be left largely to the discretion of the executive committee, which will also select the course.

Harry V. Keep, of Englewood, was elected to succeed himself as president. He will name his committee later on. The treasurer's report as read by Walter C. Shoup, of Englewood, showed a balance on hand of $482.32, about $7 in excess of a year ago.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS MEN'S ENTERTAINMENT

The Men's club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church held its annual entertainment in the church parlors, last night, for the benefit of the Women's Society for Christian Work. Instead of giving the usual turkey dinner, the club decided to engage a professional entertainer in the person of Charles R. Taggart, of New York, who provided descriptive piano selections, violin selections and songs. Mr. Taggert is exceedingly celever as an impersonator and he entertained his large audience for over an hour.

During a social hour which followed, refreshments were served by a committee comprising George M. Clark, Frank Langworthy, Rolland Davis and Charles Neagle. The entertainment committee comprised O. S. Rogers, William M. Stillman, Arthur L. Titsworth and Dr. O. B. Whitford. The finance committee comprised Frank J. Hubbard, Dr. O. B. Whitford and Asa F. Randolph. The club presented the Women's Society for Christian Work with $100 as its contribution toward its work, and in addition gave a carnation to each member of the women's society present. The whole affair was one of the most pleasing given at the church by the club. John D. Cottrell is the president of the club, and had general direction of the evening's entertainment.

The sketch, "The Silk Stocking," presented at Proctor's theatre this week, is one of the best seen here in a long time. A black and white silk stocking furnishes no end of amusement. Ward & Vole are two of the funniest German comedians on the stage, while Alice Davenport & Co., in a dramatic sketch, "Now," presents modern society life, and Marion & Lillian are a couple of youngsters who can dance and sing and not tire the audience. The films d'art are a big feature.

BOTTLES SHOW OCEAN CURRENT

Valuable information regarding ocean currents is obtained by means of bottles—inanimate scientific messengers that drift with the flotsam of the North Atlantic, sometimes following a straight line, some times zigzagging across the green water, at other times traveling in a semicircle, says the New York Evening Post.

Ordinary bottles they are, corked and sealed with wax or pitch. Beer, vinegar or catsup they may have contained, for there are no official bottles like those the Prince of Monaco used to throw into the sea years ago. They are dropped into the ocean by mariners, and contain forms furnished by the United States hydrograhpic office, which seeks enlightenment on all subjects dealing with the science of navigation. These bottle papers, as they are called, are printed in seven languages, and have blank spaces for the name of the vessel from which the bottle was cast and the vessel which picked it up, as well as dates and the latitude and longtitude of the starting and finishing points of the voyage.

If a man finds a bottle on the beach and follows directions, he mails the paper to the hydrographic office, whose experts trace the path followed by the bottle, delineating this path on the map which forms a part of the regular pilot chart given to navigators who furnish marine data to the office.

A star on the map marks the point at which the bottle was cast adrift; a circle the pint of recovery, and a number is attached to indicate the order in the commpanying chronological list. The drift is shown as following the shortest possible route, except in the case of bottles whose path is made to conform to a certain extent to the accepted knowledge of ocean circulation.

In equatorial and tropical regions, where trade winds prevail, the drift is westerly, all bottles finding their way to the Windward Islands, the Bahamas, or the shores of the Caribbean or the Gulg of Mexico.

North of the fortieth parallel, or, to be more explicit, north of the latitude of New York, bottles are driven by prevailing westerly winds in an easterly or east by northeast direction, going across the ocean to be cast upon the western shores of Great Britain or the coast of France. Between the two main drifts, or between the Florida Peninsula and New York, according to explanatory notes of the bottle chart, "lies a debatable region, crossed by many sailing and steamship routes, and within which in all probability are cast as many bottle papers as in other portions of the ocean. The recovery of such bottles, is, however, rare, the records of the hydrographic office furnishing but fourteen since 1888."

Confirmation of the circulatory movement was obtained through the course taken by bottle papers Nos. 122 and 145, with drifts of 3,120 and 5,380 miles in 489 and 896 days respectively, at the rate of 6.4 miles and six miles a day. No. 122 was cast loose by the German steamship Parnagua not far from Cape Finisterre, traveled down the Portugese and West African coasts to about the twentieth parallel, and then moved across in a half-circle to the Caribbean, landing on one of the West Indian Islands. No. 145 started about midway between Nova Scotia and France. The bottle took a circular course, which carried it southeast to Africa, thence westward to a point north of San Domingo.

An interesting record of a long drift is found in the bulletin of the Arctic Club of America, dated January 30. A buoy that was driven ashore on November 3, 1908, at Soeroe, Denmark, contained a notice to the effect that it had been set adrift on July 24, 1900, near Cape Bathurst, a point of Canadian territory that juts out into the Arctic Ocean.

HUNTING FROM A TREE.

I need scarcely say that while my companion, with the help of the men, was trying to secure the live cub, I was keeping a sharp lookout, and soon had the satisfaction of seeing my first wild lion, writes A. R. Dugmore in Colliers' Weekly. Not one, but the pair, attracted, evidently, by the cries of the young one, they came within three hundred yards. A finer sight I have seldom seen than those two big tawny creatures. For a minute or so they watched us, then turned and disappeared; incidentally, I may add, so did most of the men, tall trees being considered the favored retreat.

Believing that the lions would return, we selected a tree with large horizontal branches from which I hoped to be able to use the camera, and there we proposed to stay. Unfortunately, the cub soon died from its violent struggles, so that we no longer had its growling to attract the old ones.

Just as we were about to take our places we were surprised to see the old lion and two lionesses appear about 400 yards away. The wretched men in their flight made such a noise that the lions would not come nearer, so I got back again and I was equally unfortunate. All day we stayed in the tree, but nothing further occurred, and we finally decided to spend part of the night there in hopes of getting a shot.

Shortly after sunset, while we were eating our meal, the lions appeared once more. We could just distinguish them in the dim and rapidly vanishing twilight, but they were too far to fire at with any degree of certainty. In a few minutes darkness had set in and a darker night I have never seen. We sat in our uncomfortable perch in a state of great excitement, and soon we heard something approaching through the high grass; nearer and nearer it came, and the low, growling purr of the lioness added to our excitement.

I thought if I could get down to a lower branch I might be able to see a little better, and so as noiselessly as possible I got down to within about eight feet of the ground. Just as I reached this place the lioness or lion passed directly under me, but the darkness was so intense that I could see nothing, though they were probably not more than twelve or fourteen feet away. We heard them continue their way up the bed of the stream, stopping once to drink at a pool, and that was the last we heard of the lions.

About 10 o'clock the moon rose, and as we were too tired to stay any longer in our uncomfortable position we started for camp, and it was not a particularly pleasant walk, as every bush assumed the form of a lion to our overwrought imagination. We were thoroughly glad to reach camp in safety and get a good night's sleep. Not even the roars of lions could disturb our well-earned rest.

Winter Wisdom.

It is better to wear loose clothing in cold weather, because the loose dress encloses a layer of warm air, which the tight dress shuts out. Wear cork or felt socks in the boots during winter months. Cold feet may be as harmful as wet feet. Don't forget that linen sheets are very cold, whereas cotton ones are warm. Cellular sheets are also excellent, being warm but airy at the same time.

FOURTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE DAY NURSERY

The fourth anniversary of the Plainfield Day Nursery, the charity supported by the City Union of The King's Daughters, was held yesterday afternoon at the Nursery and was attended by more than one hundred men and women. Everyone brought something for the storehouse and the contributions were generous. They included four bushels of potatoes, fifty pound of sugar, seventy-five pounds of rice, one hundred packages of cereals, also jams, jellies and canned goods and about $40 in cash.

The "In His Name Circle," of which Mrs. Frederic W. Butler is the president, was in charge of the tea and reception, and was assisted by Mrs. Frank W. Jones, president of the City Union, and other officers. Mrs. A. M. Most was chairman of the committee arranging for the affair.

The Day Nursery has been doing a good work during the four years of its existence, as is shown by the fact that in that time over 14,000 children have been cared for. There is an average of between 300 and 400 or about twenty-five children a day cared for by Mrs. Emma L. Bird, the efficient matron. At present there are twelve babies under two years of age in the care of the Nursery.

During the afternoon yesterday several children delighted the guests with recitations and songs and everyone was delighted with the progress of the work.

100 CARS ORDERED; WHERE DO THEY GO?

A contract for the one hundred new trolley cars of the latest type recently authorized by the Public Service Corporation has been placed with the Cincinnati Car Company. A representative of the latter concern was in Newark yesterday completing the details of the order and getting into final shape the specifications for the new vehicles, including the time when deliveries are to be made.

No action has been taken by the operating officers of the Public Service as to the assignment of the cars when received.

Contracts have also been entered into by the Public Service for a large addition to the Marion Power Station in Jersey City. A building 78x100 feet in dimensions and 7' feet high is to be added to the present structure. The addition will provide for 18,000 kilowatts extra capacity, which is equivalent to about 24,000 horse power of current for moving the street cars or furnishing light and power.

The A. E. Sanford company is already at work on the foundation work which consists of concrete on piling and the Hedden Construction Company will erect the building of brick and steel.

GOVERNOR TO CONFER WITH STATE'S MAYORS

Governor Fort this afternoon, after a talk with Mayor Fisk, issued a call for all mayors of New Jersey to meet with him at the Assemblyman chamber, Trenton, Tuesday morning, February 4, at 11 o'clock, to discuss suggestions for the welfare of the municipalities. The matters to be considered are mainly those dwelt upon by Mayor Fisk in his recent annual message and his speech at the Merchants' dinner.

Briefly stated the topics to be considered are these: Tax rate; a debt limit; single headed departments in municipal government; a uniform system of accounting and a State auditing department for municipal accounts; appointment by the Mayor of all heads of departments whether at present elective or otherwise, with the Common Council's consent; a shorter form of municipal ballot.

The several recommendations of the commission on municipalities, as contained in the report of their investigations issued in 1908 will be thoroughly considered.

GATHERING OF M. E. FOLK

sense of the gowing fire of evangelism re-kindled upon our altar. We need to witness with our own eyes the glorious triumph of the Christ in the conversion of penitent souls.

"'Tis not a cause of slight import the Master's work demands; but what might fill an angel's heart and filled the Saviour's hands."

Rev. Charles S. Kemble, the next speaker, gave as the three needs of his church, first, more people like it has at present; secondly, larger activity, and thirdly, an inspiring peacher to do his best. He laid great stress on the importance of the people encouraging the preacher to larger and better things, to preaching eloquent sermons, to encourage him to study and reseach, to be a prophet and not a scribe. He said that if the people wanted short sermons they would get them, and in this connection he said that a friend of his declined to attend the dinner, because the meal might be worth a dollar, but it would not be like the merchants' association dinner where they had eloquent addresses. He explained that the man was a member of some other church.

"Methodist Unity" was a theme chosen by S. S. Swackhamer, and after he spent several minutes in a humorous vein, during which he had his audience convlused with laughter, he became more serious and made a strong appeal to those presnet as well as the church in general to protest against the efforts being made at Trenton to secularize the Sabbath. He hoped all would rise in indignation and enter a protest.

William J. Conroy, of Grace church, the second layman to speak, said that the three things needed by the church was first, consecrated men, secondly, consecrated women and thirdly, consecrated children. He spoke of the great part the church has in caring for the children through the Sunday school and also deplored the tendency to desecrate the Sabbath. He said that he understood that the auto garages are open here all day Sunday and that it is the most profitable for the owners. He did not know whether it was against the law or not.

The last speaker was Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, who spoke of the advantage of the church people getting together. He also referred to the fact that the Methodist church is a peculiar church, that its great progress was due to Providential leading. He spoke of the great development of the church in modern mission work, of the grand work being done by the Sunday-schools and added that he did not believe that the members half realized what is being done by the church.

Dr. Randolph said that he thought

Dr. aRndolph said that he thought the office of pastor to be one of the highest in the church, one he would not swap for the place of bishop. He said that his heart went out to all pastors, knowing their troubles, but in his opinion there was nothing that gave greater satisfaction than to be with God on the job working for His Kingdom. He concluded his remarks with words of praise for his church and the great work she is doing.

The affair was brought to an end with the singing of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," and the pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. W. F. Randolph, brother of Dr. D. B. F. Randolph.

The dinner was in charge of a committe comprising representatives from all three churches, of which Maurice E. McGrath was the efficient chairman.

OAK TREE.

Mrs. M. S. VanCourt celebrated the seventy-first anniversary of her birthday yesterday and in honor of the event there was a family reunion. There were about twenty-five members of the family present throughout the day and evening, the time being given up to a general good time. Dinner was served at noon and all remained for supper.

Arthur Gray, who has been employed by W. E. VanCourt for the past two and a half years, has taken a position with the water company, which is laying mains between Elizabeth and this place.

Mrs. J. T. Lansdale and children, who have been spending a month at Baltimore, have returned. During their absence the children have been ill, but they are now improved.

Call Rev. Mr. Crane.

The congregation of the Westminster Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, has issued a call to the Rev. Louis B. Crane, pastor of the Brainerd Presbyterian church, of Easton, Pa. The salary offered the Rev. Mr. Crane is $4,000 a year. The pulpit of Westminster Presbyterian church has been vacant since the suspension by the Elizabeth Presbytery of the Rev. Dr. Henry Elliott Mott more than a year ago.

Selecting Armory Site.

A joint session of the Board of Freeholders and military officers, as well as a member of the Assembly, was held in Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon to further the project of erecting an armory in that city. Several sites were mentioned and discussed. The freeholders favor the idea if the expense does not exceed $25,000 for a site.

HEAVENLY REST MEN MAKING THEIR PLANS

The Men's Club of the Church of the Heavenly Rest held a large and enthusiastic meeting in the parish house last night, more than fifty men being present. During a business session, B. Frank Coriell, William N. Runyon and Albert Walsh were elected honorary members.

A communication was received from Emerson E. Parvin, of this city, stating that he would give his illustrated lecture on "Ship Building" at the parish house on Thursday night, March 10. It was also announced that William Lynch, of the Northwestern Association, will give an illustrated lecture on May 12, on "Oregan the Land of the Red Apple." He is now lecturing under the auspices of the Board of Education of New York city.

The club appropriated $25 from the receipts of its last entertainment to the church. Ernest Dorflinger and William Crozier were appointed a reception committee for the next two meetings. W. W. Moore made a strong appeal to the club members in the interest of church attendance on their part and extended an invitation to all to be present at the regular services. The club now numbers ninety-six men. A social time followed.

SWEENEY IN BRAZIL; WILL RETURN SOON

William R. Sweeney, formerly of this city, but recently of Trenton, is expected to return to that city some time in March. Sweeney disappared about a year ago but it is understood that he is in Brazil. After Sweeney left Trenton his wife announced that he had gone to a santarium.

Sweeney at the time of his departure from Trenton was a central figure in numerous litigations and when he returns to Trenton, he will have to contest the ownership of a number of shares of stock of the Kline Chair Company, of that city. Shortly before Sweeney's leave-taking an injunction was issued restraining a Trenton bank from turning over these shares to Sweeney. He will also be compelled to contest several other business entaglements.

SUNDAY BASEBALL BILL WILL BE GIVEN HEARING.

Majority Leader Edge, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has fixed next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Assembly chamber, Trenton, as the time for the hearing on House bill No. 51, introduced by Mr. McCran, of Paterson, which is aimed to prevent the carrying of subterranean waters out of the State. This hearing will attract a large number of persons from Paterson, Newark and Jersey City. Mr. McCran, as the introducer of the bill, will lead the fight to have the bill favorably reported.

Another important hearing arranged by the Judiciary Committee is for Monday morning, February 7, to hear arguments for and against the Olwell bill purposing to amend the crimes act so as to allow the playing of baseball games on Sunday. A large delegation of men favorable to the bill will come down from Hudson county, and here they will meet an equally large and determined representation of ministers and church people who will argue against the liberalizing of the Sunday law in favor of baseball.

Surrpised Mrs. W. C. Squier.

A surrpise party was tendered to Mrs. Warren C. Squier, of Astor place, last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Wheeler, of Stone street. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. Squier's birthday anniversary. There were about twenty guests and all enjoyed playing games and listening to vocal and instrumental music. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Wheeler.

Declaring that it is the duty of the city government to raise good citizens and that gambling is a vice that leads many a youth to his downfall, Mayor Farner, of Burlington, Wednesday ordered the police and plain clothesmen to make a special effort to break up "crap-shooting." At the the same time the Mayor began a crusade against pool parlors that harbor minors.

Without a mother, who died a short time ago, eleven small children were found in destitute circumstances with their father on a farm in Haddon township Wednesday and the matter was called to the attention of Prosecutor Scovel in Camden. Finding that the father was unable to care financially for the large family, the prosecutor referred the case of destitution to Probation Officer White. It is likely that the children will be sent to the almshouse until the attention of the State Board of Charities and Correction can be called to the condition of affairs.

Samuel Rosenteur, dealer and jobber in woolen goods, of 22 Temple street, Paterson, was swindled in one of the oldest schemes known to the police by a stranger Wednesday afternoon. At 2:30 o'clock the stranger entered Rosenteur's place and picked out seventeen yards of woolen goods. After agreeing on a price, the stranger requested Rosenteur to send his daughter along to secure the money. The stranger took the girl to Main and Market streets, sent the child in a store to purchase candy, and then disappeared. Rosenteur says the goods are valued at $28.

FOR OPEN BARS TILL 2 A. M.

Elizabeth, Jan. 28.—Owing to the outcry that was made by Newark and New York theatre-goers from this city against its action to close saloons at midnight, Elizabeth's new Republican Excise Board has rescinded its previous ruling and extended the closing hour until 1 o'clock.

This, however, does not satisfy the Republican Mayor, who wants a further extension given to places like Turn Hall, where balls, theatrical and concert entertainments are given. The Mayor thinks on such occasions the bar should be permitted to remain open until at least 2 A. M. The Mayor says he intends to keep on agitating for the step which he thinks is only right.

Attacked by Strikers.

Bayonne, Jan. 28.—Several strikers from the shirtwaist makers in New York came to this place Wednesday night and attacked two men and a girl who were employed in a factory at 82 West Twentieth street. Those assaulted were Edgar Manning, Jacob Hoffman and Annie Stella. The New Yorkers first asked the trio if they would join the strikers and when they refused they were called "scabs" and knocked down. The attacking party then made its escape.

Aldrich Released on Bail.

Rahway, Jan. 28.—W. H. Aldrich, former manager of the Cordova plant here, who was arrested Sunday, accused of making libelous and threatening charges against Dr. John M. Randolph, was released yesterday morning under $1,000 bail furnished by Captain W. H. Clokie, of Rahway.

An Afternoon Off

It began at the breakfast table. Blifkins had come down ahead of the other members of the family and now, buried in the morning paper, he paid no attention to the noisy greetings of his two boys as they romped into the dining room. Mrs. Blifkins' "good morning" was received in silence. The family was properly subdued. Finally, perhaps ten minutes later, Blifkins noticed that his wife was speaking to him.

"Hardly a good way to start the day," Mrs. Blifkins was saying. "It's getting to be a custom. I know you're not angry or cranky, but you might as well be; the effect is the same. You'll never gain the boys' confidence that way. You never play with them. You're always too busy, thinking or working, and I can't keep Billy at home because there's nothing here to amuse him. Why don't you come home early this afternoon and get acquainted? You can live if you miss your club one afternoon."

So Blifkins went home at three o'clock. Billy, 4½ years, and Dick, two, were waiting for him on the front steps. They began to whoop like young Indians when they saw him get off the car.

"I'm going to play with you this afternoon, boys," Blifkins said. "You wait till I take off these duds and we'll have a time. We're going to get acquainted, we are."

Fifteen minutes afterward Blifkins had turned an old porch seat upside down in the back yard and was making it into a work bench for Billy and Dick. He next fetched from the basement a large tin box filled with all sorts of valuables, such as broken locks and keys, discarded buckles, bits of wire and other junk. It was a treasure box for Billy and Dick, and soon they were exploring its contents.

Just then Blifkins heard more Indian yells and turned in time to see three boys of Billy's age about to attack from the rear, over the fence.

"I won't play with you," Billy said. "I'm going to play with my papa."

"Well," said one of the boys in perfect good nature, "we're going to play with you."

Blifkins didn't desire to offend Billy's playmates. He determined to be patient. "I don't come home often in the afternoon," he said, "so I wish you'd run home now and come back to-morrow. Billy and Dick and I—"

"Maw said we could come," one of the boys said.

"But your mamma didn't know I was—"

"Yes she did. That's why she let us come. We're going to—"

Four more boys and three girls, none more than five years old, now appeared, some from the front, some from the rear. They lined up around Blifkins and stared at him much as they'd stare at a giraffe of an elephant. It's a way children have.

"Children," he said—Billy and Dick here took up their positions near their father—"children, I don't come home often in the afternoon, so I wish you'd go home now and—"

"Maw said—" one of the girls began, but Blifkins interrupted her.

"It doesn't matter what 'maw' said. This is my house and I wish you'd go home."

"We want to play with Billy," was the calm rejoinder.

"I don't want you," Billy said, sturdily supporting his father. No one was at all offended by Billy's candor.

The argument was here interrupted by the arrival of three more boys. Blifkins' backyard resembled a kindergarten. Blifkins appealed to his wife, who had come to the kitchen door.

"See here, Martha," he said. "I don't want to insult these children, but—"

"Don't worry, you can't do it," Mrs. Blifkins said. "I've tried it 50 times. I'd like to see you get rid of them."

Blifkins brought out his old speech. "Children," he said. "I don't come home often, so I wish you'd go home no wand—"

"Maw said we could come over"—in chorus.

"Well, this is my house and I think—"

"I'm going to stay," one of the five-year-olds announced, and walked over to the tin box and began to examine what was in it. Blifkins, growing angry, took the boy by one arm, and led him gently but firmly to the front of the house and shooed him off the place. When he returned another boy had stepped just across the property line so that he stood on Blink's lot and cried shrilly: "I'm going to stay here. Maw said—"

Blifkins seized him by the collar and led him to the fence.

One, a very obliging little chap, announced: "Maw and I could come, but I'll go home and take a nap and come back."

The others, realizing at last that they weren't wanted, walked away grumbling. One turned at the front steps and called: "Billy, oh, Billy! Maw said—"

"Scat," said Blifkins, and the boy ran.—Kansas City Star.

Natural Ink.

The River of Natural Ink is a natural curiosity said to exist in Algeria. It is caused by the junction of two streams, one of which drains a region strongly impregnated with iron, while the other flows from a peat-bog and holds a large quantity of gallic acid in solution. The union of these two streams causes the iron and the gallic acid to combine, and thus produces a genuine ink.

Round fire pots burn strongly through the center with a rim of half dead clinkers at the edge and when you shake the fire the middle drops out. You've noticed it. Fires built in BOYNTON Square Pots are all live coals. A shake down is an even shake. The whole fire settles. There is no waste. The fuel being equal, a square pot will develop almost twice the heat, or the same heat for about half. The square pot is our patent and can be had only in the BOYNTON furnaces. We have a dealer in your town. He will be glad to show you.

There are BOYNTON heating plants of all kinds. Ask about our Round or Sectional Boilers for Steam or Hot Water. Also Ranges.

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE COURTSHIP

"We speak of man as the wooer," says a recent writer on women, "but falling in love is really mediated by the women. By dress, behavior, coquetry, modesty, reserve, and occasional boldness she gains the attention of man and infatuates him."

Consider the predicament of the girl busy at such entertaining sport, who finds herself suddenly becoming fat. She knows by instinct that she can not infatuate long if she be fat, so to exercise and diet instanter to save the day. They may—but there is an easier way.

One can take off up to a pound a day without causing wrinkles, stomach disturbances, or the least bother. This can be done in old cases of overfatness as well as recent ones. A fine figure can be saved or a trim one regained. Simply send seventy-five cents to the Marmola Co., 988 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., or, better still, tender the same to your druggist for a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets. This elegant preparation can go with you everywhere in your satchel. Take a tablet daily; off comes the fat, nice and uniformly, from the fattest parts first.

TRESSES ABLAZE AT LODGE BAZAR.

Bayonne, Jan. 28.—As a result of getting too close to a cigar lighter at the fair of the Bayonne Lodge of Elks, in its clubhouse here, two women are minus tresses today. Incidentally, they caused a commotion at the fair, and had it not been for the prompt action of several of the men nearby their loss in tresses would probably have been even greater.

Mrs. J. W. Emple, wife of the city treasurer, was one of the victims. The other was Miss Rescher, City Collector Robert A. Gardner, together with Mr. Emple and several other men, went to the rescue.

The two women were admiring the cut glass set donated by the Jersey City lodge. It was near the cigar case, on which was a lighter.

"Isn't that punch bowl exquisite?" remarked Mrs. Emple.

"Indeed it is," replied Miss Rescher. "I would like to be the person who wins it."

"I have four chances on it," said Mrs. Emple. "I do not suppose that I will win it."

"And I have just double that number of chances," said Miss Rescher.

Both women leaned forward to get a closer view of the punch bowl. In doing so their hair touched the cigar lighter.

"Oh, your hair is afire!" exclaimed Miss Rescher.

Mrs. Emple was horrified. "And so is yours," excitedly ejaculated Mrs. Emple.

Then both women screamed. They placed their hands to their heads, and feeling their hair burning, again screamed. Mr. Emple and Mr. Gardner hurried to their assistance and beat out the fire with handkerchiefs.

WILSON DROPS FIGHT ON VREDENBURGH LAW.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—The attorney-general's office has abandoned the idea of applying to the Court of Errors and Appeals for a reargument of the proceedings under which the Vredenburgh retirement law of last winter was declared unconstitutional. It had been the intention to make the application yesterday, and with that end in view Attorney-General Edmund Wilson made a motion last week, which resulted in an order that the records be held by the secretary of State until today. The abandonement of the reargument proceedings will probably result in the remittur being sent to the Supreme Court today or tomorrow.

This action will be preliminary to the reinstatement of General Edward A. Campbell as commander of the First Brigade. The enforcement of the decrees of the Court of Errors will set aside the executive order under which he was retired last year.

No formal statement was obtainable from the attorney-general's office as to the reasons for not making the reargument application. It is generally understood, however, that after carefully reviewing the case, as well as the court decision, and the overwhelming vote by which the act was set aside, the Governor and the State's counsel concluded that nothing would be accomplished by pressing the motion for a reargument.

SUES FOR ESTATE.

Heirs Want Property Relative Left to Friends.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—Relatives who were cut off without a cent of the $20,000 estate of Miss Susan W. Freeman, of Carson's Mills, are suing in Mercer Orphans' Court because the woman left the bulk of her estate to her neighbors. John F. McKay, a grandnephew, of this city, is the caveator to the will.

It was brought out in the testimony yesterday that Miss Freeman left $4,500 to her niece, Miss Georgiana Freeman, and the remainder of her estate to Mary E. Bryant, Richard Wright, Amanda Clayton and Hattie Bucher, neighbors, who, she told Dr. George A. Sivers, her physician, had been good to her when she lived alone near Hightstown.

TO REVIEW ASSESSMENTS.

Trenton, Jan. 28.—Justice Reed in the Supreme Court yesterday allowed writs of certiorari carrying up for review the assessments levied by the State Board of Assessors upon second-class railroad property in Jersey City for the year 1909.

The writs are similar to those now pending and involving the second-class railroad property assessments of 1906, 1907 and 1908.

Probing Counterfeiter's Case.

Elizabeth, Jan. 28.—The Union County Grand Jury began yesterday an investigation of the recent raid at 232 Niles street, this city, where, it is alleged, a den of counterfeiters and thieves was unearthed by the police. The Elizabeth detectives who made the raid, together with United States secret service men, who examined the dies, smelting pots and other materials found in the place, appeared before the grand inquest and gave testimony.

TRINITY'S ENDEAVORERS BID MISSIONARY FAREWELL

More than two hundred young people, members of the Y. P. S. C. E., of Trinity Reformed, gathered last night in the Sunday school room to wish Goodspeed to Dr. Paul W. Harrison, who starts tomorrow on his long journey to Arabia, where he will enter the missionary field under the auspices of Trinity. An informal hour was spent in a cheerful interchange of cordial greetings and during the evening Dr. Harrison received a handsome watch fob and several volumes of books which he will take with him on his trip.

In addition to the books, a mail bag filled with letters written by the members was handed to him. These letters are not to be opened and read until Dr. Harrison is on the high seas and they are calculated to help while away the tedious hours of the long ocean voyage.

Preceding the presentation of the gifts a musical program of unusual excellence was given. Piano selections by Philip Meisner and duets by Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Young were heartily applauded. The rooms were handsomely decorated with American flags and a Turkish flag was draped over the platform. On introducing Fred Soper, the president of the Y. P. S. C. E., Rev. John Y. Broek spoke in eulogistic terms of the new missionary and his remarks brought forth applause. Mr. Soper called Dr. Harrison to the platform and told him of the deep sensibility the society feels at the sacrifices the doctor is going to make in leaving home for the foreign field and that he might depend upon the society for strengthening prayers during his ministrations.

Mr. Soper recited an original poem written by one of the young women, which was favorably received. Dr. Harrison made a happy response to the various tokens of love which he had received and said he hoped the pastor would some day make him a visit at his post in Arabia. Refreshments were served. The following committee had charge of the affair: Miss Mary Randolph, chairman; the Misses Elsie Dunham, Edna Dilts, Marie Hahn, Edna Cole, Minnie Hahn, Minnie Leitheuser, Harritt Randall, Mrs. M. W. Farnham, Delia Dufford, Lucy Coriell, Abbie and Edna Van Cleef, and Messrs. A. W. Dunham, Elmer Gayle, Russel Doeringer, E. R. Honeyman and Fred Soper.

ANNUAL MEETING OF OF MEN'S BIBLE CLASS

The Men's Bible Conference class, of the First Baptist church, held its annual meeting and entertainment in the lecture room of the church, last night, the affair being largely attended and very enjoyable. A business session was held first when these officers were elected: President, John G. MacLaughlin; vice-president, W. H. Matlack; secretary, Fred K. Armstrong; treasurer, Charles Conover.

The members entertained their wife and women friends and altogether the affair was a delightful one. The committee on entertainment provided an excellent program which included recitations by Miss Canfield, a talented elocutionist of New York city, who gave a number of excellent selections, and soprano solos by Mrs. Robert Giddis and Mrs. Charles T. Shreve, of the church choir. They responded to several encores. Following this entertainment there were brief addresses by members of the club, including Arthur N. Harris, W. H. Herrman, Benjamin S. Phelps, J. Henry Crane and in conclusion Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church, made a few appropriate remarks. The topic chosen for the speeches was "A Man's Job and Religion," and it was handled in an interesting manner.

Then followed a social hour and refreshments were served by a committee comprising J. Henry Crane, Robert W. Barnes and R. S. Bach.

Novelized by

FREDERICK R. TOOMBS

From the Great Play of the Same Name by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford.

Copyright, 1909, by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford.

"Then he knew you were coming?"

"Why, yes." Judith was trying hard to understand what he meant by seeking out her father's knowledge of her present mission, one which was to her decidedly unpleasant.

Wheeler was plainly impressed, and unfavorably so, at the girl's reply.

"Oh!" he ejaculated disappointedly.

The quickly thinking girl detected the significant tone of the newspaper writer's reply and hastened to explain.

"I heard my father say at dinner that he feared there would be another attack tomorrow," she said, "and I hoped through you to prevent its publication and to make the Advance apologize for what it said this morning. I don't see how your paper dares to publish such things."

"But, Judith," he answered, "we couldn't dodge a story as big as that. We had to print it. That's what we're here for."

But she was still insistent.

"Oh, of course, print the story, but I mean the insinuation all through. Why, by using such unfair means newspapers can bring discredit on any one. Mr. McHenry refused to apologize. He wouldn't even tell me who wrote it. Do you know?"

Brand gave a violent start. At first, in her present mood, he hardly dared answer the girl. With a determined effort he pulled himself together and answered her question.

"Yes, I know who wrote it."

"Who?" Judith leaned toward him, gazing intently into his eyes.

"I wrote it," he announced.

Judith started back aghast.

"You, Wheeler? Why?" she cried hysterically.

"I had no choice." He struggled to maintain his grip on himself.

"You had no choice?"

"Judith, when this Lansing Iron case first broke loose," Brand responded firmly, "I saw straight off that it was one of the slickest—well, that there was a big story in it. I didn't know your father was involved in this at first. I just followed the path, and when I saw where it was leading me I wanted to turn back because of you, but I couldn't." He stopped for a moment, then went on: "No, no. I could not stop—not—even—for—you!"

"But it isn't loyal of you," was her response. "It wasn't like you—to attack him suddenly in this way. It's almost as if you struck him from behind. And do you not see, Wheeler, that you are hurting me as much as you injure him? I am his daughter, Wheeler, and if you ruin my father, you will ruin me."

"I wrote it, Judith," he announced.

She covered her face with her hands, and her bosom heaved convulsively in her anguish.

CHAPTER II.

WHEELER BRAND gazed at the girl, and above his own misery rose his sympathy and thought for her whom he longed to comfort, for the girl of his choice, whom duty said he must cause to suffer. He yearned to take her in his arms and wipe away the tears, but he knew that she would repulse him. He throbbed with the desire to prove to her his love by assuring her that the attack on her father was ended—but his duty whispered, "No."

And to himself he repeated the "No." For he must go on, and she must endure, and the judge must pay the price.

The voice of an outraged people had spoken through the pen of Wheeler Brand, and he was one of those men strong enough to refuse to take the price of silence.

He led the girl he loved to a chair, even as she sobbed she whispered, "Wheeler, Wheeler, Wheeler," endearingly from her heart's depths. Brand looked down on her with a world of sadness in his eyes. He well knew, and the world would soon know, that those who sit in the high places must pay the penalty for sin, even as the lowliest among us who more blindly goes astray.

Judith Bartelmy had been long enough in society to learn the art of the control and the concealment of emotions under many trying circumstances. Probably in any other situation than in one where her father and the man she loved were so deeply concerned, as in the present, she would have been able to retain a larger degree of self composure. Several minutes passed before she was able to speak in evenly balanced tones.

"Wheeler," she finally said, "if any one had told me that you would or could do what you have done against my father, against my family"—her voice began to break again—"against me, I would not have believed it. And you have not told me that you will cease your attack."

Brand thought to palliate her. He seated himself on a corner of the managing editor's desk and bent toward her as she sat in a chair near him.

"Now, Judith, let me try to explain," he said entreatingly. "I think I can make you understand. You see, the Lansing Iron company owned a lot of valuable properties—ore ranges, machinery, railroad trackage, etc. If it had been managed halfway it would now be a wealth producing business, but some of our speculators downtown were trying to get hold of it to gamble with. They wanted to milk it, as the saying is, by watering it. They did have a stock market battle or two, which profited nobody but the lawyers on both sides. But they finally got it by juggling it into a receivership, which they never could have done if a United States judge had not been willing to exceed his functions. That judge was your father.

"Since the works shut down," he went on strongly, "the men are out of employment, and the gamblers have got busted because the company's gone broke. That's just what happened, and that's all I said."

"But it wasn't your facts, I tell you. It was your insinuation that was false."

"Not insinuation—interpretation."

"But it wasn't true—it wasn't true."

"Oh, yes, it was true, and more."

Judith verged on the hysterical again.

"If you loved me as you pretend to, no matter if you thought it true or not, you could not have written that article."

"Can't you see that I wasn't writing about your father, but about a United States judge who"—

She moved farther away from him.

"That's splitting hairs, Wheeler."

He walked to her side.

"Judith, please—please don't let's quarrel about this."

The girl turned to him impulsively.

"Oh, Wheeler, we were on the verge of it, weren't we?" He cast his arms around her. "You're sorry, aren't you?" She looked fondly into his face. "And you will take back that article, won't you?"

"You mustn't ask me to do that; I can't," looking at her earnestly.

"You can't?"

"No."

Judith drew away from him a step or two. She surveyed him coldly.

"Wheeler, I came here thinking only of my father, but I suddenly find myself facing a much more serious question—not what kind of a man he is, but what kind of a man are you."

Brand was deeply cut by her manner and her intonation.

"Judith, if you only knew the truth, all of it, things I can't tell you, you'd be with me heart and soul in what I'm trying to do."

He caught her in his arms again.

"Whatever I've done or whatever I may do I love you," he insisted passionately.

Judith showed equal fervor as she said:

"And you're more to me than my father, but for my sake you mustn't work against him. How could we ever be happy together if you did? You'll do this for me, Wheeler, just this? I want you to carry out your ideals and live up to your high purposes in every other way, but you must not attack him. Promise me that you'll never do it again. Won't you promise me that? And you'll retract that article you had this morning. You'll do this for me, just this?"

"Judith—it's the truth—and, knowing that, would you have me retract it?"

"Yes."

"I can't."

Judith began to take off the engagement ring Brand had given her.

"You don't mean to do that!" he cried in amazement.

"I most certainly do!"

He was almost frantic. He grasped her hand.

"I won't let you mean it. I can't let you go without your ring. You may be Judge Bartelmy's daughter, but you are going to be my wife. You've worn my ring for a month, and you must wear it forever!"

The girl passed his passionate appeal by without heeding it. She tossed back her pretty head defiantly, snatched the ring from her finger and threw it on the managing editor's desk.

"I'll not wear it again," she exclaimed resolutely, "unless—until you come to your senses." So expressing herself, she stalked majestically across the room.

"Judith!" called Brand in desperation, fearing that she was about to leave him.

"Will you do what I ask?" she queried imperiously.

"I cannot," he answered simply.

The judge's daughter tossed her head independently, caught her skirt in her hand, turned her back swiftly on Brand and walked indignantly from the room.

Wheeler Brand, dazed, heartsick and discouraged and torn by the emotions that welled within him, leaned helplessly against the desk. After all, he reasoned, what did it all matter? There were lots of evil men in the world, always had been, always would be. What harm would it do if one dishonest judge were allowed to go unmolested, even if he happened to be a United States judge? Surely there were other dishonest judges, and he could not drive all of them off the bench—no, indeed. And, moreover, this thankless task he had shouldered would if he succeeded rob him of the girl he loved. It would rob him of the love of the girl who loved him.

Then the thought of the enthusiasm that had buoyed him as he wrote the story that had exposed Judge Bartelmy came to him and clung to him. The inspiration in doing a strong man's work for the public good enthused the spirit of Wheeler Brand, captured his soul. The steady light burned once more in his eyes. He shook himself together—fastened his old time grip on himself. As for Judith, he would do his duty, and he would win her yet.

When the managing editor of the Advance re-entered his office and walked briskly toward his desk he found Wheeler Brand looking eagerly over a notebook which, quite unknown to McHenry, contained the data for an article on the Lansing Iron case even more damaging to Judge Bartelmy than the one already printed.

"Well, did you settle it?" asked McHenry.

Brand looked up and started toward the door.

"Yes, sir," he answered, and he was gone.

At this juncture Downs, the city editor, came into the managing editor's room. He addressed McHenry rapidly.

"Water main burst on Morton street; drowned seven dago kids in the basement of a tenement; mothers, scrubwomen, gone out to work and locked them in; water rising." He drew close to the desk. "Children, climbing stairs to escape, found huddled in each other's arms on top step, drowned! All but the youngest hanging on to a string of beads; must have died praying!"

The managing editor's face immediately lightened, and he pounded his desk enthusiastically.

"Good! Good! By glory, that's a dandy! That saves our lives! Now we'll have a paper tomorrow! We'll go the limit on this. Did you send a photographer?"

"Yes, sir, I did."

McHenry seized the office telephone.

"Night editor! Oh, hello! Cut three columns more out of those shavings. We've got a live one. Seven dago kids drowned. First time they ever saw water in their lives. Run three columns!" He hung up the receiver and turned to the city editor.

"Put in three leads and make it stick out like a sore thumb. And, say, put in a black faced bulletin saying the Advance will receive subscriptions for their families."

Durkin entered with a bundle of proofs.

"And, say, Downs," added McHenry, "print in bold faced type that the Advance will start the subscription with $100."

"Mr. Dupuy is downstairs," announced Durkin.

The managing editor could not suppress a sour expression which crept across his face. "Dupuy, eh?" he grunted half audibly. "Wonder what he wants around here now? He's a regular buttinski."

McHenry knew Dupuy in a business way, knew he was counsel for several of the big mercantile establishments which advertised in the Advance and that the lawyer had represented various corporations at the state capital. "Well, I suppose I'll have to see him," he finally resolved. "Show Mr. Dupuy in," he called to the boy.

"Good evening," was Dupuy's greeting to McHenry as he entered and placed his overcoat on a chair.

"Good evening, Mr. Dupuy. What can I do for you?" The visitor seated himself at the right of McHenry's desk.

"McHenry," began Dupuy decidedly,

Mr. Dupuy was downstairs.

"somebody on your paper has been making bad breaks lately, particularly the one this morning."

"What one this morning?"

"The Judge Bartelmy story, of course."

"Help!" sang out McHenry. "I've been getting that all day."

"It's no joke, McHenry," snapped Dupuy.

"It was a mistake," responded the managing editor.

"Mistake! Who was responsible for it?" leaning forward.

"Oh, it just slipped through in the rush."

"Tell that to the marines," retorted Dupuy sarcastically. He paused. "Who slipped it through?"

There was another pause.

McHenry began to assert himself.

"Excuse me, Dupuy," he asked pointedly. "But how does the Bartelmy story affect you?"

"Some of my clients have a very high regard for the judge. Your story grossly misrepresents him."

"Yes, I suppose so."

"This growing tendency to bring our judiciary into disrespect is a dangerous symptom of the unrest beneath the surface," spoke Dupuy pompously. "The federal bench is the ultimate bulwark."

McHenry laughed.

"Oh, capital in distress! Yes, I know all about that."

Dupuy stirred indignantly.

"There was no occasion for that remark," he shot forth tartly.

McHenry saw that Dupuy was very much in earnest and the management of the Advance, as he had previously known it—representatives of an insurance company—would have desired to gratify the wishes of the powerful interests behind Dupuy. So far as the new owner was concerned, the managing editor could not tell what his attitude would be in the matter, but he had received no instructions as yet to change the policy of the paper. Plainly the course of wisdom, he reasoned, would be to act toward Dupuy as he had acted in the past, when the insurance company had insisted that the paper be operated on a purely commercial basis. Yes, he would deal carefully with Dupuy—that is, with Dupuy's clients.

"It's no joke, McHenry."

"No offense meant," explained McHenry. "Well, we'll have nothing more about Bartelmy. Will that satisfy your people?"

"Thank you, McHenry. That will be eminently satisfactory both to them and to me as their legal adviser."

"All right; that settles that."

"Oh, not quite!" said Dupuy, raising his hand warningly. "There's one more point. Who was responsible for the story?"

"Oh, let's pass that!"

But Dupuy could not be turned aside. McHenry had begun to give way to him, and the lawyer intended to follow up his advantage.

"Very well; it's up to you," he said. "But I want you to realize, whatever happens, there is no personal animosity in the matter."

"What do you mean by 'whatever happens?'" asked the managing editor quickly.

The visitor was a living picture of complacency.

"How much advertising did you get from our concern last year?"

The managing editor began to discern more clearly the hidden club in Dupuy's words and demands.

"Oh, I can't say as to that."

"About $30,000 worth, wasn't it?"

"Yes, I should think so," admitted McHenry.

"Well, there's the answer," exclaimed Dupuy triumphantly. "As a matter of business, McHenry, if you are not friendly to my clients, why, you can hardly expect them to be friendly to you, and I shall explain to the new proprietor of the Advance, Mr. Nolan, the reasons for the sudden drop in his advertising. He is a rich man, and he probably will not like to know that he is in the way of losing a good deal of money to further a radical propaganda which he probably abhors. Come, McHenry, for your own sake be reasonable. Who wrote the story? Surely you are not going to consider a mere reporter in a matter so vital to our interests. Who was it?"

McHenry surrendered.

"A young fellow named Wheeler Brand."

Dupuy rose and towered above McHenry as he sat at his desk.

THE ABSTEMIOUS RABBIT.

A curious characteristic of animal life on the deserts of the Southwest was recently commented upon by a correspondent of the Los Angeles Times, who has discovered that rabbits, quail, squirrels, deer, antelope, the mountain sheep, and any number of reptiles and insects live at great distance from any visible water. Most remarkable is the way the hare or jackrabbit goes without water, without a particle of green food in sight for leagues, says Youth's Companion.

You find him happy and fat, spending the day under a scrap of bush that makes little more shade than a fishnet. His skin is as porous as a piece of buckskin, and the heat is enough to evaporate every drop of blood in his body, if it were so much blood in a bag of skin. And all the time, too, he is evaporating water through his lungs by his breath the same as you do. Yet there he will sit all day until evening, when he will play for miles over the still fiery plain and run the sun a race to bed.

Then he may spend half the night dodging coyotes or hunting an alfalfa patch, to find himself fenced out, when he will be ready to run the sun another race, out of bed, apparently for pure fun. And when you bag him you will find him just as full of blood as the thoroughbred Belgian hare of a few years ago, that used to sit in his cage on exhibition and drink water and eat green feed every few minutes.

Has the reader ever seen a jackrabbit drink? I believe that in the thirty-three years I have been in California I have seen about as many jack-rabbits as any one and watched them closely, and I never yet saw one touch water. I have camped on the desert for days at the only water in many leagues, with rabbits about everywhere, but not one of them came to the spring. I have examined the margins of many a water hole on the same kind of ground, yet never found a track of one in the mud beyond where the grass grew.

Last summer we had a raid of rabbits beyond all conception. They were so bold they would come in before sundown. Our ditches had the only water for miles, but never a rabbit could be seen drinking. I was irrigating sixty acres alone, and was up at daylight and on the ground again till dark, when rabbits by the dozen were trying to get at the alfalfa, but for the three months of extreme heat the rabbits poured in on us from the dry hills I never saw one touch the water.

The cottontail is so rare on the drier parts of the desert that it is difficult to say with exactness what he does or does not do. But some thirty years ago, on the road from San Diego to El Cajon, some twelve miles, one could count a thousand any morning or evening in making the trip by wagon. Most of the way was miles from any spring, and at the spring never could a cottontail be seen drinking.

There was plenty of cactus, but I never saw one touch it, and in certain places it would have been eaten clean off in a week if they had eaten it. With this exception there was practically no green feed in summer or fall except the chaparral bushes, which they did not eat so far as one could see.

All old settlers can remember having seen the same thing in hundreds of places.

AN INTELLIGENT ECHO.

"Echoes," remarked the great traveler, "are queer things. They're queer for two reasons—their cause and the vast difference in their sounds. Science has explained why there are echoes, but it can't tell why one should reverberate with bass tones in response to a shrill tenor yell, while another reverses this or responds naturally."

"I reckon, you've heard a number o' echoes?" hazarded the young man, whose furthest trip from home was a distance of thirty-nine and a half miles.

"Rather! I recall one in Switzerland; the echo rolled for just four seconds—no more, no less. Then there's one in the Pyrenees that jumps six times, first loud and harsh, then low and soft, then loud again, and so on. There's one in the western part of Germany that holds a full sentence of seven words before releasing a sound, thus rivalling a certain echo in Afghanistan, which doesn't repeat until a minute and a half have elapsed."

"I'd like to hear a few of 'em," said the homestaying chap with a fine show of wistfulness.

"Of course you would," responded the traveler encouragingly. "There are few things in the world more interesting than a good echo."

"You're right," said the other thoughtfully. "I ain't even been but a few miles frome home, but I'v heard one o' the strangest echoes that ever was anywhere.

"Up in the little range yonder is a ravine. If you stand at one end of it and yell 'Jones!' the echo comes back, 'Jones? Jones? What Jones?'"

The great traveler looked musingly into space and was silent.—Richmond News-Leader.

Give It Up.

"What do these bachelor girls do when motoring?"

"What do you mean?"

"Do they crawl under the automobile?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

STREET FAKER'S LITTLE GAME.

"Now, gentleman," said the street faker, after he had finished the preliminary argument and promised to do the card trick later, reports The Kansas City Times, "I am putting these stones out today solely for advertising purposes. We are making an appeal to wise men. If there are any pikers or rubes in the crowd I won't detain them longer.

"As I told you before, these stones are the genuine Hot Springs diamonds. They are cut like diamonds, look like diamonds and shine like diamonds. The one-carat stone will cost you twenty-five cents and every purchaser will receive as a present one of the half-carat stones. A present, mark you—one of the half-carat Hot Springs diamonds absolutely free!"

The street faker paused a moment. There was a good crowd around him, but the crowd was timid.

"I'm not out here to beg you to take these goods," the faker continued, "I thought I was addressing intelligence. Who will be the first man?"

The faker gave the cue and a man pushed through the crowd. He laid down a dollar, took the stones and started to leave.

"Just a moment, stranger," yelled the faker. "You forget your change!"

"So I did," said the other, as he accepted seventy-five cents and walked away.

"Twenty-five cents is the advertising price," said the faker, as he got a new start. "Twenty-five cents, I don't want to short change anybody. Just a quarter of a dollar is all I want and you get the two Hot Springs diamonds."

Then the crowd, one by one, began to loosen, and within about ten minutes the faker had sold something like $4 worth of the glass that was cut like diamonds, looked like diamonds and shone like diamonds.

"It's this way," he said to an old friend. "The first impression the Yazoos always have is that I'm going to trim 'em for more than a quarter. They think I might pick their pockets or short-change them in the space of a second. When they don't come around quick I give my partner the office and then he braces through and lays down a dollar bill. Calling him back for his change is my stall to the crowd that I'm on the level. Any of 'em will fall for a quarter if they're sure that's all it will cost them; so after I pull that little trick all the good suckers are sure to get across with their money."

LOVE'S TRAGEDY.

"Daughter," said Stoxanbons, an anxious tone coming into his voice, as he led his only child to a seat, relates an exchange, "tell me, was not young Seekem here last night?"

"He was father. Why do you ask?"

"Words passed between you?"

"Yes, father. A mere spat, hardly a quarrel. Why do you ask? Has anything happened?"

The expression of alarm on the girl's face deepened. "Yes, he proposed," she answered quickly. "Oh, father, has anything happened? For mercy's sake, don't keep me in suspense! If he has—"

"What reply made you daughter, to this proposal? Did you accept?"

The girl moaned. "No, father, I did not. I did not feel that I could in justice to him. But why torture me thus? Has his body been—"

The parent's face hardened. "Tell me!" he persisted, "did you give him any encouragement?"

"Oh, I dont know, I don't know!" murmured the girl, distressed. "Has he drowned himself—"

"You refused him, absolutely and positively?"

The girl shuddered. "Heaven help me," she said, "I did! He threatened to end it all; but I didn't believe he would. And so this is the result! Oh, isn't it awful!"

"It is," assented the father. "I suspected that you had finally dismissed him when the news of what he had done came to me today."

"Father," murmured the unhappy girl, "shall I be held to account for this awful thing?"

"I think not. You weren't obliged to marry him just because he asked you."

"But tell me, father, what has happened? Tell me! I have strength to bear it!"

"He has gone to work,' said the old man, as he turned away.

HAUTEVILLE HOUSE.

Victor Hugo's Home While He Was In Exile at Guernsey.

Hauteville House, in St. Peter Port, Guernsey, Victor Hugo's home while in exile, remains exactly as he left it. It is held by his descendants. Victor Hugo's character is written on the walls and ceilings of every room in the house. Each is distinctive and filled with priceless pictures, tapestries and furniture.

The dining room is "papered" with Dutch delft ware, and in a recess is a saltcellar made by a pupil of Michelangelo valued at $1,000. The study is a bare and inconvenient room. It commands magnificent views of Sark, Herm, Jethou, Castle Cornet and the harbor and leads into a small room used by the novelist as a rest and sleeping chamber, lined with volumes bearing the marks of his own use.

Not the least interesting of the features are the correspondent points out, the mottoes and aphorisms written up in unexpected places. "Life Is an Exile" is inscribed on the door of the dining room; on the bed prepared for Garibaldi (which was never occupied) one may read, "Nox, Mors, Lux;" in the oak gallery are three chairs inscribed "Pater," "Mater," "Filius," and underneath "Filius" is written "Amatus Amat."

In the red drawing room and other splendid apartments are tables that belonged to Charles II., a bedstead of Francis I. and a fire screen worked by Mme. Pompadour, a white and gold dessert service once the property of Louis Philippe.—Sunday School Chronicle.

NORWAY WATCH BOYS.

They Sit In Tall Sentry Boxes on the Lookout For Fish.

It is common enough to see a boy watching cattle to keep them from straying, and in days not so very long gone by it was no unusual thing for a boy to be set to keep the birds off the crops. But a watch boy whose duty it is to keep a lookout for a school of fish and who sits in a sentry box set upon stilts is not such an everyday sight.

This particular kind of watch boy is Norwegian, the scene of his labors being the shores of some fiord of his native land.

His little sentry box is made of wood and perched high upon posts. Here the lad sits, gazing out across the arm of the sea, using his keen eyes for the benefit of the farmers who are depending upon him to give the alarm when a school of fish shall appear. They work contentedly enough in their fields, secure in the belief that their watch boy will let them know when it is time to reap a harvest from the sea instead of from the land.

When the signal is given they leave their work, throw their big nets over their shoulders and hurry off to their boats.

Sentinel boxes similar to those employed in Norway were in use among the fishermen on the shores of the Mediterranean, and it is supposed that the vikings brought back with them from some of their piratical raids the idea that has been put in practice ever since.—Youth's Companion.

Analysis.

There was once a young man who was paying court to three different beautiful damsels. Each was fair, each was sweet, each was charming. So much of a triplicate similarity did they have that he did not know how to choose between them. So he went to a wise old man and laid his troubles before him.

"Is there a clock at each house?" asked the wise old man.

"There is."

"And what does Esperalda say when the clock strikes 11?"

"She says the clock is slow."

"What does Eulalie say?"

"She says the clock is just right."

"And what does Evangeline say?"

"She always says the clock is fast."

"My son, there is no need for further evidence. Evangeline is the one that really loves you."—Judge.

Burglar Medicine.

"A society woman once asked me what she should do if a burglar were to get into her room and awaken her from sleep," said a former police captain. "I told her to do nothing except sit up in bed and squeal for help at the top of her lungs. That's the medicine for Mr. Burglar. Not one of the gentry in 10,000 will do aught save run like a deer when a woman begins to yell. The sure enough professional will not harm anybody unless cornered, and to shoot is the last thing he contemplates in his philosophy. An amateur loses his head and uses his gun, but a regular—never."—Baltimore American.

Sarcastic.

A pompous looking lawyer once chartered a hansom cab, and on reaching his destination he duly gave his driver the shilling required by law.

The driver looked at the coin and bit his lip. Then in the most courteous manner he said: "Do step in again, sir. I could ha' druv ye a yard or two farther for this 'ere."—London Fun.

CHARITY CENTRALIZATION

Conference Held by Local Philanthropic Association Representatives.

A PLAN FOR CO-OPERATION.

Committee of Five Appointed to Issue Call for Meeting of All Heads of Various Charitable Institutions.

Representatives of several charitable organizations of the city held a conference with Mayor Charles J. Fisk in his office, last night, the purpose being to decide upon plans for bringing all charities of the city under one common head and conducting the same on a systematic basis.

The conference resulted in the adoption of this resolution:

"That the Mayor be requested to appoint a committee of five to assemble representatives of all the various agencies for social betterment and relief with a view to appointing a general registrar and promoting effective co-operation in the conduct of such work. It is understood that all the churches and private benevolent and fraternal organizations will be invited to take part."

In this connection the Mayor appointed Julius E. Erickson, Hugh F. Fox, Henry L. DeForest, Duncan W. Taylor and Rev. George A. Warner as such committee. It will be the object of this committee to get in touch with every society and lodge in the city and borough with a view to securing the greatest co-operation possible in the dispensing of charity.

Not all the various charities were represented last night, but there was a sufficient number to make a good start. Among those attending the conference were Miss Holly, agent for the Oragnized Aid; Miss Georgianna Smith and Miss Mebelle C. Phillips, of the Anti-Tuberculosis League of Plainfield and North Plainfield; Miss Harriett Mattison, of the Board of Health; Julius E. Erickson, George P. Mellick, Henry L. DeForest, William M. Wherry, Jr., Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Leon R. Thurlow, Councilmen Duncan W. Taylor and Frederic E. Mygatt, Hugh F. Fox, William S. Tyler and Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

At the outset Mr. Fisk outlined the plans drafted in his annual message for conducting local charities. He said that at present about $50,000 is raised annually for all charitable purposes in the city. This is raised every year by the same people. He declared he did no know of a place where people were more charitably inclined than in Plainfield, but the funds are not always expended judiciously. There are often times when charity is duplicated by the Charity Organized Aid and various churches. The Mayor enumerated the various charities in the city, ways and means, as taken from his message. He then invited Mr. Fox to speak on the subject and offer such suggestions as might occur to him in connection with the question of charity.

Mr. Fox said that he did not think it would be wise to "pool" all charitable efforts in the city and feed the deserving from one fund, he was not sure that such a scheme would be feasible, but he believed that the community would measure up to any well devised plan.

He suggested that all undesignated sums be divided equally among local charties. He cited the fact that there is now between 20,000 and 30,000 people in Plainfield and North Plainfield and yet it is safe to say that not more than one thousand are regular contributors to charity. He thought it possible to hit upon a plan for the development of the social welfare of the people.

In this connection he referred to the medical inspection now required in the public schools, adding that these inspections often lead to the discovery of some disease or affliction aniong children that requires more extended treatment. In this case he said it might be well for the city to stand such expense, provided the parents are unable to pay for the treatment, and thus prevent a greater cost in later years.

This brought Mr. Fox up to the point of suggesting ways and means to keep a complete and accurate record of every case of charity in the city. It was shown that the hospital keeps a record of the "pay" and "non pay" patients treated, but that someone is needed to look after the business end of the work. It was also shown that in many cases there are people who don't like to acquaint the Charity Oraganized Aid with all the details of charity work under their supervision.

Then the idea of a "central bureau" for information in charity work was presented. It was shown that the various organizations keep records, but in the aggregate there are deficiencies and it is to meet

MAYOR'S CABINET MEETS

Line Rights Along Greenbrook Referred to County Attorney for Opinion.

ABOUT THE SANITARY CODE.

To Prevent Expectorating on Trolley Cars—Hear a Complaint Against Trolley Methods.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk and his cabinet met yesterday afternoon and discussed several questions of more or less importance, including that of defining the banks of Green brook, which was brought up at a previous session. A communication was received from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh in which he gave his opinion in the matter.

According to Mr. Marsh, no permit may be given for the erection of a building along the banks of the brook if it should in any way obstruct the course of the water. If the walls along the brook have been in position more than twenty years, that fact alone gives the abutting property-owners definite rights; otherwise it does not.

It was decided by Mr. Fisk to refer the matter to County Attorney W. R. Codington for an opinion as to county line rights. Nothing will be done until his opinion is received.

One of the most important matters discussed was that relative to enforcing the sanitary code concerning the prevention of spitting in trolley cars or public places. This section was read and a copy was given Chief of Police P. S. Kiely with instructions to see that it is enforced strictly. The code provides that any person or persons who shall violate the law shall, upon conviction, be punished by a fine not less than $2 nor greater than $100. Chief Kiely has been instructed to see that violators of the code are brought before the court.

There were several other matters discussed, but no definite action was taken at this time.

Mayor Fisk read a communication from the Public Service Corporation in reference to a complaint made to him by Arthur Murphy, relative to what he considered an injustice in giving out transfers. Mr. Murphy claimed that he boarded an Arlington avenue car on Somerset street, near Front, wishing to transfer to the Netherwood car at the Watchung avenue stand. The conductor refused to give him a transfer claiming that it was against the rules of the company to issue a transfer from his line on Front street to another city line. The argument seemed to resolve itself into a question as to whether Mr. Murphy boarded the car on Somerset street about forty feet from Front street.

The result was that he paid two fares in going from Front and Somerset street to Putnam avenue and Webster place. The P. S. C., in reply informed the Mayor that the conductor followed the company rules and that he was within his rights.

MR. AND MRS. WALTER EMMONS GIVE A SALAMAGUNDI PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Emmons, of 146 Somerset street, entertained a number of friends at their home last night at a Salamagundi party. At the conclusion of play it was announced that first and second honors were won by Miss Alice Bonwell, Mrs. A. B. Cole, A. B. Cole, James Andrews, Miss Sadie Line and Samuel Tevener.

An amusing incident was the showering of a couple with confetti, in anticipation of their engagement, announcement of which will be made within a short time. During the evening refreshments were served, after which the happy affair terminated.

ENTERTAINS CHOIR.

Miss Alice Carroll, organist at Grace M. E. chuch, entertained the members and friends of the choir at a Salagemundi party at her home on Westervelt avenue last night. It was a delightful affair and the guests had a merry time in playing games of numerous varieties. During the evening a duet was rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Edward D. Young and solos by Mrs. Young and Miss Winifred Carroll. Thirty guests were present.

PRINTERS' ANNUAL BALL

Local Typographical Union's Dance Attended by Several Hundred.

MANY FROM OTHER TOWNS.

C. W. Francisco Starts the Festivities—Suhr's Orchestra Furnishes the Music—At Saengerbund Hall.

Plainfield Typographical Union, No. 399, gave the first ball in its history last night in Saengerbund Hall, North Plainfield, and if the attendance can be used as a criterion of the future of this organization it is rosy. More than three hundred couples danced to the music of Suhr's Imperial orchestra and the festivities were kept up until about half-past two this morning.

Representatives from other unions were present from Newark, New Brunswick, Somerville, Bound Brook, Elizabeth and New York and they all voted the ball one of the finest affairs of the season. An unique program was commented upon as a novelty. Promptly at 9 o'clock Chairman Clarence Francisco started the ball with a two-step and from then on it was one merry round of pleasure for the participants. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the night. Refreshments were served during the evening.

The union will entertain the New Jersey State Printer League in this city on the third Sunday in April at which time arrangements will probably be made for an excursion to take place some time during the summer. Financially the ball was a great success and the union is to be congratulated.

The committee in charge of the ball were: C. W. Francisco, chairman; M. A. Nichols and Frazee Charlemagne Putnam. The officers are: President, Robert Emmett Scott; vice-president, C. A. Nichols; secretary-treasurer, H. W. Thomas, and sergeant-at-arms, C. W. Francisco.

MRS. JACOB BLIMM, SR., GIVEN SURPRISE PARTY ON BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. Jacob Blimm, Sr., was given an agreeable surprise party at her home in the New Madison, last night, in honor of the sixty-sixth anniversary of her birthday. The affair was arranged by her daughters and attended by the immediate relatives and friends to the number of about twenty.

Progressive euchre was played, honors being awarded to Mrs. Margaret Sweeny, George Mehl and Geo. O. Strayer. The company also enjoyed vocal and instrumental selections, after which refreshments were served. Mrs. Blimm receiver a number of presents and a postal card shower.

Papers on Mission Work.

Two papers were presented at the meeting of the Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert W. Barnes, of Mountain avenue. Miss Helen Armstrong gave an interesting account of mission work among the negroes in America and Miss May S. Shreve in a paper on "Labrador" told of the work of Dr. Witfred Greenfell, the medical missionary, who has devoted his life to the care of teh inhabitants of the Labrador coast, and who has interested multitudes in his noble philanthropy. A devotional service led by Mrs. Robbin Brown preceded the paper.

Employes Annual Dance.

The employes of A. E. Force & Co. have issued invitations for their annual dance to be held on Wednesday night, February 2. They have planned to make this the most popular event of the kind yet held by them. The invitations are limited. The event is being looked forward to with much interest and the committee is working hard to make it a success. Lunch will be served at 11 o'clock in the large dining-room, while speeches and songs will be an added feature.

Will Take Up Hack Ordinance.

The Common Council will hold a special meeting Wednesday night to take up the proposed new hack ordinance. The meeting is called for that one purpose alone, it being the desire of the members to get the ordinance in shape for adoption at the February meeting.

Fined Three Dollars.

William Jeroloman was arrested on Somerset street last night charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. In court this morning Recorder Dolliver fined him three dollars.

Master William Moore Dies.

William Moore, the five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Moore, of 510 Watchung avenue, died this morning. Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

AUTO RUNS AMUCK ON GROVE STREET

A series of snorts and chug-chugs exploded by James F. Parker's automobile, while being driven through Grove street by Mr. Parker's chauffeur, George Giddes, made a big commotion on that thoroughfare yesterday afternoon. The machine was traveling toward West Front street, when the slushy roadway caused the machine to become unmanageable.

Chauffeur Giddes lost control of the steering apparatus and the auto skidded, jumped over the curb, and bolted across the lawn of Charles Mathews' property, situated on the corner of Grove street and Prospect place. The auto did not stop until it cleared the lawn and reached the gutter on the Prospect place side of the Mathews' property.

Considerable damage resulted to the front of the auto but Giddes escaped unhurt. The auto was towed to Barfuss' garage on Somerset street for repairs.

SERIES OF SERMONS ON EPISTLE TO THE ROMANS

Rev. Charles S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, announces a series of Sunday morning sermons on the "Epistle to the Romans," the study of which, he asserts, emancipated Luther from spiritual slavery in the sixteenth century and inaugurated the Reformation and in the eighteenth century proved equally efficacious in awakening John Wesley, and through him English Protestantism, from the dead deism of that day to an evangelical fervor that still burns in millions of hearts.

Mr. Kemble believes the epistle to be big with potency to stir many more lives today if its message is thoroughly mastered, and he intends to unlock some of its mysteries to his people if they will lend him their intelligent co-operation.

DOANE HAS EXCITING VISIT TO PASSAIC

Fire Chief T. O. Doane, while on a visit to Passaic Thursday, for the purpose of giving information to the officials of that city, relative to the reorganized Passaic department, figured in an exciting runaway, but luckily he escaped injury.

While making a tour of the city, Chief Doane occupied a seat in Chief Bowker's runabout. While crossing the Passaic river bridge a clip in one of the shafts of the vehicle broke and frightened the animal. The two officials were carried across the bridge at a breakneck rate of speed and at the end the two chiefs were dumped into a pile of barrels. The horse, which is one of the prize animals in the Passaic department, was considerably cut.

The thrills of the runaway, however, did not prevent Chief Doane from handing out some valuable pointers to the Passaic officials. In addition to the local chief the consultation board was made up of Chief Conway, of Jersey City; Chief Ashley, of Newark; Mayor Burd W. Spencer, and the members of the Passaic Councilmanic committee.

During the day the visitors were entertained at General Spencer's home at dinner. A conference was held at which the four chiefs combined their ideas and their recommendations will be presented to the Common Council of that city, and it is possible that a department on the lines of the local system will be adopted.

On his visit to Passaic Chief Doane was warmly greeted by Assistant Chief Walter Gibson, who is a former Plainfield boy.

Will Give First Entertainment.

The first entertainment under the auspices of the Young People's Society of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will be held at the parish house, Tuesday night. Mrs. Josephine Borden will be in charge and it will be of a dramatic nature. There will be three sketches, concluding with a living album, in which William Ochiltree will be the star. There will also be comic songs by David Sutton, violin and piano selections and dancing.

Mrs. Andrew Suydam Fritts.

Lillian Richards, wife of Dr. Andrew Suydam Fritts, died late last night at her home in Binghamton, N. Y., of pneumonia. She was ill about a week. The funeral will be held from the late home in Binghamton, tomorrow afternoon and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery, this city, on Monday.

CENTURY MARK HIS GOAL

Robert Lowrie, of Dunellen, is Ninety-seven Years Old Next Tuesday.

NEVER "BROKE" IN HIS LIFE.

Settled at New Market in 1832, and Has Voted At Nineteen Presidential Elections—Native of Scotland.

When the clocks strike the hour of midnight on Monday night, Robert Lowrie, Dunellen's oldest resident, as well as one of New Jersey's oldest citizens, will have entered upon the ninety-eighth year of his career. Although Mr. Lowrie is enjoying excellent health for a person of his great age, his approach to the century mark will not be marked by any celebration. He has five living children, fourteen grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren, a sufficient number for a good sized birthday soiree—but as he told a reporter—in a three-hour chat the other afternoon, he "never did believe in such rackets," so the relatives of Mr. Lowrie will comply with the octogenarian's wishes.

Mr. Lowrie has two more years to make the century goal and he entertains strong hopes that his life will be spared until the one hundredth milestone is reached.

A keen memory enables Mr. Lowrie to tell of the youthful changes made by Father Time in the flight of years and during his life he has noted some remarkable transformations in the swift march of progress. He remembers the ante-railroad era in the early days and the excitement and curiosity of the residents of this section when the first train of steam cars traveled over the Jersey Central; and he also recalls the days of the old stage coach passenger and mail route when Dunellen was a stopping point between New York and Philadelphia.

He feels especial pride in the fact that he voted in nineteen presidential elections. He graduated from the old Whig school into the Republican party and has always voted the G. O. P. ticket.

Only at the last November election he was among the first to cast his vote at the Dunellen polls. Party workers suggested to him that he ride to the polling place in a carriage but he stoutly refused this proffered assistance, and insisted on walking.

As he emerged from the ballot booth and deposited his ballot he exclaimed to the election officials, accompanied by a vigorous stamp of his cane on the floor:

"Well here goes another ticket in for the Grand Old Pary of Lincoln."

During his career Mr. Lowrie was thrifty and saving and he accumulated considerable valuable property which he now owns. At this time it is his proud boast, "I always had money and never knew what it was to be without a dollar."

Born at Stirlingshire, Scotland, February 1, 1913, Mr. Lowrie came to America when a young man of nineteen in company with his brothers, James and George Lowrie, who also lived to ripe old ages, the former dying at 86 years, and George at 98 years of age. The trip was made across the Atlantic in an old fashioned sailing vessel and it took the craft nearly three months to make the voyage.

Four days after his arrival in New York Mr. Lowrie found himself at New Market, and it was in that village and Dunellen that he has spent all his days. Mr. Lowrie's description of his trip to New Market from New York seventy-eight years ago was an interesting narrative.

Accompanied by John Wilson, a sailor, who deserted the ship when it reached New York, the pair walked to Paterson. After remaining in the Silk City over night he decided

LAYMEN PLEDGE THEMSELVES TO CONTRIBUTE $25,000 FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS IN ONE YEAR

State Senator Ackerman Introduces Resolution Which is Quickly Adopted at the Laymen's Forward Movement Mass Meeting.

When Judge William N. Runyon lifted up his splendid voice to lead in the singing of the hymn "Blest be the Tie That Binds," last night, at the meeting of the Laymens' Missionary Movement, more than three hundred representative men of the evangelical churches were present and joined with vigor in the singing. The meeting was held in the auditorium of the First M. E. church and was presided over by Charles W. McCutchen, who made the opening speech and introduced the speakers. A resolution was introduced by State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, which was unanimouhly adopted. Music was furnished by a quartet composed of A. H. Osmun, B. F. Tallamy, George H. Smith and Thomas McDonald.

Mr. McCutchen in his speech said in referring to the recent huge meeting in New York that the sight of so many men combined in the work of sending the gospel to the multitudes which have not yet heard of Christ was an inspiring sight to him and those who were there. He characterized the movement as the holiest enterprise ever undertaken. It means that the depths of human hearts have been roused to such an extent that it will not cease until the world has been evangelized and it will happen in our time.

This result is no more impossible than that the great Eastern nation (Japan) was born in a day. It only needs men and money. When Abraham Lincoln sent out his call for 75,000 men a million responded to save an imperilled nation. Is it too much to ask the same response to save the nations of the earth for Christ?

Silas H. McBee, who followed Mr. McCutchen said in part that in the town of Greensboro, N. C., in a recent meeting of laymen 1,556 men of the total population of 10,000 had registered as willing to uphold the movement now going on for the evangelization of the 900,000,000 people who have never heard of Christ. This is the largest proportion of any convention to register with the single exception of the New York meeting.

In Canada the movement has made splendid strides toward the figure set by the laymen of that country. In Toronto alone they have nearly reached in three years the goal set for five years and have raised their subscriptions to foreign missions from $140,000 to $370,000, and the individual offerings average nearly $5 per year.

Mr. McBee said that while in San Francisco during the recent celebration he had the pleasure of meeting Admiral Uriu, of the Japanese navy, who is a Congregationalist and a fighting Christian. Admiral Uriu said that what his people needed was not denominationalism, but Christ. He was enthusiastically in favor of the Laymen's Movement and said he anticipated the day when all Japan would acknowledge the sovereignty of Christ.

Mr. McBee further said that because they were laymen they could work together without involving the churches as they were not officers.

Mr. McBee asked the audience to compare these figures with a table exhibited near the pulpit, which showed the contributions of the various local churches, a copy of which will be found below. He also said that while this country had but 2,000 missionaries in the field we had 140,000 ministers at home and wanted to know if the men of this city thought that fair to the unconverted. We are simply asking you to share the light you have with the 900,000,000 souls who have no light. He suggested that a committee be appointed among the laymen in each church to see that every man in the church be given an opportunity to follow Christ and proclaim Him.

E. T. Colton, who spoke on the opportunities of the churchmen to help in the work of Gospel spreading roused the audience to enthusiasm by his eloquent appeal for the heathen nations and said that we western people were largely to blame for the vices now running unrestrained throughout the Far East American saloons backed up by American breweries were one cause of the degradation and the brothels were imported ideas in China.

Commercial supremacy is what these nations are looking for and we are doing our best to help that feeling along by introducing our own methods of amassing fortunes no matter how we get them. In exporting our products we have also introduced all the vices which a so-called Christian nation can devise. Frochow avenue in Shanghai has the "great white way" beaten a mile, according to Mr. Colton, who says that the whole thoroughfare is lined with gambling palaces, dance halls and brothels. He told the story of a Chinaman who lived some two hundred miles up country, and who wished his son to receive the education which the country districts did not afford so he brought the boy to Shanghai. Hand in hand they walked through the streets of the cosmopolitan city looking for a proper place in which to lodge the lad. His impressions of the houses visited were discouraging, so much so that he was minded to return to his home. However, he heard of the Christian mission in the city and there found the refuge and help he desired and there he left his son to the care of those who were willing to lead him to righteousness and learning.

There is great moral restraint in their own religion, but this Chinaman had noticed that there was something more than restraint in the lives of the Christians who were working among his people and this was what he wanted for his son. It is our duty to show these people that our worship of Christ is not a mockery and we must, if we would follow the Master's command take up the teaching of Christ on the world's scale.

Much is heard of attempting to keep out undesirable aliens from this country, but do you know that most of the undesirable things which have come to this country were brought here by Americans? It is so. Our students in Germany brought back with them rationalism. The knowledge of the underworld of France and the literature of that country came here in like manner and I might say that that is the case with most of the evil which has been copied from abroad.

Mohammedanism and Heathenism must eventually succumb to the onward march of Christianity for it is Christ's purpose to have His name known to all the world. I have a strong presentiment of what will happen in the event of the discontinuance of the forward Christian Missionary movement. I ask you to treat Christ right.

At the conclusion of Mr. Colton's speech Senator Ackerman arose and offered the following resolution:

Be it resolved:

First. That as men representing the evangelical churches of this community, we hereby express our appreciation of the instructive and inspiring addresses to which we have listened and record our deepened conviction of the responsibility which rests on this generation to extend as far as possible to all non-Christians now living in every land, the knowledge of the ever living Christ.

Second. That we cordially endorse the Laymen's Missionary Movement as a means of arousing the men of America to their missionary obligation and privilege.

Third. That we suggest that in every local church a strong missionary committee of men be formed to co-operate with the minister in organizing and carrying forward a personal canvas with the purpose of inducing every member to become a regular and worthy supporter of the missionary work of his own church.

Fourth. That we pledge ourselves and call upon all Christian men of this community to support foreign missions by study, systematic giving and prayer.

Fifth. That we recommend to the churches of this community that the goal of their missionary giving for 1910 be fixed at not less than $25,000, and that the amount be raised per capita as evenly as practicable so that it will be shown to be a spontaneous and general Christian movement.

Sixth. That the committee which called this meeting be continued, with instructions to co-operate with the local churches in carrying out the recommendations of this convention.

The figures representing the membership of the various evangelical churches and their contributions to foreign missions during the past year as displayed on the table mentioned are as follows: Total member-

NO-SEAT-NO-FARE ACT DISCUSSED AT TRENTON

Trenton, Jan. 29.—The provisions of the proposed ordinance requiring trolley companies to provide seats for all passengers from whom fares are collected were discussed at a hearing Thursday night by the Ordinance Committee of Common Council. Action was deferred until after the committee holds a further conference on it.

Judge George W. Macpherson, representing the Trenton Street Railway Company, opposed the measure for several reasons. He said it would lead to much trouble between passengers and conductors and would not accomplish its aim. The company, he said, was anxious to carry as many passengers as possible. He urged that prejudice and hatred be put aside and that the committee consider only the real facts in the case.

The company, the judge added, had already taken steps to improve its service, but the changes required reasonable time.

"Trenton," he said, "is no longer a small town, and to give every passenger a seat during the rush hours would be almost an impossibility. It is not done in New York, Philadelphia, Newark or other busy cities."

Another point made by the judge was that a no-seat-no-fare ordinance doubtless would prompt many persons to wait for crowded cars, so that they could ride free by standing.

It was asked if the company could refuse to admit passengers into cars having all the seats filled, and the judge answered that he believed, in view of the fact that a penalty was provided for, such action would be legal. In other words, the conductor of a car having all its seats occupied would not have to stop the car except to let off passengers.

Mr. Kafes, of the committee, wanted to know what could be done at the fair grounds and ball field if the crowds boarded the first cars and the others were left empty. In reply, Judge Macpherson said that a conduetor, after telling a passenger he had no seat for him, could collect a fare if the person persisted in getting on and standing. All hands seemed to agree that such action would precipitate rows, fights and perhaps riot.

John H. Backes, counsel to Mayor Madden, declared that the ordinance should be enforced reasonably and that the penalty should be sought only in case of gross violation. He argued that the measure would make it necessary for the company to keep up its schedules. In talking about running the cars in bunches, he said that much such trouble was caused by the fact that the conductor of the first car continued to stop for more passengers instead of going ahead and permitting the cars behind him to gather them up.

Mr. Kafes asked if a seat was a matter of right, and Mr. Backes said he believed it was, as seats were provided and the passenger was entitled to one when he traveled over the road.

City Solicitor Bird said that a similar ordinance adopted by Jersey City had been upheld in the Supreme Court. The opinion of Justice Pitney in the matter, he said, was broad and demanded that the provisions of the ordinance should be only reasonably applied. Under the Pitney opinion all prosecutions for violations are to be made by the city solicitor, who is to be the judge of the merits of the complaints.

INDIANS TO PUBLISH WEEKLY NEWSPAPER.

Muskogee, Okla., Jan. 29.—An Indian newspaper will be established here next month, the first copy appearing probably on February 15. Chiefs of the five civilized tribes and other influential Indians are backing the movement. The paper will be edited by Augustus W. Ivey, of Stillwell, a Cherokee, and will appear weekly. It will be known as the "Degtanns Archeeta," which means "Farm and Fireside."

Every department of the paper will be printed in some Indian language. The Cherokee, Greek, Choctaw, Seminole and Chickasaw tongues will be represented. The Cherokees are said to be the only Indian tribe in the world whose language has been developed to a point where its own characters can be used. The news of the other tribes will be printed in their various languages but in the English alphabet.

There will be no politics in the paper. Its purpose will be to educate the Indian in the duties of citizenship and remove from his mind the stubborn prejudice against the white man.

PURCHASING BOARD MAY BE OPPOSED.

Heads of Institutions Say They Do Not Favor Plan Proposed by Governor.

Trenton, Jan. 29.—That there is not entire unanimity of sentiment among the heads of New Jersey's institutions concerning Governor Fort's proposition to have a central purchasing board to buy supplies for all the institutions of the State became apparent during an informal discussion of the matter by the heads of the institutions at the State House yesterday. State Commissioner of Charities and Correction George B. Wight presided, and the institutional heads aired their views both for and against the plan. No definite action was taken, the opinion prevailing that the matter should be left to the Legislature, to which the Governor has made his suggestion.

The matter of petty cash accounts for the different institutions was discussed at length. At the present time such money as the pay due to discharged employes has to be advanced personally by the superintendents of the institutions, who must rely on the Legislature to reimburse them. It was felt that each institution should have a petty cash account from which such moneys may be drawn.

SOME STATE NEWS BRIEFS

Mrs. Matilda Stokes, of Millville, the mother of former Governor Stokes, is able to be out again after a severe illness.

Mayor Ellis Thursday delegated John Ake, a shipbuilder, to represent Camden at the deeper water convention to be held at Trenton.

Rev. Andrew Drew, who has been supplying the Central Baptist church, Woodbury, several months, has received a call to the permanent pastorate.

Taking iodine in mistake for cough syrup, John Francis, twenty-six years old, of 266 Kaighn avenue, Camden, fell in a heap on the street shortly after leaving home. Rushed to Cooper Hospital, he was soon revived.

Ten-year-old Eddie Johnson, son of Joseph H. Johnson, is the hero of Boudinot School, Burlington, having saved the life of William Bush, a companion, who fell from a floating ice cake and was drowning in the river.

Mrs. Lillian C. Hyers, fifty years old, of 538 Stevens street, Camden, was painfully burned about the face Thursday by gas flames which shot up suddenly while she was leaning over a stove. Her burns were dressed at Cooper Hospital.

At the funeral of Mrs. John A. Maytrott, who died Tuesday, her sons-in-law acted as pallbearers. Just as the funeral service commenced a letter was received from a son in Colorado expressing the hope that "mother" had entirely recovered from her illness.

Falling from a stepladder on the fourth floor of the Ribsam building, Trenton, Thursday, Charles B. Pharo, an electrician, of 1041 South Broad street, that city, was injured. In his descent Pharo struck a flight of stairs and just escaped falling to the bottom of the flight. He was hurt about the back.

A jar was given to the owners of Atlantic City beach ponies in an order which emanated from city hall ordering them to vacate their stands. The city acts upon complaint of hotel men, who claim that the stands occupied by the ponies are offensive to visitors and to promenaders on the boardwalk.

A communication was received from the Department of Commerce and Labor, in which it was stated that Secretary Nagel could not confer with any of Camden's representatives concerning the establishment of an immigration station along Camden's river front. It was stated, however, that anything the city might have to offer can be made in writing, which will be done.

Five schoolboys, while playing on the icy surface of Cedar Lake Thursday, broke through into the water. Four were rescued without much difficulty, but the fifth, Lester Darretty, would have perished had it not been for the timely arrival of a trolley car from Bridgeton. Conductor Harry Randolph and Mr. Socwell, a passenger, promptly went to the boy's assistance, finally rescuing him only by breaking ice to get to him.

Under the impression that he had been drugged while drinking with strangers, William Bowen, who gave his address as Fifteenth and Spring streets, Philadelphia, yesterday informed the Camden police that he had been robbed of $16 and a gold watch and chain. Bowen states that he awoke in a stable yard near Broadway and Federal street, but he was unable to give the police any information as to where he had visited or the identity of any of his companions.

REMARKABLE CLAIM IN GROVE'S LETTER CASE.

New Brunswick, Jan. 29.—Pleading that they intended no disrespect to the court, Lawyers Robert Adrian and Alan H. Strong publicly and forcibly told Judge Adrian Lyon in court yesterday morning that if he granted Prosecutor Booraem's motion for a struck jury in the Whitefield libel trial, involving the H. Raymond Groves slanderous circular letter, that the judge would expose himself to public criticism as being an ally of the prosecutor. The latter they charged with prosecuting the libel indictments solely to wipe out of existence a rival faction in the Republican party.

The charge was made at the end of a long review by the attorneys of the history of the case and the political factions in the Republican party.

Prosecutor Booraem wanted to come to the court's aid, but was told by Judge Lyon that the court could take care of itself. The court ordered counsel to desist from such attacks upon the integrity of the court and the lawyers insisted that they did not entertain such views, but were fearful for his honor's future that the public might gather such views.

Prosecutor Booraem characterized the speeches of his adversaries as offensive, indecent, unprofessional and in contempt of court. He held his application was based upon the serious nature of the cases.

Lawyer Robert Adrain in his argument declared that the men involved had been indicted by a Democratic grand jury, "so that it could shift from the Democratic party to the Republican party the responsibility for the letters."

The court laid the case over till next Friday for decision as to whether the jury shall be drawn or not.

ALLEGES ABUSE AND ASKS FOR A DIVORCE.

Trenton Jan. 29.—Following what she alleges to have been a continued course of cruelty and abuse, Mrs. Margaret Weiss, of West Hoboken, has instituted proceedings for divorce against her husband, Nathan Weiss. She also asks for the custody of her three children, ranging from nine to three years of age, and alimony sufficient for their support and her own. Mr. and Mrs. Weiss were married in 1903 and lived together until last November, when they separated.

Mrs. Weiss charges that her husband frequently told her he hoped she would die or choke; that he would not be responsible for her life if she spoke to him; that he was going to stick a knife into her so that he would be single like his brother.

On one occasion a few years ago Mr. Weiss is charged with having kicked his wife and driven her from the house. He placed her belongings in the street and called an officer to see that she did not return. The illness of one of the children brought about a reconciliation after this episode. At another time, when Mrs. Weiss was ill, her husband, it is alleged, told her to go to a hospital and said he hoped she would die. It is charged that he had told her he would contribute nothing to her support were it not for the fact that by doing so he feared her father would stop giving them money.

According to Mrs. Weiss, her father-in-law and mother-in-law joined in the persecutions of their son and helped to make her life unbearable. At one time the mother-in-law is alleged to have spat upon Mrs. Weiss because the latter would not speak to her.

ELIZABETH ARMORY SITE TO BE NAMED MONDAY.

Elizabeth, Jan. 29.—No decision will be announced in the matter of selecting a site for the proposed new armory until next Monday. As told, the choice of the home for Companies C and I, of the Second Regiment, which at present are without quarters because the building they used as an armory has been declared unsafe, formed the subject for a conference at the Union County Courthouse Thursday.

Two sites were considered, one at Broad street and Rahway avenue, the other on Walnut street, now a baseball field. It is probable if the price is reasonable the Broad street site will be chosen.

In the conference were a committee from the Board of Freeholders consisting of Director John N. Cady, of Summit; Freeholders Samuel Wilbur, of Plainfield, and William Garrison, of Elizabeth, and a delegation from the Second New Jersey Volunteer Infantry, comprising Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville; Lieutenant-Colonel Robert L. Patterson and General D. F. Collins, of Elizabeth; Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, from the House Committee on Military Affairs; County Collector Nathan R. Leavitt, County Attorney William R. Codington and former Major Benjamin King, of the Third Regiment, now clerk of freeholders.

The freeholders announced a willingness to appropriate $25,000, and Assemblyman Schwartz said he was ready to do all he could to further the project.

THE FORUM.

Sound Advice.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I see in your paper that some of our wealthy families are boycotting the butchers.

It would be wise for some of them to use the money saved by "fasting" to settle old butcher bills.

CHARLES P. SEBRING.

An Explanation.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Will you kindly correct a statement made in the columns of your paper last evening concerning the transactions of the County Executive Board of the W. C. T. U. at Westfield.

The book mentioned was not presented for the approval or disapproval of the officers present and no action whatever was taken upon its merits or demerits but it was shown for the purpose of acquainting those present with the arguments used by the liquor manufacturers in defense of their business.

The book was filled from cover to cover with statements which cannot be proven and so obsurd that they would not be seriously considered by even a "Cabinet" of men.

Yours respectfully,
CARRIE L. BENNETT,
Woman's Christian Temperance Union,

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"The Yankee Prince," George M. Cohan's big musical success, which comes to the Plainfield theatre February 2, has been called "Cohan's best," and it more than justifies the splendid criticisms accorded it since its first production. Everywhere the critics and theatre-goers have been driven to the seventh heaven of delight, for do they not expect in a Cohen show fun, music, singing and dancing of the highest order, and Mr. Cohan has yet to disappoint them. Heading the company of 75 that Messrs. Cohan and Harris are sending to us is Tow Lemis, who created a furore a few years ago by his performance of "The Unknown" in "Little Johnny Jones." Mr. Lewis will play his original role of Steve Daly in "The Yankee Prince," a role that has made him as famous in a way as the part of Rip Van Winkle did the late Joseph Jefferson.

During the Boston run of "Mary's Lamb," Edgar W. Carleton, the venerable father of Richard Carle, rattled the family skeleton for a newspaper reporter. Mr. Carleton still lives in Somerville, a suburb of Boston, in the same house in which the comedian was born. Mr. Carle's baptismal name is Charles Nicholas Carleton, and his father still calls him Charlie. "Charlie was a good boy and everybody liked him," said Mr. Carleton. "He declares he was not a boy comic, but he was. He always thought he could act, and if he denies it, don't you believe him. We have a barn at our place that we used to utilize as a clubhouse for a few kindred spirits in the neighborhood. We gave up the club when Charlie was about ten years old, and, would you believe it, the boy seized upon the building for a theatre. He said he was going to show us a few things, and he did. He rigged up a stage and had regular performances, charging ten nails for admission. Before the thing had been running two weeks we had several barrels of nails in our back yard. Charlie was the whole show—performer, stage manager and orchesera. I never saw a performance, but I do know that our yard and barn at one time or another entertained every boy and girl in Somerville. And how we accumulated nails! The boy was an actor all right. But I was sorry when he changed his name to Richard Carle."

WHOLE HAMLET MOVES.

The moving microbe has struck Evesboro, a small hamlet about three miles from Moorestown, and there are scarcely a half-dozen families who will not change places this spring. James O'Donnell goes to the Hagan farm, at Blackwood; Walter Garwood will move to the Chew place, Mrs. Hines is booked for the Mitchell farm, George Shepard moves from the Pidgeon farm to the Hammit place, and Bonson, now on the Hammit farm, will move to the Perkins farm, recently bought by Horace Roberts; Herbert Alcott goes to his father's farm and Isaac Angelow will farm the place on which Mrs. Hines now lives.

The annual offering for the coal fund will be received at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow. Mrs. Laura Wilson is chairman of the committee in charge.

FINDS $4,000 IN LOOT.

Police on Track of $60,000 Railroad Robbery.

Bayonne, Jan. 29.—Merchandise valued at over $4,000, taken from the New York Central Railroad several weeks ago, was recovered in this city last night. Part of the stolen property was found in the house of A. J. Yamon, a Greek, at 216 East Twenty-second street.

Mrs. Yamon's purse was searched by Detectives Griffin and Mullaney, who say they found a receipt showing that Yamon had stored trunks in the storage rooms of Samuel Goodman, in Twentieth street. The trunks were filled with clothing and jewelry, according to the police. In the Yarmon house the detectives found a quantity of jewelry.

Yarmon could not be found. His wife has not been arrested, but is being watched by the police.

Detectives from Rochester came here last night. They believe they are on the track of the gang of freight car thieves who have been operating in New York.

The trunks found in Goodman's place were shipped from Rochester via the Pennsylvania Railroad, and were taken from Jersey to Bayonne by wagon. At the time of the robbery two detectives were shot, one of whom died. The merchandise taken at that time is valued at $60,000.

Gives Package Sociable.

Cranford, Jan. 29.—A package sociable was held last evening at the home of Mrs. George Damon, 3 Madison avenue, for the benefit of the Parish Circle of Trinity Episcopal church. After the packages were sold at auction music and refreshments were enjoyed.

FAVORS THE CEMETERY ABANDONMENT BILL.

Paterson, Jan. 29.—At the Board of Trade rooms Thursday night the members of the Sandy Hill Cemeteries Committee discussed matters pertaining to the converting of these alleged eyesores into parks. Assemblyman McCran's bill, giving the city power to take over the cemeteries by condemnation proceedings, was considered and the Assemblyman has been informed that the committee will lend assistance, if necessary, to have the measure passed.

The Board of Trade's committee is already in possession of figures showing that one cemetery can be turned over to the city at a cost of $7,000. This ground contains something like fifty city lots. This price includes the removal of all bodies now in the burying ground, estimated at from 2,500 to 3,000 to another cemetery where proper care will be taken of the graves forever.

Assurances have also been given the committee by one other church organization that their cemetery rights will be turned over to the city when the municipality is ready to receive those rights.

GIFTS FOR PRINCETON.

University Receives Rare Documents for Its Library.

The library of Princeton University has received from M. Taylor Pyne, '77, a document of unusual interest regarding the early history of Princeton. It is a letter from Dr. John Witherspoon, one of the early presidents of Princeton and the only clergyman to sign the Declaration of Independence, to Colonel Henry Lee regarding the college expenses of his son, "Light Horse Harry" Lee.

The library has also received from J. A. Campbell, of Trenton, three documents relating to President Madison. They include President Madison's own copy of the famous alumni circular of 1835, calling for subscriptions for a general fund of $100,000; a letter to President Madison from Daniel Newell, who was managing the matter, and a receipt from Mr. Newell acknowledging payment on account of Madison's contribution to this fund. All three of these documents are docketed in Madison's own handwriting.

A More Appropriate Name.

Mr. Henpeck had hesitated a long time about doing this bold thing, but he felt that now was the time or never, says The Catholic Standard and Times.

"Dear," he said in a very timid voice, "I wish you wouldn't call me 'Leo' any more."

"Why not?" demanded his wife, explosively. "'Leo' is your given name."

"I know, my dear, but it makes my friends laugh when you call me that. I was thinking you might call me 'Job,' just for a pet name."

Flowers in Fashion.

The wearing of an artificial flower on a house gown is a revived fashion. Roses are the favorites. They are of satin. Many gold and silver ones are used. They are pinned at the top of the high-waist drapery. The artificial gardenia is now worn at the end of the long shawl revers on coats instead of on the lapel.

TO BEAUTIFY ARMY POSTS.

Not to be behind Manila in its plan to beautify the city by straightening its lines, planting shade trees and other tropical foliage and converting its waste spaces into well-ordered and beautifying parks, the military authorities now propose to direct their efforts to improving and beautifying the various posts and garrisons throughout the islands, so that visitors to the Philippines will be impressed with the beauty and wealth of tropical foliage that satisfies the eye and pleases the senses, not only at Manila, but in other parts of the islands, as well, says the Manila Times.

Some steps have been taken in this direction already, many shade trees and other foliage having been planted at the various posts, particularly at Forts McKinley, Jossman and Zambanga, and arrangements have been made for a study of horticulture by a non-commissioned officer of the army at the Manila nurseries, which knowledge thus gained will be disseminated in an effort to make the various garrisons throughout the islands as attractive as possible.

The city nurseries are doing their part toward the work of beautifying the islands, and are constantly growing those palms, ferns and other tropical plants which form an important part in the work. Many plants have been sent to the different military posts, and many more are being grown with all the skill and care known to the science of horticulture. To this institution the military authorities, through the courtesy of the Municipal Board, will send a non-commissioned officer from the garrison of the coast artillery at Corregidor, whose duty it shall be to study horticulture and the methods employed at the city nurseries.

The city nurseries are raising thousands of plants, which are destined at some future time to adorn the city parks and military posts throughout the islands. The different hothouses are now filled with Philippine plants of all hues and degrees of beauty and age, which are taken out as occasion requires and transplanted in uninviting spots all over the city, making them restful to the eye and a welcome addition to those little oases which tend to make the city attractive.

Sensitive.

"I found a purse this morning?"

"Did you return it?"

"No. The owner might have offered me a reward, and it would have wounded my pride."—Bon Vivant.

Success.

"I hear your brother has become an actor. Is he a success?"

"Oh, yes. He began as a corpse, and now he has already been advanced to the role of a ghost."

The Thoughtful Host.

Guest—Gracious! What long legs the new waiter has!

Host—Yes, I engaged him specially for the diners who are in a hurry.—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

To See Them All.

Lady (in modern book store)—I wish to see all of the latest books.

Salesman—Very well, madam. Will you kindly step on board this scenic railway?—Life.

CHARITY CENTRALIZATION

these that a bureau was thought to be the ideal method.

It was suggested by Rev. George A. Warner that there are amateur social workers who, while doing good work, are often a hindrance in some ways. Yet they don't want to be deprived of the pleasure of raising and dispensing charity according to their ideas. This was admitted to be true. Mr. Warner thought it should compulsory for everyone to make a report to some designated head, and he suggested that the Mayor appoint a committee and have blanks sent out to be returned with all necessary information. This brought out the idea of having a registration bureau, the suggestion being made by Miss Mabelle Phillips.

It was the opinion of Mr. Tyler that what is needed is co-operation in relief. He suggested that all societies and organizations, lodges, even the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., be invited to co-operate in this matter and that a central secretary be employed to keep a complete record of all charities and what is done.

Another suggestion was that a "community Sunday," instead of a "Hospital Sunday" be designated for the purpose of raising funds. The question of how to reach people who don't give to the hospital or other charities seemed to be a perplexing one. It was then that the conference resulted in the adoption of the resolution given above, and the appointment of a committee. This committee will meet soon to take up its work and report later.

LEAVES FOR ARABIA TO BE A MISSIONARY

Dr. Paul Wilberforce Harrison, Trinity Reformed's missionary to Arabia, is now on the way to his distant post. Dr. Harrison sailed at 11 o'clock this morning on the steamship Berlin, of the North German Llyod Line from Hoboken, and is due to reach Bombay in six to eight weeks time. He made his departure from this city on the 7:55 a. m. train and a goodly number of the congregation were at the station bade Dr. Harrison goodbye and wished him Godspeed. The missionary was accompanied on the steamship by the Rev. John Y. Broek, Demetrie Farhart and Mr. French.

Dr. Harrison was formally consecrated to the missionary cause at an impressive service at Trinity Reformed church last night. The service was also of a farewell character and despite the storm there was a large number of members out to extend farewell greetings to their missionary.

It was the intention of the Rev. Dr. Zwemer to be present at the service but he was obliged to hasten to the bedside of his dying mother in the west.

The charge was given Dr. Harrison by the Rev. Dr. J. Preston Searle, of Rutgers College, and the prayer of consecration was offered by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek. Dr. Searle's address to Dr. Harrison was of an advisory character.

A congratulatory address to the congregation was delivered by the Rev. Stuart Nye Hutchison, representing the Newark Classis. "This church has become a world of power," said Dr. Hutchison. "A few years ago all of us maybe, did not believe in the imperialistic policy of President McKinley and Congress on the Philippine Island question, but this is the brand of imperialism we all believe in. Statistics show that churches that have not been missionary churches have been dead churches.

"Women," continued Dr. Hutchison, "spend more money for paper flowers every year than is expended for missionaries." The speaker also made reference to the big amount of money spent for tobacco by men. If tobacco money was set aside for the missionary causes a huge amount of good could be accomplished, said Dr. Hutchison.

The liberality of giving was also touched on by the speaker. He related a number of interesting incidents which came under his personal observations where the humble give more in proportion to missionary and church work than the rich. In emphasizing that point the speaker declared: "Many of the rich down in this world will be very poor in heaven, and many of the poor down here will find themselves rich in heaven."

Greetings from Arabia were extended to the congregation by the Rev. F. J. Barny, a missionary, who is now in America on a furlough. Mr. Barney declared that the Arabians are sure to extend a warm welcome to Dr. Harrison as a medical man. People in Arabia want the American missionary and thye will be glad to greet Trinity's representative.

Dr. Harrison when he departed this morning took along with him a mail bag which was presented to him. In the bag were between sixty and seventy letters. Mrs. William A. Woodruff had this matter in charge.

Dr. Harrison was born in Nebraska, where he received his secondary and collegiate education. He was a student of Doane College and of the University of Nebraska, at the latter of which he received his bachelor's degree in 1905. In 1908 he graduated in medicine at Johns Hopkins University. For the last two years he has been a house physician in the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston. Dr. Harrison's church affiliations have been with the Congregational and Presbyterian denominations.

ASK REAPPOINTMENT OF LABOR COMMISSIONER

Trenton, Jan. 29.—A delegation of thirty representatives of various civic and charitable organizations throughout the State called upon Governor Fort yesterday to urge the reappointment of Lewis T. Bryant as commissioner of labor. Among those in the delegation were Rev Francis A. Foy, of Nutley, representing the State Charities Association; Dr. Sara Spottswood, president of the Women's Club of Orange; Miss Howard Crosby Warren, chairman of the child labor committee of the State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president of Princeton University; Miss Duffield, Miss Hamill, Miss Miller and Mrs. Perkins, of the Civic Association of Princeton; Robert G. Patterson, of Orange, secretary of the Bureau of Associated Charities; Mrs. G. W. B. Cushing, president of the Consumers' League of New Jersey; Mrs. Henry P. Bailey, of East Orange, representing the Orange Charities Conference, and A. W. McDougal, of the Bureau of Associated Charities, Newark.

Father Foy, who introduced the various speakers, said by way of introduction that the department of labor, under its present management, had worked in harmony with the civic and charitable organizations in enforcing the laws prohibiting child labor.

He expressed the belief that valuable work in this direction had been rendered by the department, and said that in the judgment of this delegation it would not be good judgment to make any change. Mr. McDougal corroborated the statement made by Father Foy.

Governor Fort said he was surprised at the interest taken by the organizations represented, and added that he had heard of no opposition to the reappointment of Mr. Bryant. Subsequently, however, he qualified this remark by saying that he had in mind a man from East Orange who was a good friend of the organizations represented, and whom he had contemplated placing at the head of the department.

The Governor intimated that he had in mind the making of certain changes, which, if carried out, would result in placing Mr. Bryant in some other position and the substitution of another commissioner of labor.

This proposition did not meet with the approval of the delegates, and in answer to the Governor's remark that there had been no opposition to Mr. Bryant's appointment, Mrs. Cushing said it had been quite generally reported that the manufacturers of the State were organizing with a view to attacking the present labor laws, the enforcement of which they regarded as being carried on with too much vigor.

Continuing, she said that six years ago the women's clubs were very much opposed to the department and regarded it as useless. They were not then inclined to look for good results even when the department was reorganized, but had since changed their views. She expressed the belief that the child labor laws now are sincerely enforced to the best of the ability of the department.

BELIEVE POPE WILL JOIN COLUMBUS KNIGHTS.

New York, Jan. 29.—Members of the order here assert that Pope Pius X. may become a member of the Knights of Columbus. Precedent for such a step is given by pointing to his enrollment about a year ago in the Ancient Roman Academy of the Arcadi.

The clerical and lay members of the Knights of Columbus would be joyous should the Pope become a knight. It is believed he will announce his position at a special audience he will give to a pilgrim band composed of knights and their families next summer. The pilgrimage will be led by the incorporators of the society—William M. Geary, Daniel Colwell and Dr. M. C. O'Connor—and by Rev. P. J. McGinney, brother of its founder.

In St. Peter's special services will be held for the pilgrims from America.

Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American College in Rome, will bid the pilgrims welcome there, and they will greet the American students in their summer retreat just outside the city.

At the audience with Pope Pius the knights will present to him a substantial purse and an illuminated address conveying the greetings of the society.

The travelers will have a whole section of seats at the Passion Play in Oberammergau. In Genoa the pilgrims will be entertained by the faculty of the Collegio Brignoli Sal.

HALLEY'S COMET TO BE ON VIEW IN FEBRUARY.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—While Halley's comet may not come any nearer the earth than 14,000,000 miles on May 18, it will be visible to the naked eye the latter part of February, according to a statement made by Professor E. B. Frost, of Yerkes' observatory. "The approach of the comet will be followed by meteoric showers," said Professor Frost. "At present the comet appears like a fuzzy ball, but this will disappear near the twenty-first of February and it will be easy for any person to see it with naked eye."

In speaking of the Johannesburg comet, the professor said it is disappearing. He says it is identical with the "Comet A of 1910" and has not been visible for three days.

"The Johannesburg comet is losing its brightness," said Professor Frost. "because of its rapid travel away from the sun, but a splitting of its tail would not be surprising, as this often happens."

HOW DR. WILEY TESTS RELATIVE AGE OF EGGS.

Washington, Jan. 29.—Before the Moore committee of the House, investigating the high cost of living, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government's chief chemist, yesterday gave a practical demonstration of egg testing.

He had a beaker placed on the table in the committee-room, filled with a ten per cent. solution of ordinary table salt in water—the best egg tester he knew, he said. Dr. Wiley showed how the know-to-be fresh eggs sank instantly to the bottom of the beaker, which is what fresh eggs should do, since no air chambers have had time to form inside of them. The eggs that have been in storage for ten months stayed at the top of the salt water, sticking out a third or a quarter of their diameters.

When asked how he knew the eggs which sank were fresh, Dr. Wiley replied that one of his inspectors had watched the hens lay them yesterday.

The boy was alone in the store when the dog ran in. Before the father reached the boy the latter had been bitten in a score of places. The boy was hurried to the Pasteur Institute, in New York.

Many Plainfield women know this

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by a weak and lame back and I was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My back pained me so badly that I could hardly stoop and when I caught cold or overexerted myself, my suffering was doubled. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy, helped me at once and I continued taking them until I was cured. I have had no need of a kidney remedy in the past two years, but value Doan's Kidney Pills today as highly as ever."

The first impression of the Emperor of Russia is of the gentleness and simplicity of his character, says London Tit-Bits. He is very kind and very slight, and his eyes, face and voice express a disposition that is unusually winning. In his delicate appearance and the quiet dignity of his bearing, however, there is no suggestion of any lack of physical or moral strength.

Perhaps there could hardly be a question of physical bravery in any royal case, since personal fearlessness is a part of royal training, if not inherent in royal blood. But no one could see the Emperor of Russia without realizing the spiritual force in his gaze and detecting a note of moral courage in his voice. To all who come near him he appears fully aware of the weight of his destiny, and to be bearing the awful burden with cheerful serenity, always looking at his great danger, and without wavering.

In meeting with strangers the Czar is, wherever possible, kindly and solicitous and entirely free from affection in the consciousness of his position. In this the Czarina resembles him, and also in a preference for the English language. Indeed, English is spoken exclusively by the imperial family in its home circle.

Music is the Czar's favorite recreation, and he is himself a composer of no mean merit. He plays the violin well, and is very fond of an instrument called the balalaika. He often sings to this instrument, for he possesses a tenor voice of excellent quality.

The Czarina is also very musical, and a celebrated violinist once said of her that if she were in another sphere of life, and became a professional, she would win great fame.

The Empress is a careful, loving mother, and personally supervises the education of her four little girls who were brought up by English who were brought by by English nurses, with an abundance of exercise and open-air life.

The Czar is quite up-to-date in his liking for golf, though he does not devote much time to the "royal and ancient game." In the park of the Winter Palace there is a links, and Nicholas II. was himself guiding the there enjoying himself immensely. The "Autocrat of All the Russias" has always taken an interest in agricultural matters, and another hobby of his is farming. Some photographs were taken some time ago showing an engineer giving the Czar instructions in the use of a newly-invented plow. In one of these pictures Nicholas II was himself guiding the plow as it turned up the furrows.

The Czar is by no means what can be called deeply read, but he takes great delight in literature of the lighter kind, and he is credited with the remark, "Were I not—well, what I am—I should be the greatest bookworm in the world." One of his hobbies is the study of occultism, while among others may be mentioned yachting, philately, and collecting birds' eggs. Many of the latter were collected by himself in his younger days, and at one time he was a most daring and expert climber of trees. Nichols II. is also fond of cards, and frequently plays a game in the evenings. His majesty is a great smoker, and continually seeks repose from his troubles in the soothing weed.

AMERICAN CATS IN FAR EAST.

In the land of the nabobs you may escape serious punishment if you shy a hair brush or bootjack at a couple of cats courting on the backyard fence. But you had better not kill a tabby, says The Pathfinder. The people of India have themselves no particular love for the caterwaul of Tom and Tabby, but they have the most exalted admiration and respect for the teeth and claws of these felines, this being due to the fact that they have done noble work fighting the bubonic plague by sticking their claws and incisors into the rat that carries the flea that harbors the germ that does the bad work with man. These are American cats that are thus doing.

About a year ago the Salvation Army concluded that the cat of India was not equal to the occasion, that it was run down, and hence couldn't do much toward running down the rats that carry fleas, etc., so 50,000 cats were sent over on board steamship. Besides getting at once on the job and locating the rats, these cats multiplied so fast that it is now estimated that there are more than a million of the purring creatures in the land of the Ganges and Indus, which are of American ancestry.

Japan has taken the hint from India, and a few days ago, when the steamer Lichtenfels left New York, there was something doing in the hold, judging from the squalls that rose above the scream of the whistles in the bay. There were down there 400 cats on their way to the Flowery Kingdom to vent their instincts on the rodents that infest it. There will be more to follow and in a short while 500,000 cats will have been shipped to the Mikado's people. America is becoming a veritable Dick Whittington to the countries of the Far East.

Guest of Previous Evening's Bachelor's party—I say, old man, whatever's happened to the pictures this morning?

Festive Host—Can't make it out, old chappie. I put them all straight after you fellows had gone last night.

THE FOURTH ESTATE

Novelized by
FREDERICK R. TOOMBS.

From the great play of the same name by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford. Copyright, 1909, by Joseph Medill Patterson and Harriet Ford.

"I thought so. I only wanted to make sure," he said. "He's a dangerous type. Comes from good enough people, but ambitious to get into the limelight by stirring up the mob. Thought he might have learned sense by now, but it seems he hasn't. Guess he never will; these fanatics never do."

"We consider him the best investigator in town," warmly, in praise of Brand.

"He's entirely too zealous. Do you catch me?" asked Dupuy, leaning over McHenry and gazing significantly into his eyes.

The managing editor caught Dupuy's meaning and stared at him blankly in his surprise.

"You don't mean"—

Dupuy smiled coldly.

"Yes—I mean—get rid of him!"

CHAPTER III.

THE managing editor again began to weigh just what significance the demand of Dupuy had. He directed his glance at him fixedly, and a long pause ensued after the lawyer lobbyist's abrupt demand that Wheeler Brand be discharged from the Advance.

Dupuy returned McHenry's stare, and his discerning eye and brain enabled him to read the workings of McHenry's mind. He felt instinctively as he glared at McHenry that he had the managing editor "on the run." During the period of the insurance company's ownership there had been no doubt that the decision of the managing editor of the Advance would have been in favor of Dupuy and his demand for the discharge of Wheeler Brand. And the lawyer, like McHenry, knew nothing of the new owner that would change the attitude of the paper.

Dupuy was right in his estimate of McHenry's weakness. The lawyer lobbyist was playing in rare fortune, indeed, to discover in his opponent a man who dared not stand for the right. He well knew that he would not find the same sort of man in a position of importance in many other newspapers of the land. Well, too, did he know "the power of the press" throughout all America, for he had learned at bitter cost that it was the foe of all the Ed Dupuys and all those that employed them to serve their ends.

Finally McHenry spoke in answer to Dupuy's demand.

"Let us give Brand one more chance!" protested McHenry. "I'll put him on baseball or water front. Come, now."

"I will be candid with you. I was instructed to make an example of somebody for this morning's story. Perhaps, though, a good hauling over might do for this time. Call him in now. It's his last chance."

A boy entered.

"Ask Mr. Brand to step in."

"I'd rather take a licking than do this," protested McHenry.

Dupuy was unsympathetic.

"Well, he's only got himself to thank!" he snorted.

Wheeler Brand came in.

"Mr. Brand," began the managing editor, "there is a kick being made on the Bartelmy story of this morning."

"Yes, sir; I suppose so." Brand looked up and saw Dupuy, and the reporter's face showed that he understood.

"I forward the kick to you, indorsing it O. K.," said McHenry. "In other words, the kick goes."

"Why, what"—

"This is a practical world," interposed Dupuy.

Brand grew bitter, for well he knew the practices of Dupuy.

"Oh, yes; I know the patter—a world of live and let live. We must be very careful before imputing motives, eh, Mr. Dupuy? Does not the good book say, 'Let him that is without sin among you cast the first stone—at United States judges.'"

"Wheeler, Wheeler," cried McHenry, "we only ask you in to talk it over calmly!"

"That man has hit me in the dark before," exclaimed Brand. "This is the first time that he has come into the light."

"I desire to say that my clients," put in Dupuy, "like a great many other of the—ah—subscribers—to this paper, were disappointed at what they conceived to be an unwarrantable attack full of insinuations about one of the most distinguished members of the United States bench, and they wish merely as readers of the paper to express the hope that nothing of the sort will occur again, in which case they are willing to overlook this morning's article entirely—to, in fact, regard it merely as a mistake, a mistake made without malice."

"You mean I am to have another chance to hold my job if I'll be good from now on?" asked Brand.

Dupuy once more became complacent.

"Such, I believe, is Mr. McHenry's decision," he announced calmly.

"You certainly have your gall, Dupuy," cried Brand in menacing tones, "to think you can muzzle me for $40 a week. I've paid more than that for the privilege of fighting you."

The lawyer turned quickly to the managing editor.

"You better let him go, McHenry," he suggested. "He's a crank."

Wheeler Brand was amazed at the way in which McHenry allowed Dupuy to influence him.

"Does he give you orders?" he asked meaningly of the managing editor.

"Yes, my boy; he does, and I accept your resignation."

The reporter was by no means daunted by his discharge.

"I'm sorry for you," he cried, inclining toward McHenry.

Dupuy laughed significantly.

"Reserve your sympathy for yourself, young man," he advised the young newspaper writer.

"Reserve your sympathy for Bartelmy; he'll need it before long," was his cutting retort.

"Oh! Is that so?" sneered Dupuy "Go west and grow up with the country, for if you hang around here to hurt Bartelmy don't forget that criminal libel is punishable with arrest."

"Sorry, old man," spoke McHenry kindly. "If I didn't have a family I'd go west with you."

"If it wasn't for men having families," put in Dupuy philosophically, "there'd be a revolution."

Brand straightened up and, with a contemptuous expression on his face, started toward the door.

"You've got more heart than sense, McHenry," was the parting shot which he hurled at the managing editor.

"Pretty tough on a reporter to fire him for 'scooping' the town on a big story," said the managing editor.

"Oh, pshaw!" grunted Dupuy.

A boy entered with a card. Dupuy crossed to a chair and picked up his overcoat.

"Mr. Nolan, sir," the lad announced, with an amusing grimace. "He's the new boss, and he's got a couple o' mitts on 'im like Jim Jeffries. Gee, out I'll bet Nolan is there with th' wallop, all right!"

"YES; IT WAS THE STREET CAR STRIKE, AND YOU AND JUDGE BARTELMY SENT JERRY DOLAN TO JAIL."

Dupuy put his overcoat back on the chair. His luck was still holding good, he congratulated himself. Here was a chance to make the acquaintance of the new owner of the influential Advance, an opportunity to pave the way possibly to secure future favors from him for his clients when emergencies arose. Needless to say, emergencies frequently arose to disturb the peace of mind of the varieties of people who sought the versatile aid of Mr. Ed Dupuy. He turned to face McHenry and said:

"Oh, the new owner! I'd like to meet him. If you don't object I'll wait." Dupuy seated himself at the extreme left hand corner of the office close to the rack containing files of the daily papers. He took down a file and began to read. McHenry, laughing at the patent anxiousness of the lawyer to meet Nolan, put on his coat.

A heavy step was heard, and the bulky form of the new owner of the Advance stood before the managing editor.

"I am Mr. McHenry," explained the latter.

"I am Mike Nolan," the newcomer remarked bluntly.

At the sound of the big man's big voice Dupuy, whom Nolan had not noticed in the corner, stirred and turned his head to gain a better view of him. There was something familiar in the ring of that voice. There was something familiar in the features and the poise of Mr. Mike Nolan. Surely he had met him somewhere. He pondered and pondered and finally gave up the problem in disgust.

"This is a nice looking place you've got here," he remarked to McHenry.

"That you've got, sir."

A feminine voice from the outer hallway was heard to exclaim breathlessly, "I refuse to climb another step."

McHenry turned inquiringly, whereupon Nolan explained: "My family's just outside. I wanted them to see me take possession." His voice was tinged with pride. He stepped to the door. "Come in, mother," he called gayly. Mrs. Nolan, a tall, well proportioned brunette, attired in the costliest of imported garments, entered the managing editor's office with a pronounced flourish, followed by the two Nolan children, Sylvester and Phyllis—the son about twenty-two years old and the daughter probably a year or two younger. "Oh, mercy, them stairs!" exclaimed the mother, endeavoring to catch her breath. Nolan presented his wife and son to McHenry. Mrs. Nolan called to Phyllis to draw near. "This is my daughter, Phyllis," she said. "She went to Bryn Mawr." Phyllis and the managing editor exchanged greetings. "My son, Sylvester," went on the mother proudly, "went to Harvard."

"Oh, you're a Harvard man!" spoke McHenry to Sylvester. "What class?"

The son, togged in the latest fresh-man effects in the line of sporty clothes and drawing on an unlighted cigarette, replied, "1909, 1910, 1911."

Mrs. Nolan pointed at a pile of papers lying on a small desk. "I don't see how you ever get time to read 'em all," she addressed McHenry.

"Oh, I read fifty or sixty a day. We've got to know what the other fellows are doing."

"That's just like me," she responded smoothly. "I always like to know what everybody else is doing, too," she went on. "I think what journalism needs is a soft feminine, refining influence. It seems you don't publish anything now but crime, divorces and people's troubles." She laughed.

"Oh, you wouldn't want to read every day that Mr. and Mrs. James Jones were living happily together. You're only interested when they're unhappy."

"Still I'd like to read once in awhile that somebody else was happy, at least for a little while."

It was McHenry's turn to laugh.

"Would you like to look over the plant, Mrs. Nolan?" he asked.

"Oh, yes! What I want to see is the reporters reporting."

When Mrs. Nolan, Phyllis and Sylvester had departed in the wake of the boy who had answered McHenry's ring, Dupuy rose and made a signal to McHenry behind Nolan's back that he wanted to meet the owner. The managing editor beckoned him over. "Mr. Nolan," he said, inclining toward the proprietor of the Advance, "this is Mr. Dupuy."

"I'd like to read that somebody else was happy."

Dupuy bowed, again trying to fix in his mind the occasion on which, somehow, somewhere in his busy past he had met Michael Nolan. He extended his hand, saying, "I am glad to meet you, Mr. Nolan."

The newspaper publisher pierced Dupuy with a glance which, to say the least, was searching. He crouched toward him and compressed his brows as though to render his sight more certain, more penetrating. He had half extended his own hand to grasp Dupuy's. Suddenly, with a half smothered oath, he drew it violently back.

"My God," he exclaimed, "it is Ed Dupuy!"

He continued to stare at the lawyer. After a moment a faint smile appeared.

"Ed Dupuy, that's funny," he continued—"that's awful funny. Well, don't it beat all? Don't you remember me, Ed?"

Dupuy couldn't place him as yet.

"Why—ah, Mr. Nolan! Yes, it must have been. Let's see. Wasn't it Monte Carlo two winters ago?" he ventured.

"No, Ed, no; it wasn't Monte Carlo two winters ago. It was here in this town twelve summers ago. Remember now?"

"Twelve summers ago—twelve summers ago?" Dupuy reflected.

"The street car strike," reminded Nolan.

"Oh, yes, the street car strike!" added Dupuy. Now he began to remember. He began to remember the part he, as the Consolidated Traction company's counsel, played in that war between capital and labor, and somewhere in it all he realized that a face something like the one before him had come to his knowledge; also the name "Nolan" had a familiar ring. "Nolan, Nolan!" he repeated to himself. No, it was "Dolan," he reassured himself; that had been the name of the man he had crushed and driven from the kin of men. Yes, that was it. "Dolan," and that man was a broken down and outer when Dupuy last heard of him.

Jerry Dolan, the agitator.

Nolan saw that Dupuy was nonplused, and he laughed as he said:

"Yes, it was the street car strike, and you and Judge Bartelmy between you sent Jerry Dolan to jail for contempt, and that broke the strike after it'd been won."

"He was a dangerous agitator, was Dolan," pronounced Dupuy, directing an interested glance at the new owner.

Nolan drew a deep breath and, clinching his fists at his sides, replied to his arch foe of twelve years before:

"He'll be a more dangerous agitator from now on. I'm Jerry Dolan!"

CHAPTER IV.

THE declaration of the new owner of the Advance that he was no less a personage than the blacklist victim of years back created the sensation that would a cannon shot in the dreamy solitude of the sylvan dells of Arcady.

Dupuy fell back as though struck by a violent blow. And, indeed, he and his interests would have every reason to believe, he now knew full well, that they had in all truth a new enemy to combat, an enemy that would cost them dearly if he were to be vanquished.

"You—you are Jerry Dolan, and you own the Advance!" the lawyer cried chokingly. "What are we coming to next?" he finally managed to say after a desperate effort to calm himself.

Jerry Nolan, for none other than the old time strike leader it was, enriched by his mining operations in the rock ribbed Nevada hills, thrilled with the realization that he was now in a position to strike terror into the hearts and souls of those who had attempted to destroy him and his loved ones. He knew that he had in his power the men who had almost succeeded in their designs against him twelve years before.

McHenry, at first even more puzzled than Dupuy and who was bending forward, with an expression of deepest interest and concern implanted on his features, began to understand the situation more clearly when he heard his new employer say in a voice that pulsated with determination:

"Yes, Ed Dupuy, I am Jerry Dolan, and I am back in the old town to pay my respects to my friends and—and"—his voice shook—"to my enemies."

The whole truth now dawned upon the amazed McHenry and also upon Dupuy, who had been dealing with men long enough to know that his only successful pose at the present momentous time would be a conciliatory one. He must at all hazards smooth over this dangerous factor in the city's affairs, the returned Jerry Dolan, and persuade him that he was now his friend.

"Well, well," Dupuy began ingratiatingly, simulating a sickly smile, "this is a most interesting meeting—most interesting, indeed." He laughed as loudly as the nervously contracting muscles of his throat would permit. "But it is time now to let bygones be bygones, eh, Mr.—er—ah"— He again thrust forward the hand that the newspaper proprietor had refused to grasp.

"Nolan," answered the newcomer in his deep, strong voice. "N-o-l-a-n, with an 'N' and not a 'D' on the front end of it. That's my name now. I had to change it." He stopped abruptly and again directed his dark eyes menacingly on the face of the man opposite him. After a few moments he continued: "You see, Ed Dupuy, I was blacklisted as Dolan. Likely you'll remember that too."

CENTURY MARK HIS GOAL

to go elsewhere, so he again started out afoot. On the way he passed through Elizabeth, Metuchen and South Plainfield, finally reaching New Market. He walked all the way with the exception of the distance between South Plainfield and New Market, about one mile.

At that point he met a farmer driving a team of oxen, and the latter took his to New Market. When the tavern was reached (the hotel now conducted by John Harkins), both alighted and refreshed themselves with a hearty meal and a pint of grog each. The landlord at the hostelry then was Landin Blue, an Englishman.

New Market in those days, said Mr. Lowrie, was about as big as it is now. Mr. Lowrie decided to settle there and he secured a job in John Giles' wheelwright shop, which stood on the site of Jenner's brick house. The shop is now in the rear of the Jenner house, and the ancient landmark now used by Philip Jenner for the same purpose.

After working a time at Giles' wheelwright establishment, Mr. Lowrie took a job at Vail's saw mill, which occupied the site of the present grist mill. At that time the mill was the most importane business center in that village. In addition to woodsawing, a large clover cleaning industry was connected with the plant. There the farmers for miles around brought their clover to be cleaned in one hundred bushel lots and larger; then another adjunct to the mill was a hub factory; oakum was also turned out in large quantities which was marketed in New York for ship calking purposes.

The low wages in those days did not hinder men from saving money. Mr. Lowrie worked steadily at New Market for eight years at fifty cents a day and his board. He loaned his money to his employer at interest during that time, and at the end of the eight years, he discovered that he had about $500, or sufficient to get married.

So in 1840 he led Sarah Coriell, daughter of Ira Coriell, to the altar. Five children blessed that union—Mrs. George F. Giles, Mrs. Emma E. Giddes, of Dunellen; Mrs. C. T. Hunt, of Stockton; Abner Lowrie, of Dover, and Mrs. David Giles, of Plainfield, who is dead. Mr. Lowrie' first wife died and forty-eight years ago he married Susan Louise Harris, of Harris Lane, who died two and a half years ago. There was one son by this union, Elston Lowrie, who is living.

Soon after his first marriage Mr. Lowrie engaged in farming, which he followed chiefly during his remaining active years. He owned a farm on the site of the old "Eight Row," on West Front street, and his farmhouse was called by travelers as the "Half Way House," because of its central location between Dunellen and Plainfield. He was also owner at one time of the William Rice farm near Dunellen. It was for the murder of old man Rice that Lawyer Patrick is serving a life sentence in Sing Sing prison.

While in the employ of Vail's Mills at New Market, and in later years when he farmed for himself, Mr. Lowrie peddled flour, visiting Plainfield, Elizabeth, Newark, Rahway and New Brunswick. At that period Newark was boasting proudly over a population of 20,000.

The distinction of voting for nineteen presidential candidates is probably not enjoyed by another Jerseyman. Mr. Lowrie cast his first vote at New Market in 1836 for General William H. Harrison, the Whig candidate, who was defeated by Martin Van Buren, the Democratic nominee. Four years later he took party in the first Whig victory in forty years by voting for Harrison and Tyler in the memorable "Tippecanoe and Harrison too" campaign. The other presidential candidates for whom Mr. Lowrie voted for follow: 1844, Henry Clay; 1848, General Zachary Taylor; 1852, General Winfield Scott; 1856, John C. Fremont; 1860 and 1864, Abraham Lincoln; 1868 and 1872, General U. S. Grant; 1876, Rutherford B. Hayes; 1880, James A. Garfield; 1884, 1888 and 1892, Benjamin Harrison; 1896 and 1900, William McKinley; 1904, Theodore Roosevelt; 1906, President William H. Taft.

The most enthusiastic political meeting ever attended by him, Mr. Lowrie said, was in the first Lincoln campaign during the summer of 1860, at New Brunswick. At this gathering, he said, General Stockton addressed 10,000 people.

PLAINFIELD KENNEL CLUB PLANNING BENCH SHOW

The Plainfield Kennel Club is actively engaged in making preparations for its annual bench show to be held here in June. The club now numbers about 150 members and it is hoped that one hundred more may be added by the time the show is held. Since the first bench show held last summer there has been an increasing interest among dog fanciers in this vicinity. The new officers for the coming years are as follows:

President, Abraham G. Hooley; vice-president, John C. Haywood; secretary, Charles E. Faber; treasurer, Edward F. Feickert; honorary vice-presidents, William J. Buttfield, Edwin S. Hooley and Robert A. Fairbairn; board of governors, Abraham G. Hooley, John C. Haywood, Charles E. Faber, Edward F. Feickert and A. Clinton Wilmerding.

These committees have been appointed by the president:

Bench show committee—Abraham G. Hooley, Charles E. Faber, Edward F. Feickert, Edmund Rushmore, A. Clinton Wilmerding, Dr. Edward H. Berendsohn and Frank W. Thompson; auditing committee—E. E. Bigoney, Howard W. Beebe and Henry E. Butler.

MEAT BOYCOTT CONTINUES; DECREASED SALES HERE

Local butchers report a big falling off in the sales of meat during the past two weeks. According to one prominent merchant his sales in that time has decreased between 33 and 50 per cent., the biggest slump being noticeable during the present week.

All of the markets report a shrinkage in sales. Interviews with about half a dozen of downtown dealers indicate that sales have decreased one-third on an average. This is evident that hundreds of Plainfielders are determined to go without meat diet until the prices take a drop.

While the sale of meat has been on the decline, the sales of fish have correspondingly increased. Grocers also report larger sales in canned goods than ever before which all goes to show that the populace would fare well in case of a meat famine.

In Essex county the boycott is on in earnest. Last night the members of the Essex Trades Council at their meeting in Newark voted to abstain from eating meat as much as possible until such time as the prices again reach reasonable figures.

The same conditions apply to Elizabeth in which city the butchers report a big falling off in sales.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS TO HONOR JEFFERSON

Ray E. Mayham, of Rahway, president of the Federation of Democratic Clubs of New Jersey, has sent an appeal to all the clubs affiliated with his organization to arrange for the celebration of Thomas Jefferson's birthday, which falls on Wednesday, April 13. The federation promises to provide speakers for such clubs as arrange to celebrate Jefferson's birthday.

Another sign of activity among the New Jersey Democrats comes in the announcement of Job H. Lippincott, chairman of the Democratic State Auxiliary Committee, that a conference of Democrats will be called for an early date in February to devise ways and means for a thorough organization of the State, with a view to party success in the approaching Gubernatorial campaign. The first conference of this kind was held in Trenton December 11 last. One of the principal purposes of this meeting will be to adopt a declaration of principles intended to represent Democratic ideas with relation to the State government.

Mr. Lippincott has sent a copy of the tentative Democratic platform, which was presented to the Trenton conference, to all those who attended that meeting. He requests that any amendments to the text of the proposed declaration be forwarded to the auxiliary committee headquarters, 772 Broad street, Newark, so that they may be assembled and presented to the forthcoming conference in systematic form.

In the Trenton conference the paragraph in the proposed platform which favored the direct election of United States Senators by popular vote stirred up a vigorous discussion, with considerable sentiment expressed against the idea.

ROME AS A HEALTH RESORT.

Two important factors are almost always lost sight of in looking at Rome from a hygenic and climatic point of view, writes the Roman correspondent of The Medical Record. These are the sea and the mountains. Rome is really a seaport, although the Tiber is not freely navigable to all vessels. The distance to the mouth of the river is a short fifteen miles, while an air line from the city to the sea reduces the distance greatly.

About the same distance on the other sides are the Sabine Hills, Mt. Socrate, the Alban Hills and farther north the spurs of the Apennines, the city itself being about 200 feet above sea level. There is not a better watered city in the world and few as well watered, with its excellent drinking water and copious fountains in every piazza or open space. Nor is there a city that affords purer air, as might be expected from the topographical situation.

The winter climate is cold enough to make indoor fires comfortable, and we always have a stretch of about six weeks of unbroken cloudless weather in December and January—just crisp enough to be invigorating. The temperature of the summer months averages about 85 degrees. For bronchial affections in all their forms and neurasthenia a winter in Rome is usually very beneficial, and you can be assured of being cooler all through the summer than in either New York or Boston.

The municipality evidently favors open air, whether for prophylaxis or treatment, and, realizing how many cases of incipient phthisis or those predisposed to it may be thus cured or benefitted, has established hospices in the hills for the climatic treatment and recreation of children during the summer months. These hospices are entirely gratuitous, the only requisites for admission being that the child must be between seven and twelve years of age and must have an attestation of poverty and a physician's certificate of vaccination.

Roman fever, so called, no longer exists. It was really a malarial fever with every now and then a malignant case. Since the Campagna has been drained and cultivated and old portions of the city where fevers of this nature were of more frequent occurrence have been demolished and new buildings with modern improvements put up, no one ever hears of Roman fever.

Lenten Bible Talks.

Miss Charlotte Adams, a Bible teacher in the National Training School, of the Y. W. C. A., will give a course of Lenten Bible talks Monday afternoons in March at 4 o'clock at the local Y. W. C. A. Miss Adams spoke at the Bible study rally held here two weeks ago and her engagement here is the result of that visit.

New Domestic Science Teacher.

The domestic science class at the Y. W. C. A. is now in charge of Miss Helen Clark, of Brooklyn, a graduate of Pratt Institute, who takes Miss Mary Farrell's place. The latter gave up her position on account of illness.

Dr. Randolph Will Preach.

Rev. Dr. D. B. F. Randolph, of Sandford avenue, district superintendent of the Elizabeth district, Newark Conference, will preach at Grace M. E. church tomorrow night.

BASKETBALL.

Owing to the cancellation by the Fort Slocum basketball team the Y. M. C. A. five will play its annual game with the "second" team at the Y. M. C. A. tonight.

Only two of the three scheduled games in the Sunday School Athletic Basketball League were played last night. The Hope Chapel-Congregational contest was postponed because neither of the teams had a sufficient quota of men to play. The other two contests resulted as follows: First Baptist, 40; Grace P. E., 18; Scotch Plains, 34; Trinity, 32.

E. R. Honeyman, of the New Madison, is recovering from a severe attack of indigestion which has detained him at home.
